PREFACE

THIS book owes its existence to the Boden Professor of Sanskrit, Dr. A. A. Macdonell, who suggested to me the writing of it, and who secured its acceptance for publication by the Delegates of the Clarendon Press. Professor Macdonell was also so good as to read the proofs of the first three sheets before he left England in 1907 for his tour in India, and for this and all the other help he has given me in the course of my Sanskrit studies I desire to express my most sincere thanks.

The editing of the text has been rendered possible for me by the liberality of the India Office and of the Royal Asiatic Society, which lent to me the manuscripts on which the text is based. To the Secretary of the Society, Miss Hughes, and to the Librarian of the India Office, Mr. F. W. Thomas, I owe grateful acknowledgements of the assistance afforded me in this and other ways.

I have tried by the translation and commentary to extract as much as possible from the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, as I recognize that a text of this class should as far as practicable be made by its editor to yield all that can be derived from it for the knowledge of the period when it was produced. With this end in view I have added a series of Indexes which contain in great fullness the lexical material of the work, while the material will also serve for grammatical purposes, as in each case the precise form which occurs is specified. I need make no apology for the distinction made between the Mantra, the Āraṇyaka, and Sūtra forms; not to distinguish the different strata of the text would be merely misleading.

In the commentary I have tried to avoid repeating what can easily be found in such standard works as the St. Petersburg Dictionaries, Colonel Jacob's Concordance to the Upaniṣads, and Deussen's treatise on the Philosophy of the Upanishads. Nor have I thought it worth while to note in detail the verbal coincidences between the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and the Āraṇyaka. As might be expected they are constant and show unmistakeably the connexion of the two works. Some other points arising out of the book I hope to deal with elsewhere.

I had not originally any intention of including in the book the text of a portion of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka which now forms the appendix. I hoped that Dr. Friedländer would complete his projected edition of that text, and it was only after a considerable portion of the book was in type that I learned that there was little or no prospect of the appearance of an edition at any early date. I then obtained the permission of the Delegates to print so much of the text of the Śāṅkhāyana as was unpublished, and the Royal Asiatic Society were so good as to include a translation of the whole Āraṇyaka in their series of Oriental Translations, and to publish an article of mine on the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka in the Journal of the Society for 1908. The translation and the article will be found to supplement in some important points the information as to the Śāṅkhāyana contained in this book.

The printing of the work has occupied over two years, and has entailed a good deal of trouble on all those concerned with it. I desire to express my thanks to Mr. R. W. Chapman, of the Clarendon Press, for the interest which he has taken in it and for valuable suggestions which he has made from time to time on points of form. It gives me also much pleasure to acknowledge the great pains taken by the Oriental Reader of the Clarendon Press, Mr. J. C. Pembrey, Hon. M.A. of Oxford, in dealing with the proofs. For such errors as remain I must accept responsibility. This is the fourth book of mine which has had the advantage of Mr. Pembrey's care and skill, and I feel that it would be difficult to exaggerate the value of his assistance.

A. BERRIEDALE KEITH.

THE AITAREYA ĀRANYAKA

INTRODUCTION

I. The Text.

WHEN, in June, 1905, I commenced preparations for the production of an edition of the Aitareya Āranyaka, I was mainly influenced by the expectation, raised in part by the reference in Prof. Bühler's Report¹ on his Kashmir journey to differences in the text in a birch-bark MS., that it might be possible to amend considerably the text of Rājendralāla Mitra's edition. Rājendralāla used only two complete MSS. of the text, and three of Sāyaṇa's commentary, besides three other MSS. of parts of the text or commentary, and it seemed reasonable to suppose that the employment of additional MS. material would add to the correctness of the text. This expectation has not been justified. The use of additional MSS. enables me to correct a good many slips and one or two serious omissions in Rājendralāla's text, but it establishes the fact that the tradition as to the text seems unbroken. Variant readings occur here and there, but none of sufficient importance to justify the idea that any different recensions of the text ever existed, and it is hardly ever possible to feel serious doubt as to the correct reading. What is especially important is that MSS. from both the extreme north—as Bühler's MS. from Kashmir—and the south agree in presenting the same text. Further, the commentary of Sāyaṇa presents the same text as the commentaries of Śaṅkara on Books II and III, and of Ānandatīrtha and Viśveśvara on the same books.

The MS. Material.

The MSS. which directly or indirectly have been used for this edition are as follows :—

1. A. This MS. is dated saṃvat 1854 (= A. D. 1797), and contains the text of the Āranyaka complete. It belonged to Colebrooke, who annotated it, and used it when writing his Essays. The substance of his note on the authorship, Essays, I, 46, occurs on fol. 60^v of the MS. The MS. is No. 78 in Eggeling's Catalogue of the Sanskrit MSS. in the Library of the India Office, Part I. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.

2. B. This MS. is on birch-bark and in Śāradā characters. It contains the R̥gveda Saṃhitā, the Khilakāṇḍa, and on ff. 188^v-191, the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, Book III, only. It was discovered by Prof. Bühler, and the information it offers regarding the Khilas is discussed by Prof. Macdonell, Byhaddevatā, I, xxxi. See also Max Müller, S.B.E., I, lxxviii, lxxix, who used it in preparing his translation of the Upaniṣad, and Dr. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des R̥gveda, pp. 32 sq., 167, 168. It probably dates about A. D. 1575.¹

The variants of this MS. have been referred to as important, both by Bühler and Dr. Scheftelowitz. This view appears to me erroneous. Whatever may be the value of the MS. for the criticism of the text of the R̥gveda,² it contributes, in my opinion, not a single correction to the text of Āraṇyaka III. It contains many errors, e.g. prajaya, prajayaḥ for prajayā; saṃhitāya for saṃhitāyā; sandhīny for sandhīn; ābhyāsam for abhyāsam, &c. Most of its variants can be proved incorrect from the context. In III, 1, 4, cen is omitted in the first clause, but in the second cen occurs and it is most improbable that the word should be omitted in the first of two precisely parallel clauses. Then also chaknuvantam is read without the negative, which reduces the passage to nonsense. In III, 1, 5, pūrva is omitted before rūpam, but the context urgently requires its presence; the words putra āha are also omitted, but leave madhyamaḥ unintelligible, and ekikurvan for anekikurvan is contradicted by the next clause. In III, 1, 6, a whole clause is omitted because it begins and ends with the same words as the preceding clause; taṃ is omitted in a R̥gvedic quotation, while by diplography sa saisāditiḥ stands for saisāditiḥ. In III, 2, 1, an unnecessary iti is inserted before etat proktam, presumably because an iti is expected with the form proktam, and the whole phrase trayaṃ tv eva na ity etat proktam is repeated in III, 2, 2, where it is not in place. In III, 2, 1, it is required because it contradicts a view of Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya that there was a fourth class. In III, 2, 2, the threefold division is accepted. The same tendency to diplography is seen in the double ohar in the same section. In III, 2, 3, the obvious brāhmaṇam appears for brahmāṇam, but just before we have brahmā rasaḥ. In the list in III, 2, 2, manomayaḥ is wanting, but it appears in the precisely similar list in III, 2, 3. Another omission is seen in nasyānūkte, III, 2, 4, for na tasyānūkte, and 'mato has fallen out between 'gato and 'nato. The defective āskandati is balanced by jīvaviṣyati.

Other alterations are inferior in sense. In III, 2, 4, vāsarīram for vāśirasam after jihmaśirasam postulates the possibility of perceiving a disembodied spirit, which is difficult; candramā evādityo, ibid., is inferior to ivādityo; apagirati is required rather than avagirati, &c.

The only passage in which B offers at first sight a better text is III, 2, 6: Prajāpatiḥ prajāḥ sṛṣṭvā vyasraṃsad ā saṃvatsaram, where it may be suggested to take ā saṃvatsaram as = over a year. This is not quite impossible, but it is not likely, and then the proper form is undoubtedly the middle, cf. visraṃsata, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 27, &c. Further, it is very difficult to see how the standard text could ever have been altered from this reading. But palaeographically the corruption found here is quite easy. d and t are not very different in Śāradā MSS., and t actually appears for dh in III, 2, 3, anuvitān for anuvīdham, a much less easy mistake. Then a and ā are often interchanged, as in anuvitān just cited, and in ānyāni, III, 2, 3, for anyāni; anusamhitām, III, 2, 6, for anusamhitam. saṃvatsaram may have followed when a became ā, or have been an independent attempt at an easier reading.

Other errors are the interchange of a and i, °saṃhitah, III, 1, 1, for °saṃhataḥ; baṣṭrakāṇi, III, 2, 4, for baṣṭarakāṇi; of a and e, the characteristic stroke for the latter being omitted, agnar and rātrisūktana, III, 2, 4. r is treated like ri and so written in rite, III, 2, 2; so in the Khilas, V, 3, vajrin ṛṇjase is written for vajrīnu; cf. Scheftelowitz, p. 175. i and ī are also confused.

In some points the MS. is accurate. Before gutturals and labials the appropriate sign for h is used. For h ś or h s, śś or ss always occur, and anusvāra is practically never misused. After r and m duplication of consonants is regular, and for d ha is always written d dha.

But on the whole, I consider the MS., though in many ways valuable, yet to contain many corruptions due in part to the errors inevitable in transcription and copying of Śāradā MSS. and in part to attempted correction of the text. The result of the comparison with the text of the Āraṇyaka and with the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka leads me to look with doubt on the readings of the MS. where they differ from other sources.

3. C. This MS. was written in śake 1585 (= A. D. 1663), śobha āṣāḍhavadi 7 bhṛgau by Śāradānandavaṃśodbhava Mahādeva. The first sixteen leaves, however, are in a different hand and originally formed part of another MS. They contain part of Book II, while the rest of the MS. contains part of Book III (ff. 17-103) and the last Khaṇḍa of the third Adhyāya of Book V, in each case with Sāyaṇa's commentary. See Eggeling, No. 83. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.

4. D. This MS. is one of the Whish collection in the Library of the Royal Asiatic Society. It is on palm-leaves and in Grantha characters, legible and not very incorrect. See Thomas in Winternitz, Catalogue of South Indian Sanskrit Manuscripts, No. 191. It contains the Āraṇyaka complete. Its probable date is A. D. 1700.

5. E. This MS. was presented by Dr. Burnell to the India Office. It is fairly well written in Grantha characters on palm-leaves. It is No. 84 of Dr. Burnell's collection, see Catalogue of a Collection of Sanskrit Manuscripts, Part I, Vedic Manuscripts. It contains the Āraṇyaka complete. It probably dates from the eighteenth century.

6. F. This MS. belonged to Colonel Claud Martin, and like G appears to have been presented to the India Office by Colebrooke. It forms part of a corpus, consisting of the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, Pūrvaṣaṭka (ff. 1-20), Uttaraṣaṭka (ff. 1-11), Gṛhya Sūtra (ff. 1-17), Sarvānukramaṇī (ff. 17^v-24), and Āraṇyaka (ff. 25-35). It contains the Āraṇyaka complete. See Eggeling, No. 80. Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the eighteenth century.

7. G. Like F this MS. belonged to Col. Claud Martin, and was presented to the India Office by Colebrooke. It also contains a corpus, consisting of Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, Pūrvaṣaṭka (ff. 1-64), Uttaraṣaṭka (ff. 1-40), Gṛhya Sūtra (ff. 1-26), Sarvānukramaṇī (ff. 1-28), and Āraṇyaka (ff. 1-45), complete. See Eggeling, No. 79. Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the eighteenth century. This MS. is closely connected with F.

8. H. This MS. contains the commentary of Viśveśvaratīrtha on a commentary by Ānandatīrtha on Books II and III of the Āraṇyaka. The text is not cited in full, but the commentary shows that it was identical with the text of Sāyaṇa. See Eggeling, No. 84. Written on paper in Devanāgarī in the seventeenth century.

9. I. This MS. contains Sāyaṇa's commentary on Book II, 4-7. It is dated śake 1685 (= A. D. 1763). See Eggeling, No. 88. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. It formerly belonged to Colebrooke. Very inaccurate.

10. J. This symbol denotes two copies of Śaṅkara's commentary on Book II, 4-6, dated śake 1665 (= A. D. 1743) and saṃvat 1848 (= A. D. 1791). See Eggeling, Nos. 85 and 86. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. Only pratikas are cited, but the commentary shows the usual text. They formerly belonged to Colebrooke.

11. K. This MS. contains the Āraṇyaka complete. It was written by Devagovinda Rāya at Benares in saṃ 1827, śake 1692 (= A. D. 1770), and was presented by Colebrooke to the India Office. See Eggeling, No. 81. Written on paper in Devanāgarī.

12. L. This MS. contains the Āraṇyaka complete. It was written in śake 1684, saṃvat 1819 (= A. D. 1762). See Eggeling, No. 82. Written on paper in Devanāgarī. This MS. is closely connected with K.

13. M. This MS. contains the text of the Upaniṣad together with Śaṅkara's commentary and Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary. Ānandatīrtha here is styled Abhinavanārāyaṇendra as in several other MSS. This is one of the MSS. in the Bodleian, and is described in Winternitz and Keith's Catalogue of the Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, No. 977. Written on paper in Devanāgarī in A. D. 1819.

14. N. This MS. has the same contents as M, and Ānandatīrtha is here also styled Abhinavanārāyaṇendra. It is one of the Wilson collection in the Bodleian; see the Catalogue, No. 1010 (5). Written on paper in Devanāgarī about A. D. 1801.

15. O. This MS. contains, like H, Viśveśvaratīrtha's commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on Books II and III of the Āraṇyaka. It is one of the Wilson MSS. in the Bodleian, see the Catalogue, No. 1011 (3). Written on paper in Devanāgarī about the end of the sixteenth century.

16. P. This MS. contains Śaṅkara's commentary on Book II of the Āraṇyaka, but is imperfect, extending only to Adhyāyas 1-3 and a small part of 4. It is one of the Mill collection in the Bodleian and is described in the Catalogue, No. 1014 (1). Written on paper in Devanāgarī in the eighteenth century.

17. Q. This MS. contains the Upaniṣad with Śaṅkara's commentary and Ānandatīrtha's (called Abhinavanārāyaṇendra) super-commentary.

See Eggeling, No. 87. Written on paper in Devanāgarī in saṃvat 1853 (= A. D. 1796).

18-25. R¹⁻⁸ are the MSS. used by Rājendralāla Mitra for his edition, Aitareya Āraṇyaka with the Commentary of Sāyaṇa Ācārya, Bibl. Ind., Nos. 325, 329, 335, 337, and 345, Calcutta, 1875-1876. Their description is (Intro., pp. 20, 21) as follows:—

Ka (= R¹), lent by Paṇḍit Vāmana, of the Benares Sanskrit College, dated saṃvat 1816 (= A. D. 1759), virodhisamvatsare kārṭtikaśukla-saptamyām Viśveśvararājadhānyām. It contained the commentary of Sāyaṇa on the whole Āraṇyaka.

Kha (= R²), from the Sanskrit College at Calcutta, containing Sāyaṇa's commentary on Books I and II. Apparently old.

Ga (= R³), from Dr. G. Bühler, of Bombay, dated śrāvaṇavadi 30 śanivāre śāke 1788 (= A. D. 1866) kṣayanāmasamvatsare, containing the commentary complete.

Gha (= R⁴), copied for Rājendralāla under the superintendence of Bābu Amṛtalāla of Benares and collated with two different codices, the codex copied being dated saṃvat 1828 (= A. D. 1771) śrāvaṇavadi 3. It contained the commentary complete.

Ka (= R⁵), copied for Rājendralāla under Amṛtalāla's superintendence and collated with a MS. dated saṃvat 1775 (= A. D. 1718) kilakanāma-samvatsare dakṣiṇāyane varṣā ṛtau bhūdrapade māsi kṛṣṇapakṣe bhrguvāsare taddine pustakam samāp'ant. It contained the text complete.

Kha (= R⁶), copied for Dr. Burnell, of Mangalore, and lent to Rājendralāla. The original belonged to a paṇḍit in Tanjore. It contained the text complete. Cf. E.

Ga (= R⁷), from the Library of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, containing Book II only of the text, written in the śāka year named Vyaya by Nārāyaṇa, of Candrapūra, for his master Śivarāma.

Gha (= R⁸), from the Library of the Sanskrit College, Calcutta, containing Book IV, with Sāyaṇa's commentary.

Of these ka and kha (presumably R⁵ and R⁶) are said to belong to the same class. But it is clear that Rājendralāla merely compiled an eclectic text from the various MSS., and that he did not contemplate a critical text. R denotes the reading of the edition when it appears to rest on all the MSS. available.

26-34. S¹⁻⁹ are the MSS. used in the edition in the Ānandāśrama series, 1898, No. 38, with Sāyaṇa's commentary by Bābāśāstrī Phadake. They are as follows:—

Ga (= S³) and Gha (= S⁴), containing text and commentary complete, from the Ānandāśrama library.

Na (= S⁵), containing text and commentary of Books II-IV, belonging to Bhāūsāheba Bālāsāheba Kibe, of Indūrapura.

Fha (= S⁹), containing text only, belonging to Śaṅkararāva Bhāgavata, of Thāṇe.

There is no doubt that some care has been taken in giving the variant readings which are practically confined to the commentary. Where the MSS. appear to agree, S is used to denote the reading of the edition. The text of the Āraṇyaka in this edition contains some errors and omissions, but is superior to that of Rājendralāla.

35. T. This is the version found in the collection of 108 Upaniṣads published in Telugu character at Madras in 1883. It contains no important variants, and seems conclusively to prove that the South had no separate recension. See Deussen, Sechzig Upanishad's des Veda, p. 534. In view of Śaṅkara's influence in Southern India, this was only to be expected.

36. U. This symbol is used to denote the text of the Upaniṣad with Śaṅkara's commentary, Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary, and with Vidyāraṇya's (Sāyaṇa's) Dīpikā, published in the Ānandāśrama series, 1889, No. 11. For this edition were used five MSS. (ka, kha, ga, gha, na) of the text, commentary, and super-commentary; six MSS. (ca, cha, ja, jha, tha, ḍa) of the commentary, two MSS. (ka, kha) of the text alone, and four MSS. (ka, kha, ga, gha) of the Dīpikā, besides two editions (na, ḥa). The variants are, however, almost confined to the commentary.

37. W. This MS. contains Sāyaṇa's commentary on Book I of the Āraṇyaka. It is on palm-leaves and in Malayālam characters, and is very inaccurate. It is one of the Whish MSS. in the Library of the Royal Asiatic Society. See Winternitz, No. 1 (b), who assigns it to the eighteenth or nineteenth century.

38. X. This MS. contains Śaṅkara's commentary on Books II and III of the Āraṇyaka. It is written on palm-leaves in Malayālam characters. The MS. is much damaged. It is No. 158 in Winternitz's Catalogue, and may be assigned to the seventeenth century.

Of these MSS. I have collated all save R¹⁻⁸, S¹⁻⁹, and those used in U. There are many other MSS. and editions of the Upaniṣad in existence and several MSS. of the Āraṇyaka (see Aufrecht, Catalogus Catalogorum, s. vv.), but there is no reason to suppose that any of them would add anything new to the text. Max Müller used (cf. S.B.E., I, xcvi) a MS. of the text with Śaṅkara and Ānandatīrtha's commentaries, and also a commentary by Śaṅkara¹ on Book III, Adhyāya 1, but he states that the MSS. he used gave little aid. It appears from Weber's Catalogue that the Berlin MSS. have no independent value.

The MSS. used are on the whole decidedly inferior. They are modern copies and contain many clerical errors. No useful purpose would be served by recording all the blunders of the scribes. I have therefore printed only those which seemed of more importance, either textually or palaeographically, save in the case of B, in view of the special—if somewhat artificial—interest of that MS.

In Rājendralāla's edition, and in Max Müller's translation of the first three books of the Āraṇyaka (S.B.E., I), the text, besides the division into Adhyāyas and Khaṇḍas shown in all the MSS., is divided into short sections which are numbered. These numbers seem to be attributable to Rājendralāla himself, as there is no trace of them in any of the MSS. I have used or in the Ānandāśrama edition. The divisions follow the treatment by Sāyaṇa of the text in his commentary, but they cannot be said to be always satisfactory, consistent, or convenient, and I have not felt bound to adopt them. None of the MSS. show any satisfactory or consistent punctuation—such a punctuation being practically unknown in Sanskrit MSS. of prose works—and I have therefore adopted what seemed to me the most convenient punctuation.

In the Upaniṣad (II, 4-6), within the Khaṇḍas there is a division into sections in accordance with Śaṅkara's commentary which differs greatly from that of Sāyaṇa, and which has been adopted in the editions of the Upaniṣad. This enumeration might have been retained for convenience of reference, but for the sake of consistency I have preferred to omit it.

With regard to the text of Sāyaṇa's commentary it may be observed that neither Rājendralāla nor the Ānandāśrama edition gives a very correct version. It is clear that Rājendralāla freely corrected his MSS., and that even the numerous variants given in the Ānandāśrama do not exhaust the variations of reading. Curiously enough the editors of the latter cannot have consulted the former. For example the commentary on madhumati in V, 2, 2, reads: saraso (cāsau is suggested as a correction) madhvādimādhuryarasopetatvān madhumān. Rājendralāla has: sa ca somājyādimādhuryarasopetatvān madhumān, which, as the noun is (upa) prakṣe glossed as yāgapradakṣe, is neat and convincing. Or again V, 2, 1, where Rājendralāla has the obvious śavaḥ vairiṇām balam, while the Ānandāśrama has [vairi] nām [śavo?] balam, while just after im ativyathir is rendered according to Rājendralāla enam śatrum atisayena calitavān, and according to the Ānandāśrama imaṃ sattum &c. One MS., S³, has santum, and of course there is no easier mistake in MSS. than that of tr, tt, and nt, while interchange of sibilants is constant. Or again in the quotations at the end of V, 1, 5, both editions present bad texts, but Rājendralāla has etac carma while the Ānandāśrama has etac ca karma, which in view of the context is absurd. Many other instances could be quoted, and undoubtedly either in many places Rājendralāla's MSS. were superior or his critical judgement was better, probably the former. Further, there are repeated,—sometimes very serious, e. g. I, 5, 2,—omissions in the Ānandāśrama text, and in places, e. g. I, 5, 1, the text has been badly confused.

On the other hand, there are many instances where the Ānandāśrama text is superior to that of Rājendralāla. For example the note in the latter edition on II, 3, 4, p. 226, line 3 from foot, *dhyānaṣṭakam*¹ anenaikapakṣaḥ is meaningless, but a perfectly good sense is given by the Ānandāśrama reading (see note on p. 135) Dhānamjāyām.

The comparison of the two editions would give a satisfactory text in all respects save in quotations from unknown works. In these Rājendralāla is usually superior to the Ānandāśrama, but neither is very accurate, and further MS. authority would be requisite.

From a comparison of the recorded readings the MSS. of the commentary appear to be divisible into the following classes. (1) R¹, and R³, with which may be classed C, and so far as it goes I; (2) S¹, S², S⁴, S⁵, which approach closely to class (1),—in this class S¹ and S², and S⁴ and S⁵ are closely related; (3) S³ which falls into a distinct class of its own; (4) R² and R⁴ which again form a distinct class, and (5) W.

The MS. material available would not suffice to form a text either of Śaṅkara's commentary on the Āraṇyakas II and III, or of Viśveśvara's super-commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on those Āraṇyakas, the more so in the latter case that no MSS. of the commentary itself have yet come to light.

In the edition of Rājendralāla and in the MSS. A and E only are accents used. These accents are clearly confined to those verses not occurring in the Ṛgveda Saṃhitā which are quoted in full in the Āraṇyaka V. Unfortunately in the edition the accents are often obviously incorrect, one word having two accents, or a series of words being incorrectly accented so as to show that an error in printing must have taken place. The MSS. also, as often, are carelessly and inaccurately accented, and it is therefore not possible to lay stress on the accentuation of any rare words, especially compounds. The matter is of little consequence, however, as the total number of accented words is small, and nearly all, save a few compound words, are recorded in well-accented texts.

It may here be mentioned that I have, wherever necessary, restored correct spellings, e.g. patraṇi, not patram, and have, in accordance with the normal practice of the MSS.,¹ omitted visarga before a sibilant followed by a hard consonant. In the case of ch I have never inserted the c,² but in deference to the ordinary practice I have always written tad dhi, not tad hi, and, of course, uddhṛtya for ud-hṛtya. On the other band, duplication after r has been omitted, though it is usual in all the MSS., while the avagraha is inserted wherever it is properly required despite its omission in the MSS. The nasal in Pluti is represented by the ardhaçandra mark. In R the ordinary anusvāra is used as is done in the MSS., but not in S.

II. The Commentaries.

The commentaries on the Āraṇyaka which I have used are the following :—

1. Śaṅkara's commentary on the Upaniṣad (II, 4-6). Śaṅkara's date has now, through the evidence of the Āryavidyāsudhākara and Paṭhak's researches (Journal Bombay Branch Royal Asiatic Society, XVIII, 88, 218 sq.), been definitely fixed from A. D. 788 to the middle of the ninth century. The date A. D. 820, formerly assigned to his death, must refer to the commencement of his labours. This commentary has been repeatedly printed, best in the Ānandāśrama series, Poona, 1889.

2. Śaṅkara's commentary on Book II, the first part of the Mahaitareyopaniṣad. This is only available in the MSS. P and X, neither of which presents an accurate text. In the Adhyāyas 4-6, it is, of course, identical with (1). Fortunately the analogy of Sāyaṇa's commentary on Adhyāyas 4-6 and comparison of the two commentaries on Adhyāyas 1-3 establish the fact that Sāyaṇa followed Śaṅkara with considerable fidelity.

3. Śaṅkara's commentary on Book III, the Saṃhitopaniṣad. This is only available in the MS. X, but is followed by Sāyaṇa.

4. Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on Śaṅkara's commentary on the Upaniṣad. Ānandatīrtha is said to have died in A. D. 1198, and to have been a pontiff of the Mādhva sect (Bhandarkar, Report on the Search for Sanskrit Manuscripts, 1882, 1883, pp. 18, 103). The date has recently been questioned by Harikṛṣṇa Śāstrin (Epigr. Ind., VI, 261), who prefers to date him from A. D. 1238-1317, on epigraphic evidence of considerable weight. This commentary has frequently been printed, best in the Ānandāśrama series. As has been mentioned above, in several MSS. the commentary is attributed to Abhinavanārāyaṇendra, who in one of the MSS. in the Bodleian Library (Catalogue, No. 977) is thus described : iti śrīmatkaivalyenaṇḍrasarasvatīpūjyapādaśiṣyaśrīmatjñāneṇḍrasarasvatīpūjyapādaśiṣyaśrīmadabhinavanārāyaṇeṇḍrasarasvatīviracitāyām Āitareyabhāṣyaṭīkāyām ! There can be little doubt but that we must assume Ānandatīrtha's real name to have been Abhinavanārāyaṇendra Sarasvatī, especially as he is indifferently called Ānandatīrtha, Ānandagiri, or Ānandajñāna, the name he probably took as pontiff.¹ Cf. also No. 1010 (3) in the Catalogue, where he is called Nārāyaṇendra Sarasvatī.

5. Viśveśvaratīrtha's super-commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on Books II and III. This is only available in the MSS. H and O, and no MSS. of the commentary itself appear to be extant. Ānandatīrtha, who is called bhagavatpādācārya, must, I think, be identical with the Ānandatīrtha above mentioned, and must have written two different works in connexion with the Āraṇyaka, first the super-commentary on Śaṅkara's commentary, and second an independent commentary on the Āraṇyaka, in which he interprets it in a Vaiṣṇava sense. Max Müller (S. B. E., I, xcvi) appears to doubt this identity, but it must be remembered that Ānandatīrtha was a Mādhva and so not unlikely to be disposed to adopt a Vaiṣṇava interpretation, and that there is nothing rare in Indian literary history in finding an author ready to comment on both sides of a question. Compare the case of Vācaspatimiśra,² who wrote commentaries on the works of all the philosophical schools save one. Further the interpretation of Śaṅkara had always to contend against that of Rāmānuja,³ and it was by no means unnatural for a scholar like Ānandatīrtha to set forth both views, the Vaiṣṇava interpretation representing his own.

Viśveśvaratīrtha appears to have been the pupil of Ānandatīrtha, and to have written this work in the lifetime of his master, as is indicated by verse 3 of the introduction: Aitareyopaniṣado vyākurmo bhāṣyam uttamam | śrīmadāṇandatīrthāryān natvā tatprītikāmukāḥ || 3 || It is worth noting that Jayatīrtha, the successor of Ānandatīrtha, similarly wrote a super-commentary on Ānandatīrtha's commentary on the Praśna Upaniṣad, and that that commentary is distinct from Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on the commentary of Śaṅkara on that Upaniṣad.⁴ The same remark⁵ applies to Ānandatīrtha's commentary on the Iśāvāsya Upaniṣad and to his super-commentary on the commentary of Śaṅkara on that Upaniṣad. Viśveśvara was evidently closely connected with Ānandatīrtha, as a MS. of Ānandatīrtha's super-commentary on Śaṅkara's commentary on the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad of the seventeenth century is described by a later hand as Viśveśvarānandatīrthamaṭhasiham (Bendall, Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the British Museum, p. 15). Bendall, l.c., refers to a commentary by Viśveśvaratīrtha on the super-commentary of Ānandatīrtha on the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, but the evidence cited above leaves little doubt but that the commentary of Viśveśvaratīrtha is on an independent commentary by Ānandatīrtha and not on his super-commentary. The exact locality of this Maṭh is unknown, but Jayatīrtha, it may be noted, was a native of Maṅgalavedheṃ near Paṇḍharpur.

6. Sāyaṇa's commentary on the whole Āraṇyaka. Besides the edition of Rājendralāla Mitra and that in the Ānandāśrama series, I have used MSS. C, I, and W. There are many minor variants in the text, but there is no trace of any double recension. In the Ānandāśrama edition of the Upaniṣad the commentary is attributed to śrīmatpara-mahamṣaparivṛājākācāryavidyāraṇyamuni. This, as Klemm has shown in the Gurupūjākāumudī, is the title of Mādhava, the brother of Sāyaṇa, and not of Sāyaṇa. This attribution to Mādhava is an error; Sāyaṇa, in the preface, tells us distinctly that the work is his: tatkaṭākṣeṇa tadrūpaṃ dadhad Bukkamahīpatiḥ | ādiṣat Sāyaṇācāryaṃ vedārthasya prakāśane || 3 || In all probability it was genuinely composed by Sāyaṇa himself; it agrees with his Ṛgveda commentary in general, and was written after the commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. It was written probably under Bukka I, who was certainly reigning in A.D. 1354. That Sāyaṇa died in A.D. 1387 is probably an error, though that may be the year of Mādhava's death. His commentary throughout is dependent on that of Śaṅkara on Books II and III, as he admits in the introduction to Book II.

Śaṅkara, Ānandatīrtha in his super-commentary, and Sāyaṇa all interpret the Upaniṣads in II and III in the light of the Vedānta. On the other hand, Viśveśvara in the super-commentary follows Ānandatīrtha in giving a Vaiṣṇava interpretation. I have not followed either view. The Upaniṣads can only be satisfactorily explained by regarding them as what they are, early attempts at philosophy, and by refraining from reading later ideas into them. The interpretations given by the commentators have, however, a value as showing the development of philosophical ideas, and I have therefore whenever desirable referred to them. In several cases too they afford great assistance in the interpretation of the text.

It may here be mentioned¹ that most of Book II, that is, Adhyāyas 1-3, 4, and Adhyāyas 4-6, are translated by the author of the Persian translation which was made for Dārā Shukoh between A.D. 1656-1657, and retranslated into Latin in 1801, 1802, by Anquetil Duperron. This translation, besides being much less intelligible than the original, adds, as far as I can see, nothing substantial to our knowledge.

The commentary of Śaṅkara establishes for the ninth century the text of the second and third books of the Āraṇyaka as we now have them. Whether there were variants in his time we cannot determine with certainty, as his text has clearly alone formed the subject of study. The other commentators all depend to some degree on him. Ānandatīrtha, in his own work, uses him, and Sāyaṇa uses both him and Ānandatīrtha. The evidence for the time before Śaṅkara is wanting. The later Upaniṣads borrowed their doctrines and phrases from works which were more developed and displayed more literary pretensions than the Aitareya, while the secular literature makes no direct quotations. All we can say is that the Mokṣadharmas of the Mahābhārata and Bādarāyaṇa in his Brahma Sūtra (III, 3, 16, 17) probably used the Aitareya Upaniṣad,² but the next evidence is again Śaṅkara's commentary on those Sūtras.

Though strict proof beyond Śaṅkara cannot be attempted, there is no reason to doubt the integrity of the text of these books. They are not, in subject-matter, open to easy interpolation, and in all probability in their present form they fairly represent their original shape in the time of Śaunaka.

Nor is there any special reason to assume alteration in the verses which make up Book IV, for which there is considerable independent evidence.

For Books I and V we have no earlier authority than Sāyaṇa. But he appears to have had before him a fixed text, and the various readings which he gives are practically limited to the last chapter of V, 3, the contents of which certainly lay it open to interpolation: yet Sāyaṇa of course was not the first to write a commentary on the Āraṇyaka. He expressly refers, on V, 1, 1, to differences of interpretation, as to whether tivrasyābhivayasaḥ (RV., X, 160, 1) meant four verses or one only according to rule, and on V, 3, 3, he refers to differences both of reading and of opinion. We are therefore justified in regarding the text he gives as practically a textus receptus by the fourteenth century A.D.

Whether or not it is original cannot be answered with certainty. Amongst others, Hillebrandt (Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, pp. x-xv) considers that the text of the Sūtras is much altered from the original, but in the case of the Āraṇyaka I, or V, it would be difficult to prove this doctrine, inasmuch as the Āraṇyaka seldom presents the truly remarkable variety of rules and exceptions shown by the present text of Śāṅkhāyana. Further the text of the first book assists in checking the fifth book, and appears throughout to agree with it. Again in the former case, where the work is a true Āraṇyaka, the idea of later alteration is less probable than in a formless work like the fifth book, which is practically a Sūtra itself. Moreover, although a certain fluidity of text may be admitted in the Sūtras, the extent of such fluidity appears to be greatly exaggerated by Hillebrandt.

III. The divisions of the Āraṇyaka and their date.

There is some uncertainty as to the exact meaning of the word Āraṇyaka. Sāyaṇa gives two somewhat different interpretations of it. In the preface to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (Aufrecht's edition, p. iii) he describes it as Āraṇyavratarūpaṃ brāhmaṇam; in the preface to the Āraṇyaka itself he says: Aitareyabrāhmaṇe 'sti kāṇḍam Āraṇyakābhidham | aranya eva pāthyatvād āraṇyakam itiryate || 5 || and: sattra-prakaraṇe 'muktir aranyādhyayanāya hi | mahāvratasya tasyātra hautram karma vivicyate || 8 ||. The latter view is energetically supported by Oldenberg,¹ and is adopted by Macdonell.² The former has the support of Weber,³ and Deussen⁴ argues in favour of it on the ground that the aim of the Āraṇyakas was to supply a substitute for the sacrificial rites to be used by Vānaprasthas. This view, however, is rather far-fetched. The Āraṇyaka seems originally to have existed to give secret explanations of the ritual, and to have presupposed that the ritual was still in use and was known. No doubt the tendency was for the secret explanation to grow independent of the ritual until the stage is reached where the Āraṇyaka passes into the Upaniṣad, and contemporaneously the life of the Hindu is differentiated into the four Aśramas. But originally an Āraṇyaka must have merely meant a book of instruction to be given in the forest.

It is not now possible to decide exactly why the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa does not deal with the Mahāvratā rite. In Sāyaṇa's time it was already held that the author of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa was also the author of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, Books I-III,¹ and Śaṅkara may conceivably have held the same view, as he calls the Upaniṣad the Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa Upaniṣad.² It is, however, impossible to accept this version as correct. It is probable enough that Mahidāsa Aitareya is the editor or arranger of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as Aufrecht thought. It is true that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is not in all probability the work of one hand or period,³ but it must have been at some early date welded into one work, and tradition may fairly be considered to have given us the name of the man who did it. We know from Pāṇini, V, 1, 62, that in his day Brāhmaṇas of thirty and forty Adhyāyas existed, and Weber's⁴ conjecture that the reference is to the Śāṅkhāyana and Aitareya Brāhmaṇas is almost certainly correct. But though we can fairly ascribe to Mahidāsa the arrangement of the Brāhmaṇa, it would be incorrect to ascribe to him even the first three books of the Āraṇyaka, since in them he is cited as a teacher. He is named expressly in II, 1, 8 and 3, 7, and is clearly referred to in I, 1, 1. This must be taken as decisive⁵ against his authorship of these books of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, though it is clear that some of his views are expressed in them. We may perhaps suppose that Mahidāsa, besides editing the Brāhmaṇa, was a philosopher of some distinction, since otherwise his name would hardly have come down to us. Of his life we know nothing. Sāyaṇa tells us a legend of his being the son of

This, however, is less likely to be the case at so early a date as that of Mahidāsa, though later, it is not rare.

Itarā; Ānandatīrtha, in his original commentary, describes him as the son of Viśāla and an incarnation of Nārāyaṇa. Perhaps there is some truth in the reference to him in the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 16, 7, and the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, IV, 2, where he is said to have lived for 116 years; at any rate it shows that he was a famous sage and probably a real person.¹

The three books attributed to him can on internal evidence be divided into four parts. The first book consists of an explanation of the Mahāvratā from a ritualistic and allegorical point of view. It describes the different Śāstras of the morning, midday and evening libations of the Mahāvratā day of the Gavāmayana, a theme touched on in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 1-38, IV, 14, but indulges in further allegorical play of ideas. On the whole it bears a close resemblance in contents and style to the Brāhmaṇa, but it is doubtless more recent in date, or it would have been included in the Brāhmaṇa. Sāyaṇa in his introduction to Book V calls it an apauruṣeyaṁ brāhmaṇam, and Śaṅkara calls the Upaniṣad similarly Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa Upaniṣad.

The second book consists of two distinct parts. The first, comprising Adhyāyas 1-3, deals with the allegorical signification of the Uktha, that is the Niṣkevalya Śāstra, three sets of eighty verses, which was the midday Śāstra of the Mahāvratā, as being Prāṇa or Puruṣa. It is not directly connected with Book I, and it is doubtless later than it. The second part comprises Adhyāyas 4-6, and is the Upaniṣad par excellence. It is probably later than part one.

The third book treats of the mystic meaning of the various forms of the text of the Saṃhitā, the nirbhūja, pratṛuṇa and ubhayamantareṇa, and of the vowels, semivowels and consonants. It quotes Māṇḍūkeya and Śākalya among others, and makes use of the above terms to describe the saṃhitā, pada, and krama pāṭhas of the Saṃhitā. These are so far signs of late origin, but at the same time the treatment of the subject-matter is at a much earlier stage than that reached by Yāska or the authors of the Prātiśākhya. It will be seen later that its philosophical view is more advanced than that of the Upaniṣad proper, and it can probably be dated about the sixth cent. B.C. This result is important, as it gives us a lower date for the rest of the earlier books of the Upaniṣad.

¹ The references to Aitareya and Mahaitareya in Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 10, 3, and Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, 4, throw no light on him, and are probably late; cf. Hopkins, Great Epic of India, p. 390.

The fourth book consists solely of the Mahānāmni verses. The presence of these verses is explained by Sāyaṇa on the ground that they must be studied in the forest. Their use is set forth by Āśvalāyana in his Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 12, 10, where he says that on the fifth day of the six day Prṣṭhya rite after the Marutvatiya Śastra, when the Niṣkevalya Śastra is being performed, 'if the Udgātrṣ make the Śākvarasāman the Prṣṭha Stotra, then the nine verses called the Mahānāmni and certain purīṣa-padas, to fill up the lines, are to be used.' Tradition ascribes this Āraṇyaka to Āśvalāyana. Ṣaḍguruśiṣya, in his account of the works of Āśvalāyana, says¹: dvādaśādhyāyakam sūtram caṭuṣkam gr̥hyam eva ca caturthāraṇyakam ceti hy Āśvalāyanasūtrakam | This view, however, has been questioned in connexion with the authorship of the fifth book.

The fifth book consists mainly of a description in a Sūtra style of the Niṣkevalya Śastra, the great Śastra of the midday libation of the Mahāvṛata. It forms a sort of complement to Book I, which is the Brāhmaṇa as contrasted with the Sūtra. The natural conclusion is, therefore, that Āśvalāyana wrote Book V. The arguments² in favour of this view are: (1) Book IV contains merely a collection of Mahānāmni verses; it is not a Sūtra at all, and therefore Āśvalāyana cannot have been its author. The reply is perhaps that the verses may have been collected by Āśvalāyana and put into the Āraṇyaka in order that they might be available for being commented on in the Sūtra, and that it would therefore be natural to ascribe the Āraṇyaka to Āśvalāyana. It is a sort of Āśvalāyana Saṃhitā like the Śākala Saṃhitā. (2) It is argued³ that Sāyaṇa in the introduction to Āraṇyaka V, where he expressly ascribes that Āraṇyaka as contrasted with I to a Ṛṣi, uses the words: tasmād athaitasya⁴ samāmnāyasyetyādīdvādaśādhyāyan mahāvratasya pañcaviṃśatim ityādi pañcamāraṇyakam sūtram eva | This would no doubt be quite natural if Āśvalāyana were the author of the Āraṇyaka, but it is at least equally natural if Śaunaka was. (3) Colebrooke (Essays, I, 307) says, with reference to a Sūtra of the Pūrva

Mīmāṃsā: 'It is, however, acknowledged that a mistake may be made, and the work of a human author may be erroneously received as a part of the sacred book by those who are unacquainted with its true origin. An instance occurs among those who use the Bakvrich, a śākhā of the Rigveda, by whom a ritual of Āśvalāyana has been admitted, under the title of a fifth Āranyaka, as a part of the Rigveda.' Rājendralāla was unable to discover the source of this statement, and it seems probably to be a confusion of Āśvalāyana with Śaunaka; or it may rather confirm the view of Śaṅguruśiṣya, since IV could be confused with the Rgveda, but not V. (4) The MSS. F and G end, iti Āśvalāyanoktam Āranyakam samāptam ! This, however, is a matter of no moment, and probably does not even preserve a tradition of Āśvalāyana's authorship of Āranyaka IV. These two MSS., which are recent and inaccurate copies, and are probably ultimately derived from one original, contain collections of works attributed to Āśvalāyana, and there is nothing surprising in the fact that they attribute the authorship of the Āranyaka to him. (5) Much more important is the fact, which forms Oldenberg's second argument, that in his commentary on the Sāmaveda Sāyaṇa refers (I, p. 19) the authorship to Āśvalāyana. But against this solitary reference¹ must be set the facts noted below. (6) There is undoubtedly great similarity between the two works, Āranyaka V, and the Śrauta Sūtra. I think it certain that the author of the Āranyaka knew the Sūtra. For example, in V, 2, 2, esa brahmeti tisraḥ stands without explanation, but as Sāyaṇa points out the verses referred to are given in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6. Again in V, 3, 2, occurs uktaṃ vaśaṣkārānumantraṇam, which is not only a phrase used by Āśvalāyana himself, but is a clear reference to Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 5, 17.² Further the vocabulary and syntax of the works is identical; e.g. the use of na vā in Āranyaka, V, 3, 1, as often in the Sūtra, e.g. VI, 5, 22; or the phrase api nidarśanāyodāharīṣyāmaḥ, or the word ekapātīnyaḥ. These facts, however, which were not known to Oldenberg, merely prove that clearly some confusion between the Sūtra and Āranyaka, which discredits the evidence.

² Cf. also V, 1, 5, uktavīryāṇi is not explained, but is in the Sūtra.

Śaunaka knew and used Āśvalāyana's work, which indeed was only natural, since the Sūtra deals with the Agniṣṭoma, the prakṛti of the Mahāvratā. It will be seen that this agrees perfectly with the native tradition handed down by Ṣaḍguruśiṣya.

There is therefore no sound evidence to ascribe the fifth Āraṇyaka to Āśvalāyana, and Ṣaḍguruśiṣya's attribution to him of the fourth Āraṇyaka remains the most probable.¹ For Śaunaka's authorship of the fifth Āraṇyaka we have the distinct and repeated authority of Sāyaṇa. Colebrooke (Essays, I, 46) first pointed out that Āraṇyaka V, 2, 5, is cited by Sāyaṇa on the Ṛgveda, I, 8, 1, as Śaunaka's, and Max Müller (S.B.E., I, xciv) says that 'Sāyaṇa when quoting in his commentary on the Rig-veda from the last books,² constantly calls it a Sūtra of Saunaka.' Further, in his commentary on the Aitareya Āraṇyaka he repeatedly refers to Śaunaka as the author of the fifth book. E. g. on I, 4, 1, he says: ata eva pañcame Śaunakenodāhṛtāḥ | and again: tās ca pañcame Śaunakena śākhāntaram āśritya pathitāḥ | See also Sāyaṇa³ on I, 4, 2 (ter); 3 (bis); I, 5, 2 (quater); 3 (bis). These references beyond question show that to Sāyaṇa Śaunaka was the author of the fifth Āraṇyaka. There is no conceivable reason why this work should have been ascribed to him unless it was his. Similar as the book is in language to the Śrauta Sūtra, yet it is in style less compressed and more intelligible than that work. We have certain evidence that Śaunaka did compose similar works, for, in the introduction to his commentary on the Sarvānukramaṇī of Kātyāyana, Ṣaḍguruśiṣya expressly records that he composed a Śrauta Sūtra which he destroyed when his pupil Āśvalāyana had written his Sūtra. This tradition would explain the close knowledge of Āśvalāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, which, as we have seen above, the writer of this book undoubtedly possessed. No doubt it is possible that he may eventually have been credited with the authorship of one of the works of his pupil,

² Book must be meant. Āraṇyaka IV cannot be quoted.

³ It may be noted that the reference in the Sāmaveda commentary is probably not the work of Sāyaṇa. His pupils no doubt did much of his so-called work. Cf. the case of the Atharvaveda, Whitney, p. lxxviii. The fact that passages in the Sāmaveda commentary are identical with those in the Ṛgveda commentary is of course quite consistent with this view.

as has been shown to be the case by Professor Macdonell in the matter of the Bṛhaddevatā, but that is a mere possibility against which tradition is certainly strong. It is impossible to argue that in Śaṅguru-śiṣya's eyes the term caturthāranyakam covered the fifth book also, for the two are quite distinct and cannot ever have been combined into one book. Moreover it must be remembered that a Gṛhya Sūtra by Śaunaka is referred to by Śaṅguruśiṣya, and appears to have been known to Hemādri in the thirteenth century.¹ So there is nothing at all improbable in the ascription of the Āranyaka V to Śaunaka.

Now it is possible to throw some light on Śaunaka's date. The Bṛhaddevatā, which is attributed to him, but is certainly not his but the work of a pupil—probably not far removed in date—is posterior to Yāska and anterior to the Sarvānukramaṇī of Kātyāyana. Kātyāyana, who is in all probability the author of the Śrauta Sūtra and the Vājasaneyi Anukramaṇī, is most probably anterior to Pāṇini, since the Sarvānukramaṇī shows forms earlier than Pāṇini's grammar approves (see Macdonell, Sarvānukramaṇī, p. viii, Bṛhaddevatā, I, xxii, xxiii). The argument from the use of Vedic forms is no doubt not certain, but the balance of probability is in its favour, and it has been maintained by Bühler (S. B. E., II, xl, Z. D. M. G., XL, 527 sq.) and Winternitz (Hochzeitsrituell, pp. 13 sq.) against the objections of Böhtlingk (Z. D. M. G., XXXIX, 517, XLI, 669, XLIII, 598 sq.).² Thus it appears that Śaunaka³ must be considerably older than Pāṇini. On the other hand, we must not push him too far back, or else it would be difficult to explain how Śaunaka is not cited in Pāṇini. Further, B. Liebhich in his Pāṇini, ch. iii, has shown grounds for the belief that the Āśvalāyana and Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtras are in point of language closely connected in time with Pāṇini. It does not, therefore, seem necessary to allow more than 100–150 years between Pāṇini and Śaunaka, and the time may perhaps be shorter.

Pāṇini's date unfortunately is not yet certainly fixed. There lie between him and Patañjali not only the Vārttikas of Kātyāyana, but also emendations of those Vārttikas by the Bhāradvājīyas, Saunāgas, and others and perhaps a Śloka-vārttika, which certainly presupposes a considerable interval of time. Bhandarkar¹ has further adduced evidence of changes in the language and extension of geographical knowledge especially as regards the peoples and places of the south between Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, and Patañjali. Goldstücker² and Bhandarkar³ have adduced evidence to prove that Patañjali was a contemporary of Puṣyamitra (B.C. 178-142) and Menander (B.C. 144-120) and wrote his Mahābhāṣya in or about B.C. 144-142. This result is by no means certain, because even accepting as fixed Puṣyamitra and Menander's dates,⁴ still, in the first place the MSS. of the Mahābhāṣya do not all contain the passages in which the statements relied on occur, and in the second place it is always possible that the examples occurred in the Śloka-vārttika or in some other earlier source whence they were taken over bodily⁵ by Patañjali. It may even be argued that Patañjali is not earlier than the second century A.D. inasmuch as he seems to know the r vowel-sign, and according to Chinese tradition this vowel-sign was a discovery of Nāgārjuna's, and Nāgārjuna's date is possibly in the second century A.D. under Kaniṣka.⁶ The latter, however, is probably to be referred to the first century B.C., and it would be a mistake to lay much stress on this argument. The r vowel-sign may have existed in grammatical circles long ere Sanskrit inscriptions become usual. Further the Rājatarāṅgiṇī, I, 174, is an authority for the existence of the Mahābhāṣya in the reign of Abhimanyu of Kashmir, whose date is however now quite uncertain. But whatever be Patañjali's date, there seems little doubt that the examples which point to the time of Puṣyamitra and Menander must be genuine and that they prove the existence of some commentary on Pāṇini in the middle of the second century B.C. Kātyāyana is assigned by Hiuen Tsang to 300 years after the death of Buddha, which taking the Chinese reckoning of the Nirvāṇa gives the middle of the third century B. C. as his date. This evidence is not of great weight, but it is not improbably nearly correct.¹ Pāṇini cannot therefore be less than fifty years older than Kātyāyana and must at latest belong to about B. C. 300. The question arises whether this date cannot be put further back. The chief argument against doing so is the use of the word Yavanānī in Pāṇini, IV, 1, 49. Doubtless this means Greek (Ionian) writing, but it does not necessarily follow that the word dates from after the invasion of Alexander.² Indeed the probability seems to me against this being the case. For it is certainly remarkable that Ionian should be the name given to the Greeks if first made known to India through the invasion of Alexander, whose army was certainly in no conceivable sense Ionian.³ On the other hand, the Ionian name⁴ was evidently the great name in the ears of Persians, and of those subjects who were led into Greece on the expedition of Xerxes, and⁵ it must be remembered that the Gandharians were part of Dareios' empire and a contingent from Gandhāra, accompanied Xerxes on the Grecian expedition. If it is borne in mind that Pāṇini was a native of Gandhāra according to Hiuen Tsang, a view confirmed by the references in his grammar,⁶ it will not seem far fetched to consider that it was most probably from the older tradition that the name Yavanānī was derived. In this connexion reference may be made to the theory of Burnell⁷ that the word lipi which occurs in Pāṇini, III, 2, 21, is borrowed from the Achaemenidean dipi, meaning an edict, a view not at all improbable, and one which supports the view here maintained that it was through the Persian conquest of Gandhāra that the word Yavanānī became familiar to India. Goldstücker⁸ argued, indeed, that Yavanānī referred to Persian writing, but this view cannot be maintained. But Weber himself admits¹ that perhaps the name Yavana may have become known before Alexander's time through the Persian war in which the Indians served as auxiliaries. There is also a striking piece of evidence that Greek writing was known in North India before Alexander's time; coins have been found with Greek inscriptions of pre-Alexandrian date.² Greek engraved gems, of a pattern much earlier than Macedonian times, have been found in the Punjab, and the caduceus was known in India by B.C. 325 at latest.³

I do not therefore consider that the evidence of Yavanānī is conclusive as to Pāṇini's date, though it certainly shows that he cannot be earlier than the fifth century. Weber⁴ also argues that his use of letters as numerals is a proof of Greek influence, but it may be equally well a proof of Semitic influence or a mere independent invention, as indeed seems most likely from the fact that the use remains isolated. Weber's other arguments, e. g. that from the date of Āpīśali,⁵ rest on too slight a basis to bear serious examination. On the other hand, it is not possible to follow Goldstücker⁶ in referring Pāṇini to a date before Buddha on the strength of nirvāṇo'vāte, VIII, 2, 50, because Pāṇini probably deliberately ignored Buddhism⁷ or perhaps lived when the influence of Buddhism had yet to become great. Bhandarkar⁸ refers Pāṇini to the beginning of the seventh century B. C., dating Kātyāyana in accordance with the legend of the Kathāsaritsāgara in the fourth century B. C., but he does not meet the difficulty as to Yavanānī, though his proposed date would in some ways suit the history of Sanskrit literature. On the whole I incline to fix Pāṇini's date at about 400-350 B. C. Böhtlingk, in the introduction to his edition, fixed the date at about 350 B. C., and Lassen⁹ assigned Pāṇini to 330 B. C.

If this date is accepted for Pāṇini it is necessary to throw the older Kātyāyana, and therefore Śaunaka, a little further back. Śaunaka may perhaps be assigned to about 450 B. C. or possibly even to 500 B. C., which would then represent the probable date of Book V of the Āranyaka, while the collection of Book IV would be a product of the same period, since the evidence goes to show that Āśvalāyana and he worked contemporaneously.

Now it will hardly be doubted that Books I-III are decidedly older than Books IV, V. This is clearly reflected in the native tradition preserved in Sāyaṇa's distinction between the apauruṣeyam character of the first three books and their attribution to the author of the Brāhmaṇa. It is not possible to say how much this means. But it is at least probable that the latest part of the first three books, Āranyaka III, belongs to not later than 550 B. C. and the earlier parts may be dated between 700 B. C. and 550 B. C. It will be seen that there is probably a considerable difference in time between the first book, and the two sections of the second, so that 700 B. C. is not too early a date for Book I.

I do not think that these results need be regarded as in any way surprising. The Brāhmaṇa period, according to Max Müller, probably extended from about 800-600 B. C., and this view has the weighty support of Prof. Macdonell.¹ The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa cannot be far removed in date from the first book of the Āranyaka, but the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, which contains many borrowings from it, is in the opinion of Aufrecht² known to Yāska. Now Yāska is certainly anterior to Śaunaka and Pāṇini, for he is cited in the Ṛgvedaprātiśākhya,³ the Bṛhaddevatā, and is apparently known to the Aṣṭādhyāyī. His date cannot, therefore, be reasonably placed later than 500 B. C. and it may go back to 550 B. C. This date is confirmed by the character of the Nirukta which certainly is anterior to either the Prātiśākhya or Pāṇini. If, therefore, the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa was known to him,⁴ even that late work must be dated about 1904, p. 442) adopts 350 B. C. If a late date is adopted, then the question of finding a place for the Bhāṣya becomes more and more difficult, cf. J. R. A. S., 1904, pp. 435 sq., 457 sq., and (for the date of the Epic) ibid., 1906, p. 2; 1907, p. 682.

⁴ The argument is not certain. It is based on the fact that Yāska, Nirukta, VIII, 22, quotes Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 600 B. C., and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa must be earlier, even apparently including the last ten chapters which are later than the earliest portions of the Brāhmaṇa. Thus the Brāhmaṇa cannot well be placed later than 800-700 B. C. and the Āraṇyaka I is not to be dated much later.

Further the early date of even the Upaniṣad portions in Books II and III appears to be only what is to be expected from the history of philosophy. The Upaniṣad doctrines there set forth are essentially earlier than the doctrines of the earliest Buddhism, which belong to the fifth century B. C., and we shall see that the Upaniṣads probably belong to the earliest of the extant works (Sect. V). Moreover, Bühler (S. B. E., II, xxvii) has pointed out that Āpastamba (? 300 B. C.) knows the Vedānta school, which presupposes the full development of the Upaniṣad, while Gautama (before 400 B. C.) knows even the Atharvaśiras Upaniṣad, which is cited also in the Mokṣadharmā (MBh., XII, 12864).

IV. The Mahāvratā ceremony, and the relation of Aitareya Āraṇyaka I and V to the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka.

Sāyaṇa in his commentary on V, 1, 1, tells us that there are three forms of the Mahāvratā ceremony, according as it is a one day rite, or a part of an ahīna, or the second last day of a Sattrā.¹ But he says that the Sattrā form is the original or prakṛti of the others which are vikṛtis. The Sattrā differs from the ahīna in that it requires that all engaged

8, as: yasyai devatāyai havir grhītaṃ syāt tāṃ manasā dhyāyed vaśatkarīṣyan. Now the manasā here does not appear in the original, but only in Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 4: tāṃ manasā dhyāyan vaśatkuryād. It is hardly open to doubt that the form found in the Gopatha passage must have been before Yāska's mind. For though it is not unnatural for the author of the Gopatha, or some other Brāhmaṇa, who borrowed the main body of his work from other sources, to alter his original by inserting manasā, yet it is improbable that Yāska would have made the quotation incorrectly, but for the existence of the alternative version. The instance does not amount to proof, and on the other hand, it may be argued, with Bloomfield (J. A. O. S., XI, 375 sq.; XIX, ii, 1-11), that the Gopatha borrows from the Vaitāna Sūtra and so is very late. But even assuming that the borrowing from the Vaitāna is real, yet it is more than possible that the text of the Gopatha, a very unimportant work, has suffered interpolation, or perhaps the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa as we now have it is a working over of an earlier Brāhmaṇa which itself borrowed from the Aitareya. But in any case the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is unquestionably much older than Yāska.

should be dikṣita, the Hotṛ being also the yajamāna, and in that it extends even to a year. In the ahina the Mahāvrata is the tenth day of the Pauṇḍarika ceremony, but neither the ekāha or ahina form is of importance.

In the Sattrā form the Mahāvrata is the last day but one of the Gavāmayana Sattrā which lasts the whole year, and no doubt represents in some way the year. Hillebrandt,¹ who has most carefully examined this question, concludes that considerable alterations in course of time took place in this ceremony. As it stood later and as it is represented in most of our texts, the two important days were the middle day, the Viṣuvat, and the last day but one, the Mahāvrata, corresponding to the Summer and Winter solstices respectively. But the Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa,² certainly an old work, refers to a view, which it disputes, that the Mahāvrata belongs to the middle of the year, and it is clear that Indra is the god par excellence of the Mahāvrata. It may be argued with some plausibility that Indra belongs to the beginning of the rainy season, or the middle of June, and certainly the rites of the Mahāvrata show traces of a popular origin, like the celebrations of the Johannistag in Germany.³ It is not impossible that at one time the Mahāvrata was the first day of the year, when, as the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, I, 1, 1, has it, Indra slew Vṛtra and became great, and Hillebrandt adduces as evidence of this the month Tīṣya as compared with the Avestan Tištrya, Sirius.

Once then, in any case, the Mahāvrata may well have been a day of popular festival and worship. The Viṣuvat day receives scant treatment in the texts; possibly, as Dr. Friedländer⁴ suggests, because the ceremonies connected with that day were transferred⁵ to the Mahāvrata to help to wipe out the popular character of that rite. It is, however, simple to suppose that in the usual manner the Brāhmaṇas seized upon

³ Many examples of such ceremonies are collected in Frazer, Golden Bough, 2nd ed. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 444, n. 1, does not accept this part of Hillebrandt's theory, and it may be pointed out that the Winter solstice is more naturally the time for rites intended in part to increase the sun's heat, cf. Frazer, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, pp. 196, 241 sq.

the popular Mahāvrata and made it their own by an accumulation of purely technical ritual. At any rate they have left clear traces of the original nature of the ceremony. Warriors, fully armed, pierce with arrows the outstretched skin of a barren cow, which is probably a rain spell.¹ An Ārya and a Śūdra strive on a round hide, the Āryan proving victorious, which may be interpreted as a spell to produce sunshine. Servant maids encircle the Mārjāliya fire with jugs of water on their heads either thrice or until the Mahāvrata Stotra is finished, evidently as a magic rite to procure sunlight and rain for the crops. Sympathetic magic is shown in the effort to produce fertility by maithuna. Music is played and obscene language used, both possibly with the same object to terrify away hostile demons, especially as the form of music affected is drumming.

But from the point of view of the Āraṇyaka these old customs are meaningless survivals. The importance of the sacrifice is purely in the ritual as regards the use of the hymns. The Mahāvrata is one of the forms of the Agniṣṭoma,² and is therefore divided into three parts, the morning, midday, and evening pressing of the Soma. Each pressing has an equal number of Stotras and Śāstras. The morning pressing has the Bahiṣpavamāna and four Ājya Stotras, and the Ājya and Praūga Śāstras of the Hotṛ and three Ājya Śāstras of the Hotrakas. The midday pressing has the Mādhyandinapavamāna and four Prṣṭha Stotras, and the Marutvatiya and Niṣkevalya Śāstras of the Hotṛ and three Niṣkevalya Śāstras of the Hotrakas. The evening pressing has the Ārbhāvapavamāna Stotra and the Agniṣṭoma Sāman, together with the Vaiśvadeva and Āgnimāruta Śāstras of the Hotṛ.³ But in the Mahāvrata the morning and evening ritual is mainly derived⁴ from the prakṛti, that is ultimately the Agniṣṭoma, and it is the Prṣṭha Stotra called the Mahāvrata Sāman and the corresponding Niṣkevalaya Śāstra or Mahaduktha which form the important part of the liturgy.

² See for it Hillebrandt, op. cit., pp. 124 sq. It is a prakṛti of all the more elaborate forms, and these again are related as prakṛti and vikṛti in order. So the Viṣuvat is a prakṛti of the Mahāvrata as is the Viśvajit.

⁴ This is the explanation of such passages as I, 1, 3 ad fin.: tad vaiśvadevaṃ rūpasamṛddham!

The most characteristic of the features of the Mahāvratā Sāman and the Mahaduktha is their division according to the form of a bird. The origin of the idea appears to be the theory which appears in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa¹ of the bird-like shape of the fire-altar. Similarly, the Mahāvratā Sāman has five parts corresponding to the body, head, right wing, left wing, and tail. The Mahaduktha is not so simple, the parts correspond to the body, neck, head, vertebrae, wings, tail, and stomach, but there is a general correspondence with the Sāman, the first verses of each part appearing in the Sāman. Besides these parts there are also three groups each of eighty trcas, one in gāyatrī, one in uṣṇih, and one in brhatī metre, which form the food of the bird.

These collections of verses make up a very considerable body of hymns, and it appears from the Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra² that to a certain extent the collection came to be regarded as a new Saṃhitā through the rearrangement of the verses, much as the Sāmaveda differs mainly in arrangement from the Ṛgveda, so that the study of the Āraṇyaka verses (not the Āraṇyaka itself) was taken up immediately after that of the Saṃhitā. This is at least the view of Oldenberg,³ and it is far from improbable. This new Saṃhitā was regarded as extremely sacred; perhaps the reason was that the likeness of the fire-altar to the shape of a bird was the discovery of some theologian who, in the true spirit later seen in the Upaniṣads, was most anxious not to permit his mystic discovery to become common property. This at least seems to me a legitimate inference from the fact that the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa expressly enjoins secrecy for the three samudrāḥ, the Agnicayana, the Mahāvratā Sāman, and the Mahaduktha; and the Aitareya Āraṇyaka⁴ and the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka⁵ devote chapters to declarations of the secret nature of their subject-matter. Thus a rite originally popular became, through theological speculation, one of the most secret doctrines of the Brāhmaṇas.

As a result of this secrecy the description of the activity of the Hotṛ in the Mahāvratā rite is not recorded in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa or in the Śāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa, but in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka⁶ and the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka.¹ When as time went on there was felt the need of a formal exposition of the rite as a whole, since in neither the Aitareya nor the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka is the account of the rite intelligible as it stands, in the case of the Aitareya, as we have seen, a Sūtra-like book² was added by Śaunaka, but in that very book³ the secret nature of the doctrine is reiterated with the greatest force. The case of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka is different. No addition was made to the Āraṇyaka, so far as we now know it,⁴ but two books, XVII and XVIII, were added to the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra. These books were not commented on by Ānartīya, but by Govinda, and they cannot be regarded as forming part of the Sūtra at his date. In fact, we have conclusive proof that to Ānartīya the eighteenth, and doubtless also the seventeenth book, was an Āraṇyaka. For in commenting on Śrauta Sūtra, XIII, 14, 7, he quotes XVIII, 24, 30, as an Āraṇyaka. This fact, the full significance of which does not seem to have been realized by Hillebrandt, supports his view, which was based on other considerations, that the two books are not more recent⁵ than the rest of the Sūtra. On the contrary it is at least as probable that they are older,⁶ but the important consideration is that the Sūtra treatment of the material was still considered too secret for insertion in the Sūtra. We must therefore recognize that at one time the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, in addition to the Brāhmaṇa treatment in Books I and II, contained a Sūtra treatment like Book V of the Aitareya. As Books III-VI of the Śāṅkhāyana contain the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, and correspond to Book II of the Aitareya, and Books VII and VIII of the Śāṅkhāyana correspond in some measure to Book III⁷ of the Aitareya, it is not surprising that the Śrauta Sūtra treatment of the so-called Books XVII and XVIII should have formed part of the Āraṇyaka.

On the other hand it was not felt that any special sanctity or mystery attached to the Udgātṛ or Adhvaryu's functions. These are described

It is worthy of note that in his explanation of the ritual Sāyaṇa freely quotes and follows Āpastamba, as he does sometimes in his commentary on the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa.

The date of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, like that of the Aitareya, presents considerable difficulty. As the Aitareya Āraṇyaka with the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, the Śāṅkhāyana is closely connected with the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. Vināyaka, the commentator on the Brāhmaṇa, actually, in one place,² reckons the Books I and II as XXXI and XXXII of the Brāhmaṇa, and there are clear references to the Brāhmaṇa in the Āraṇyaka, while several passages agree even verbally.³ But though these signs are so far clear evidence that the connexion is close, they tend also to show that the Āraṇyaka is dependent on the Brāhmaṇa, and this conclusion is strengthened by the fact that, at the time of Pāṇini (about 350 B.C.), there seems to have been known to him⁴ a Brāhmaṇa of thirty chapters, which Weber⁵ must be right in considering to be the Kauṣītaki. Therefore the Āraṇyaka must stand to the Kauṣītaki in precisely the same relation as the Aitareya Āraṇyaka to its Brāhmaṇa.

Now the relation in time of the Aitareya and Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇas⁶ is still open to discussion. The evidence seems to me, however, decidedly in favour of the priority of the Aitareya, though that priority is not in all probability a great one. (1) The Śāṅkhāyana is a more elaborate work than the Aitareya; it is completed by treating of the Haviryajña as well as of the Soma sacrifice proper, giving the Agnyādhāna, the Darśapūrṇamāsa, and the Cāturmāsyaṇi. It is more probable that the less systematic Aitareya is the earlier. (2) The Śāṅkhāyana seems, as Weber¹ points out, to represent a fusion of the views of Paiṅgya and Kauṣītaki, whereas these names are unknown to the Aitareya,² which appears to represent a less dependent point of view and to show more originality. (3) In point of view of style the Śāṅkhāyana is much more condensed than the Aitareya. This fact is open to various interpretations, but on the whole the most probable theory is that the older a work, the less condensed its style, though later again the style becomes freer. This argument, which is applied to the Sarvānukramaṇi and Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra by Prof. Macdonell,³ appears to me to hold equally well in the case of the Brāhmaṇas. (4) The use of unaugmented tenses is more frequent in the Aitareya than in the Śāṅkhāyana.⁴ In favour of the priority of the Śāṅkhāyana the only prima facie piece of evidence⁵ appears to be the argument from the use of the perfect as a narrative tense. Now I do not dispute the value of this criterion, as the evidence appears to me adequate that, so far as Vedic is concerned, the history of the perfect is that of an originally present force, such as persisted in words like āha or veda, to a narrative use. The perfect in narrative is indeed known to the oldest language, but the growth of the narrative use is decidedly a mark of lateness, and is accepted as such by Wackernagel.⁶ But the facts of the case are that in the first thirty Adhyāyas of the Aitareya the use of the perfect is usually that of a present, and that it is only in the last ten that the perfect is used for narrative, whereas in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa there are nearly three perfects for every five imperfects. The narrative of Śunaḥśepa in Book XXXIII is carried on in perfects, but it is universally admitted that the last ten Adhyāyas are a later addition, since (1) they have no corresponding matter in the Śāṅkhāyana, while the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra has a version of the Śunaḥśepa legend, and (2) their subject-matter is quite unconnected¹ with the functions of the Hotṛ at the Jyotiṣṭoma rite, which is the main topic of the Aitareya. Deductions from the style of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa taken as a whole are therefore very risky, and Aufrecht² has, conclusively it seems to me, shown that the Taittiriya Saṃhitā in Book VI, which deals with the Soma sacrifice, follows the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, which has thus a just claim to rank as one of the earliest Brāhmaṇas, as it is of course indisputably older than the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa and the Taittiriya Brāhmaṇa, the latter being admittedly later than the Saṃhitā, which it was clearly composed in order to complete. It is worth noticing that that Brāhmaṇa contains in Book III the description of the new and full moon sacrifices which is omitted in the Saṃhitā,³ and it may be considered that this helps to show that the Śāṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa in which these rites are treated is later than the Aitareya.

On the other hand no argument either way can be drawn from the prominence of Śiva in the Śāṅkhāyana,⁴ since Aufrecht has proved that even the Aitareya Śiva is the great god in his form of Rudra, just as he is in the Śatapatha, the later books of the Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, and portions of the Atharvaveda. It must be recognized that the deity later known as Śiva came at an early period to be the most prominent member of the Hindu pantheon, and to represent that striving at pantheistic monotheism which in one or other of its forms is so characteristic of all the developments of Indian religious thought. It is probable that several conceptions have merged in the idea of the later Śiva. Originally a god of the storm which destroys,⁵ he later amalgamated with a god of the forest or wood,⁶ or rather perhaps with the vegetation spirit which has been rendered so familiar by the studies of Frazer following Mannhardt. Possibly, too, traits of his character are derived from the idea of the evil powers of the spirits of the dead, as suggested by v. Schroeder,¹ who regards him as chief of the spirits of the dead. But at any rate he cannot be regarded as a late deity, just as Viṣṇu also belongs to an early period. Another sign of the fact that no very great distance in time separates the two Brāhmaṇas may be seen in the fact that both employ in essentials the same style and language. It is worthy of note that in both the base enad occurs in the nominative.²

It seems, therefore, practically certain that at least the first thirty Adhyāyas of the Aitareya are earlier than the Kauṣītaki, and the temptation is strong to assume that the fact that the Kauṣītaki has precisely thirty Adhyāyas is due to an imitation of the Aitareya. If this is so, then we would be sure that the last ten Adhyāyas were later than the Kauṣītaki, a view itself extremely probable on the ground of contents and of the use of the perfect as a narrative tense. But even so the Brāhmaṇa as a whole of forty Adhyāyas is older than Pāṇini.³ Further the Paiṅgya, who is cited as an authority in the Kauṣītaki, is, according to the Kāśikā on Pāṇini, IV, 3, 105, a cirantana, so that the Kauṣītaki, like the Aitareya, can claim considerable antiquity.⁴

If the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is older than the Śāṅkhāyana, it is not unreasonable to expect the same relation to exist in the case of the Āraṇyakas. This certainly is borne out by comparison of the ritual described. It at least appears to have been deliberately modified to differentiate it from the ritual of the Aitareya. It is not of course conclusive that the Āraṇyaka itself is necessarily later, since the description of the earlier ritual may be the later, but there is nothing to suggest that this is the case, and the condensed style of the Śāṅkhāyana appears more modern than that of the Aitareya.

Even in the Brāhmaṇas the ritual differences begin to appear. The Prāuga Śāstra at the Prātahsavana of the Agniṣṭoma and of the Viṣuvat, following the model of the Agniṣṭoma, consists of Ṛgveda, I, 2 and 3, in gāyatrī metre.⁵ In the Viṣuvat, according to the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa,⁶ the Śāstra is in triṣṭubh metre, though the other form is mentioned as more correct, and consists of verses from different hymns on the model of the Aitareya form. But most of the differences¹ occur in connexion with the most important part of the Āraṇyaka, the Mahaduktha. Govinda, the commentator on the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, tells us² that the parts of the Mahaduktha are the parts of the human form and not of the bird form. This is borne out by the words used, akṣā, bāhū, prahastakam, and the omission of the viśavaḥ and pucham. The bird form is the older; it is that of the fire-altar and of the Mahāvrata Sāman, and probably it is to the change of form that the confusion in the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka is due.

In the Aitareya the Mahaduktha is divided into parts corresponding to the body, neck, head, vertebrae, wings, stomach, then comes the food of the bird in the form of the three aśītis, the vaśa hymn, and ten miscellaneous hymns called the ūrū. The Śāṅkhāyana divides the Uktha into the body, head with neck, the two sides, divided into shoulder, arm, and hand, the back, consisting of the caturuttarāṇi, the food in the form of the three aśītis, together with the udara. Then, as the beginning of the end, come the dvīpadās, which in the Aitareya form the tail, the Aindrāgna sūkta, the beginning of the ūrū in the Aitareya, and a collection of disconnected groups of verses, āvaṣana, triṣṭupchata, &c. The explanation of this confusion seems to be³ that the human form had no pucha and required fewer verses for the pakṣa, and so the verses necessary to make up the total of 1,000 brhatī verses, required by the rite, were appended at the end. To the alteration in form is probably to be attributed the fact that the sides are composed of equal numbers of verses, whereas in the corresponding Sāman one side has the Pañcadaśa, the other the Saptadaśa Stoma, and in the Aitareya one side has 101, the other 102 verses,⁴ probably, as Dr. Friedländer suggests, because in flight one wing of a bird appears longer than the other.

A similar complication is made in the case of the three aśītis.⁵ In the Aitareya the gāyatrī and uṣṇih aśītis are composed of eighty gāyatrī and (with a slight exception) uṣṇih trīcas respectively, while the brhatī aśīti contains eighty sato-brhatī verses. In the Śāṅkhāyana the brhatī aśīti consists of eighty brhatīs and eighty pragāthas (brhatī and sato- br̥hatī). The additional syllables are added to the uṣṇih aśīti which is composed of gāyatrīs, br̥hatīs, and pragāthas.¹ The priority of the Aitareya is quite clear. Again in the Aitareya, the hymns corresponding to the Br̥hat and Rathantara Sāmāns stand on the right and left wings of the bird, in the Śāṅkhāyana they no longer correspond to the Sāmāns in position, but are grouped at the end.²

The apparently deliberate divergence from the Aitareya appears also in the treatment of the verses from the Ṛgveda used in the litanies. For example, the uṣṇih aśīti in the Aitareya commences with Ṛgveda VIII, 12 and 13; in the Śāṅkhāyana the order is simply reversed. Again in the vaśa hymn, VIII, 46, in the Aitareya only vv. 1-20 are prescribed, since they alone are addressed to Indra, in the Śāṅkhāyana³ the whole hymn, though vv. 21-24 are a dānastuti, and vv. 25-28, and 32 are addressed to Vāyu. Similarly at the evening Soma pressing the Aitareya used the Viśvedeva verses, 1-41, of Ṛgveda, I, 164, only, while the Śāṅkhāyana improperly uses all the verses.

There is yet another sign of the earlier character of the Aitareya, so far as its Sūtra part at least is concerned. The Sūtra part of the Śāṅkhāyana, the so-called Śrauta Sūtra, when mentioning⁴ the various improper rites, says tad etat purāṇam utsannaṃ na kāryam ! There can be no doubt that this is a clear sign of a more reflective and refined age.

Further, the language of the Śāṅkhāyana suggests a close relation with the Aitareya, which must either be due to a common source, or perhaps more probably to borrowing. For example, in the Aitareya⁵ occurs: brahmaitad ahar brahmaṇaiva tad brahma pratipadyate; in the Śāṅkhāyana,⁶ brahmaitad ahar brahmaṇaiva tad brahma samardhayati. On the whole the priority probably lies with the Aitareya.

If, as seems clearly the case, the ritual of the Śāṅkhāyana is more recent than that of the Aitareya, an interesting question arises as to the relation of the Aitareya I to the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa VIII and IX, in which the Mahāvratā is treated. The evidence⁷ available on this point is not decisive. (1) In IX, 3, 3, 19, occurs the expression yāny aṣṭācatvāriṃśat tau caturviṃśau pakṣau, which certainly points to the equality of the pakṣas, and, possibly, to the human form as the object of consecutively.

comparison as contrasted with the unequal and longer wings of the bird. (2) In the same passage it is said yāni trayastrīṃśat sa vaśah, and, as we have seen above, the thirty-three verses of Ṛgveda, VIII, 64, are employed in the Śāṅkhāyana only, the Aitareya using but twenty. (3) In the third verse of Ṛgveda, X, 120, corresponding to the body, the Aitareya, V, 1, 6,¹ omits the second half and fills up the gap with a pāda from the verses for the right and left wings. The Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 14, 7, omits the half-verse, and puts nothing in its place, but puts the half-verse together with the second half of the verse called nada, Ṛgveda, VIII, 69, 2, before the dvīpādās. Now the Śatapatha, VIII, 6, 2, 3, refers to ardharcau, which name fits better the case of the Śāṅkhāyana, with its two half-verses existing independently, than that of the Aitareya, where two separate pādas (not half-verses) are interpolated to make up one missing half-verse. Dr. Friedländer holds that the other points² in the account of the Śatapatha, which is far from being a clear one, seem to throw little or no further light on the matter; and it is quite possible that the Śatapatha represents a version older than the Śāṅkhāyana. But he appears to have overlooked one or two indications which tell strongly against this theory. It is clear from Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, that the general arrangement of the Śastra in the Mahāvratā was similar to that of the Śāṅkhāyana, the vaśa hymn being followed by the dvīpādās, the Aindrāgna sūkta, and the āvapana. What is still more significant is that the aśītis are clearly composed in the same way as in the Śāṅkhāyana, for the direction in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 10, to take twenty-four sets of four syllables from the kākubh pragāthas has a parallel in VIII, 6, 2, 3. Finally, the priority of the Śāṅkhāyana appears definitely established by the fact that in X, 4, 2, 19, the Śatapatha distinctly condemns the use of seventeen priests, which, as Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 348, n. 1) points out, is laid down by the Śāṅkhāyana. Book X is undoubtedly of the same period as or at least not earlier than Books VIII and IX, and to argue from it to the date of these Books is perfectly fair. It would probably therefore be best to regard the Śatapatha as exhibiting a version which is later than, but which does not necessarily follow throughout the Śāṅkhāyana version; I do not think even that version would satisfactorily explain all the details of the Śatapatha.

It does not of course necessarily follow that the Śatapatha is later than the Aitareya Āraṇyaka I, but on the other hand this result is by no means impossible. For by common consent¹ the Śatapatha is one of the youngest of the great Brāhmaṇas. It is no doubt anterior to Pāṇini, and as far as the controversy² over the Sūtra, IV, 3, 105, yields any results it is that Kātyāyana considered that Yājñavalkya was a purāṇa, as opposed to a recent author, though therein it seems he disagreed with Pāṇini. It is abundantly clear³ that the name Śatapatha was well known to Kātyāyana. But there is nothing inconsistent in this with the view that the Śatapatha in its present form may be younger than the Aitareya Āraṇyaka I. It will be seen in Section VI that grammatically the Āraṇyaka I-III is older than Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, I-V, X, XII-XIV.

It is perhaps well here to mention a theory recently put forward by Dr. Hoernle.⁴ He points out that in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 10, the word grīvāḥ, which occurs in Aitareya Āraṇyaka, I, 3, 4, is used to denote the seven cervical vertebrae, whereas in the R̥gveda and Atharvaveda it seems to denote the throat or windpipe. This view must, he argues, have been derived from the medical school of Yājñavalkya's day, that of Ātreya, and he refers to the fact that Indian tradition assigns both Yājñavalkya and Ātreya to the time of Buddha, the sixth century B.C.⁵ Clearly much stress cannot be laid on this argument as far as it might be applied to fixing the date of either the Aitareya Āraṇyaka or the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa XII. For though ¹ Cf. Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 203, 217. The Jaiminiya may be younger, cf. its use of ādī, Whitney, P. A. O. S., May, 1883, p. xii.

² Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 443, 444, Indian Literature, p. 130; Bühler, S. B. E., II, xxxix, n.; XII, xxxv. It seems usually to be considered that Kātyāyana was right. But the evidence seems rather the other way, as Āpastamba calls Yājñavalkya's contemporary Śvetaketu an avara, and this agrees well with the theory here maintained.

³ Vārttika on IV, 2, 60.

⁵ For Buddha's date see Duff, Chronol. of India, p. 6; and especially Fleet, J. R. A. S., 1904, pp. 1 sq., 355.

grīvāḥ in the former work no doubt refers to cervical vertebrae, as the context shows, yet the passage shows none of the detailed knowledge of the Śatapatha (grīvāḥ pañcadaśa | caturdaśa vā etāsāṃ karūkarāṇi vīryaṃ pañcadaśam), to which it is certainly prior, as we have seen on other grounds. But the tradition connecting Yājñavalkya with Buddha's date is probably inaccurate, for the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad must, I think, be counted as earlier than Buddha, and yet it is later than the mass of the Brāhmaṇa, and Yājñavalkya is to it a figure of ancient fame, while we are hardly yet in a position to decide the date or opinions of Ātreya, since we can scarcely assume that Caraka represents him, through Agniveśa, with much accuracy. But it may be noted that the later date of the Śatapatha is distinctly indicated by the fact that Āpastamba¹ calls Śvetaketu, a contemporary of Yājñavalkya, modern, while the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, which also² cites Śvetaketu, shows again a connexion with the Śatapatha which denotes its posteriority to the Aitareya.

V. The three Upaniṣads of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka.

There is some doubt as to the exact designations borne in early days by the Upaniṣads contained in the Āraṇyaka. According to Max Müller,³ the distinction is between the Aitareya Upaniṣad properly so-called, which fills the fourth, fifth, and sixth Adhyāyas of the second Āraṇyaka, and the Mahaitareya Upaniṣad, also called by a more general name Bahvṛca Upaniṣad, which comprises the whole of the second and third Āraṇyakas. There is no doubt that the term Aitareya Upaniṣad especially belongs to II, 4-6; but the term Mahaitareya or Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa Upaniṣad, though it sometimes⁴ applies to both Āraṇyaka II and III, sometimes⁵ is confined to Āraṇyaka II. Further the form, Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa Upaniṣad, is in the Ānandāśrama edition given to the Upaniṣad itself, while on the other hand, in one of the MSS. in the Bodleian,⁶ the second book is described simply as Aitareya Upaniṣad. Clearly the nomenclature was not definitely fixed. Book III bore the special title of Samhitā Upaniṣad, which is given to it in Śaṅkara's commentary and which it claims for itself by its opening words. The term Mahaitareya may have been applied at an early date since it appears to have given rise to the fiction of a Ṛṣi, Mahaitareya, by the date of the composition of Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, but the text of these Sūtras is not very certain.

It must be recognized that the interpretation of these Upaniṣads is far from certain or easy. They were no doubt originally accompanied in the Vedic schools by explanations which might, had they been preserved, have shown how much we now misinterpret them. But it is impossible to regard Śaṅkara's explanations as traditional. There must have been somewhere a gap in the tradition. This is shown clearly by the fact that Śaṅkara explains all the Upaniṣads as exhibiting one doctrine, an impossible view, and that Bādarāyaṇa,¹ who in his Brahmasūtra does precisely the same thing, adopted a different doctrine as the fundamental key to the system. All that can now be done is to take the Upaniṣads and endeavour to extract what seems the most natural meaning from the actual words.

In the eyes of Śaṅkara and Sāyaṇa there is no difference in time nor in essential doctrines between the three Upaniṣads, which they regard as one. There are three classes of men, says Sāyaṇa² in the Introduction to Book III, those who desire immediate freedom through the knowledge of Brahman, and accordingly find it by aid of Book II, 4-6; those who desire to become free gradually by attaining to the world of Hiraṇyagarbha, for whom II, 1-3, is intended; and those who care only for prosperity, for whom the third Āraṇyaka serves. In the Introduction to II, 1, 2, he adds that it lays down aids to the concentration of thought in the shape of the performance of certain upāsanas or meditations. Such meditation may be of two kinds, Brahmopāsana, or Pratikopāsana; the former consists in contemplation of Brahman as endowed with qualities, the latter in considering worldly objects as Brahman, whether, as in the second Book, they are sacrificial objects or non-sacrificial.

It is undoubtedly the case that the Upaniṣad, II, 1-3, is intended in some degree to supersede sacrifice, or rather while assuming sacrifice to explain it mystically, the mystic meaning being the essential part. The path par excellence is knowledge of the real meaning of the Uktha. Uktha is earth, sky, and heaven; its objects are Agni, Vāyu, and Aditya, its aśītis are food, whereby all is obtained. It is also the body, mouth, nostrils, and forehead of Prajāpati. The breath is Uktha, and sattya, and as brhatī supports all things. Puruṣa, II, 1, 7, again, creates the earth, fire, the sky, the air, heaven, and the sun.

In Adhyāya 2, Prāṇa is identified with the authors of the hymns of the R̥gveda, the ṛcs, the ardharcas, and Indra declares himself to be Prāṇa, and, II, 2, 4, the worshipper is identified with the sun.

In Adhyāya 3 the identity of the individual and the Uktha or Prāṇa is insisted upon. The growth of self is traced from the sap of herbs and trees through animals, which show hunger and thirst, to knowledge in man, and after the identification of Uktha and Prāṇa the Adhyāya ends with some obscure verses alleged to treat of the winning of Hiranyagarbha.

The precise meaning of the doctrine is hard to decide. It appears, however, to amount to a vague pantheism, which recognizes the unity of all existence physical or otherwise, and at the same time tends, as pantheistic views naturally do tend, to become a cosmogonism, especially in the account of the powers of Puruṣa (II, 1, 7). It is too early yet to speak of a clear differentiation of mind and body, though distinct signs appear in II, 3, 2, where men, animals, and trees are regarded as showing in inverse order the growth of intelligence. But the Prāṇa or Puruṣa does not consist in mind as opposed to body: all things exist in him, and both mind and body seem equally essential elements.

Deussen, in Die Philosophie der Upanishad's,¹ argues that the oldest Upaniṣads are dominated by a doctrine derived from Yājñavalkya which may be styled 'Idealism' and which may be summed up in the propositions: (1) the Ātman is the knowing subject within us; (2) the Ātman is itself as subject unknown; (3) the Ātman is the sole reality. These propositions undoubtedly are found in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I-IV, and I agree with Deussen in thinking that they were taken over and partly misunderstood by the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, and that the Taittirīya and Kauṣītaki Upaniṣads are probably later still.² Nor as regards the first two of these propositions can there be much dispute as to their meaning. But the third proposition is more difficult. Deussen interprets it, it appears, to mean only that there is no reality outside the one Ātman, and that what seems to be knowledge of reality is really only an illusory knowledge of things as they appear, not as they are in themselves. That is he discerns in the Advaita doctrine the same principle as appears in Kant, a separation between things in themselves and empirical reality. It is probable that those who held the doctrine of Māyā were less subtle thinkers than this, as is shown by the naïve manner in which knowledge is made the characteristic of the Ātman, while at the same time all empirical knowledge is declared illusory. For such knowledge as is not empirical is meaningless to us and should not be described as knowledge. They rather resembled the early Atomists, like Democritus, who denied the reality of anything save atoms and the void. Dissatisfied with the changing nature of life and appearances, they thought that they reached finality and truth by denying the reality of phenomena, and they carried that metaphysical doctrine into ethics by regarding the acts of the ordinary life as fundamentally indifferent and unreal. The result of this metaphysical theory has had a considerable influence in Hindu life and thought, and it has undoubtedly retarded natural development and to some extent moral progress, though the facts of life have been too strong for it. But whatever the exact significance of the doctrine, it is clear that Yājñavalkya, and those who followed him, did in some sense or other, hold that the world was unreal, a view which is not in any true sense Kantian.

² Ibid., pp. 23, 24; E. T., pp. 23, 24. The Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, it may be noted,

To these three doctrines characteristic of the Yājñavalkya belief, may be added (4) the allied doctrines of the transmigration of souls,¹ of Mokṣa, and the reward in a future birth of good and evil. This doctrine is certainly not older than the Upaniṣads, and it is intimately connected with views of moral retribution,² which are hardly logically to be reconciled with the other three doctrines, which naturally lead to the recognition that no such thing as transmigration can exist, and that mere knowledge is freedom and there is no consciousness after death.

The question arises how far these doctrines have any counterpart in II, 1-3. The answer seems that the Upaniṣad stands in regard to them all on an earlier plane of development. (1) The Ātman is not yet recognized as the unity. That is designated as Prāṇa or Puruṣa, and in II, 3, 2, the Puruṣa has an Ātman which is developed in various degrees in the Puruṣa according to the diverse forms which Puruṣa adopts as man, beast, plant, &c. There is a pantheistic conception, but it is not one of consciousness as the sole reality. (2) There is naturally no trace of the doctrine of the unknowableness of the Ātman. (3) What is more important, there is no trace of the doctrine of the unreality of things. Puruṣa exists in them all, but either he is identical with, or creates (II, 1, 7) them, and he does not exist outside them. The nearest approach to a hint of the later idea is found in II, 1, 5, where it is said that if one knows what is Sattya, then even if falsehood is spoken by him, yet he says what is true. But it is only a vague hint. (4) The doctrine of transmigration cannot be proved to be known to this Upaniṣad. Śaṅkara and Sāyaṇa of course assume its existence, but the passages can be explained otherwise. They are II, 1, 3, tad idaṃ karma kṛtam ayaṃ puruṣaḥ, which most probably means that action is the man, a man is what he does, not a man is what he did in a former birth, which is not really suitable in the context, and 3, 2, yathāprajñāṃ hi saṃbhavaḥ, which I take to signify: 'for their experiences are according to their intelligence,' a meaning which avoids dragging in a doctrine by no means needed or even intelligible in the context. The doctrine of the Upaniṣad is immortality in another world with the gods, II, 2, 4, &c.

There appears therefore no legitimate room for doubt that the Upaniṣad, II, 1-3, is anterior to the spread of the Yājñavalkya doctrine and to all subsequent Upaniṣads which contain that doctrine. Parts of the Brhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya Upaniṣads may be equally early, for some of their texts contain no reference to transmigration, but it would seem that Aitareya Āraṇyaka II, 1-3, which forms a unity, is the oldest long Upaniṣad extant.

In the Upaniṣad proper, II, 4-6, there is clear evidence of a further development of doctrine. In Adhyāya 4 the idea is that the Ātman produces everything, cosmogonism in fact. In Adhyāya 6 we reach the identifications of Prajñāna with Brahman and these two with Ātman. We thus have clearly the doctrine that the Ātman is consciousness, for it is intended evidently not to identify reality with the Ātman, but, as in Adhyāya 4, in a rough way, to show that all things, the gods, the elements, men, animals, &c., are dependent on knowledge, that is the Ātman. But there is still no statement that the self is unknowable; that is, the conception of subject as contrasted with object is not yet clear. On the other hand the sole existence of the Ātman appears in II, 4, 3, where it is asserted that there is no other self. But this view carries with it no denial of the reality of things which depend on Ātman. The Māyā conception is not even implicit. Nor is the doctrine of transmigration apparently present. It is true that Śāṅkara and Sāyaṇa found it in II, 5 : athāsyāyam itara ātmā kṛtakṛtyo vayogataḥ praiti sa itaḥ prayann eva punar jāyate tad asya tṛtīyaṁ janma ! But itaḥ must mean 'hence' and the third birth must be in the heaven, an idea of course familiar to the Brāhmaṇas¹ which know nothing of transmigration.

There is not, therefore, anything in my opinion in this Upaniṣad to justify us in assigning it to a later date than the period anterior to the main doctrines of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka.

In the third Upaniṣad, III, 1-2, there is little of philosophical interest. There is a repeated identification of the incorporeal conscious self and the sun, and there is a distinct assertion that the self is that which hears, thinks, sees, &c., but is not heard or thought, and which is within all beings. This gives us (1) the conscious Ātman, which (2) is not knowable and (3) probably is all that is real. But there is no sign of the doctrine of Māyā, nor of transmigration, nor of freedom in knowledge. On the contrary the fate of the good is repeatedly stated to be prosperity in this world and Svarga in the next. So even this Upaniṣad may be earlier than the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad.

External evidence for the dates of the Upaniṣads is not forthcoming. It is true that the first Upaniṣad presupposes that the Ṛgveda was already arranged as we have it at the time when the Upaniṣad was composed, but Oldenberg² has shown that the Ṛgveda assumed its present form at a date before the composition of the Sāmaveda, the oldest form of the Yajurveda, and the Atharvaveda. The Saṃhitā Upaniṣad shows a knowledge of the saṃhitā, pada, and krāma pāthas of the Ṛgveda, and of the doctrines of natva and śatva. But all that this shows is that it belongs to a period relatively later than that of the Brāhmaṇas,¹ a view which of course is undisputed. It is probably older than Yāska, who evidently was much more advanced in grammatical studies than the author of this Upaniṣad, and it may be dated in the sixth century B. C., perhaps earlier, since the transmigration doctrine had by the time when Buddha preached apparently obtained a complete grasp of the Indian sage's mind, though of course it is quite possible and almost probable that the doctrine spread first in some definite locality, perhaps in the East, which may not have been that of the home of the Aitareya. It may be noted that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa had its origin among the Kuru-Pāñcālas, and the Śatapatha among the Kosala-Videhas, in so far at least as the books attributed to Yājñavalkya are concerned.²

Deussen³ is of opinion that the Aitareya Upaniṣad is later than the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya and also than the Taittiriya. It is hardly possible, for the reasons already given, to accept this view. He points out that in Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VI, 3, 1, there are three kinds of organic beings, in Aitareya Upaniṣad, II, 6, there are four, śvedaja being added. This argument is of no real weight, in view of the fact that enumerations of classes in these Upaniṣads are always careless and often incomplete, indeed the assertion in the Chāndogya is so couched as to appear to be deliberately directed against an assertion that the number was other than three, and may be a reference to the Aitareya. The substantial arguments on the other side are those from the contents. The same argument applies to the Taittiriya. The Ānandavallī⁴ contains an elaborately developed doctrine which certainly regards the Ātman as conscious, as unknowable, and as unique, besides treating of the nature of transmigration in a very subtle manner. The argument of Deussen from the fact of the less elaborate description of the entrance of the Ātman into creation in II, 6, in comparison with the Aitareya account in II, 4, 3, is quite inconclusive. Further, the Taittiriya Upaniṣad¹ sets a high value on asceticism, and thus differs from the Aitareya and even the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya. Historically the earliest view appears to have been opposed to asceticism, which only later was regarded as an aid to knowledge. Again in the Śikṣāvallī the knowledge of grammar shown is at least as great as that of the Saṃhitā Upaniṣad. Another sign of the comparative lateness of the Taittiriya² is the addition of mahas to the triad, bhūr, bhuvah, sva.

There can, in any case, be no question of the priority of the Aitareya to the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad. The Kauṣītaki is decidedly late.³ Adhyāya 1 is a variant of the transmigration legend found in Chāndogya, V, 3-10, and Bṛhadāraṇyaka, VI, 2, which are both late passages in their Upaniṣads.⁴ The twelve explanations of Bālāki Gārgya in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, II, 1, are expanded to sixteen in Kauṣītaki, IV.⁵ The prāṇasaṃvāda of the Aitareya, II, 4, is certainly older than either that of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, VI, 11-14, or the Chāndogya, V, 1, or the Kauṣītaki, II, 12-14, III, 3. The name, indriya, for the organs of sense first occurs in Kauṣītaki, II, 15,⁶ and in Aitareya, III, 2, 1, and the word manas occurs in the sense of an organ, like speech, sight, hearing, instead of the old sense 'consciousness,' in Kauṣītaki, III.⁷

Further it may be noted that in the Aitareya, even in III, 2, 3, there is no hint of the recognition of the Atharva as a fourth Veda. Such hints occur in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, V, 13, and VI, 4, 13, and Atharvaṇa occurs in Chāndogya, VII, 1, 2, while the Atharvans and Aṅgīrasas are mentioned in the early text, Bṛhadāraṇyaka, II, 4, 10.

Other Upaniṣads, including the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, may fairly be left out of account. None of them can claim to be older than the Aitareya and many must be much more modern. They are marked by a greater formalism of doctrine, accompanied by attempts to graft popular doctrines on to the philosophical conceptions of the Upaniṣads, which were apparently soon found too abstruse for the comprehension of their successors.

It may therefore be concluded that the first two Upaniṣads certainly, and probably also the third, precede the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya Upaniṣads in their main portions, especially the Yājñavalkya section of the former, that they are pre-Buddhistic, as is proved both by the contents and the language,¹ and that they date from about 700–500 B.C.

In connexion with the relation of the Upaniṣads to Buddhism it may be well to trace the history of the Ātman doctrine. The derivation of the word is in dispute² and throws no clear light on the meaning. But at any rate, it is certain that the Indians obtained gradually, doubtless through the phenomena of dreams and swoons and death, the conception of the body being animated by a soul. This conception naturally reacted on their views of religion. It is impossible to suppose, as is now so often done, that the earliest or even an early form of religion was the belief in spirits which take up their abode from time to time in various forms. It cannot have been until after long experience that the idea of a disembodied spirit can have been intelligible. Primitive man must long have regarded body and mind as one. So his earliest worship must have been addressed to things which seemed to him to be able to help or hurt him. We cannot believe with Rhys Davids³ that the early worship of trees was really dryad worship. The early believer regarded certain trees as divine, just as he regarded certain animals, like the cow or the snake, as divine because of their beneficent or maleficent powers, and it was only later that the idea of the spirit as separable from the tree or animal appears. Once the idea of a separate spirit is arrived at of course the nature of the deity changes, anthropomorphism arises, or other animals or things than that which the deity originally was become his place of abode.⁴ Further, other abstract deities can arise, and we pass from worship of natural objects to worship of spirits embodied from time to time in natural forms. It was not unnatural that the thinker should endeavour to find some common explanation of the vast world of souls, and still less unnatural that he should decide that all souls were identical; for the soul being merely a spirit had when separated from its body no characteristic or distinguishing features.

But the merit of the Upaniṣads does not rest on this mere identification.¹ It rests on the attempt to discover the nature of the soul. At first the conception may no doubt have been that it was material,² and traces of that view persist late, but at any rate the author of the Aitareya Upaniṣad was well aware that the essential characteristic of soul was consciousness, and I think we must admit that the Upaniṣad fully recognizes that all existence whatever is dependent on consciousness. It is true that the Upaniṣad does not clearly analyse or realize what that means, but the idea is there. The Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya supply a further account, and at the same time they develop the theme that recognition of the true facts as to the Ātman means freedom, whereas failure to recognize means transmigration. Buddhism is certainly later than these doctrines, from which it is an illogical and unsatisfactory derivative so far as metaphysics³ go. It is significant of its later origin that it arose at a time when Tapas was laid great stress upon even in the philosophic schools, whereas Tapas is not recognized as a factor in knowledge until the Taittirīya Upaniṣad, and becomes prominent only in the Kena and Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣads. Its derivative nature is plainly seen in the fundamental doctrine of the rejection of the Ātman, and the illogical substitution of a Karman which performs the functions of an Ātman for purposes of transmigration, and in the consequent doctrine of Nirvāṇa, which is nonentity, as all content has been rendered impossible by the rejection of the theory of Ātman as conscious. It is true that the theory was inevitable, inasmuch as the Upaniṣads came to insist on emptying the Ātman of all meaning by rejecting the objective side of consciousness, so that the Ātman ceased to be anything but a subject without an object, a view that is not that of the Aitareya Upaniṣad. But to accept the doctrine that there existed no Ātman at all was to adopt a view which, strictly speaking, rendered all knowledge meaningless, for there must be

³ No doubt Buddhism is not in the main a metaphysical system (cf. Lovejoy, J. A. O. S., XIX, ii, 132 sq.), but it rests on a metaphysical basis which is thoroughly unsound, and, as empirical psychology, is hopelessly confused and self-contradictory. Cf. the significant admissions by Mrs. Rhys Davids, J. R. A. S., 1903, pp. 687-691.

a subject, and it is no answer that there need be no permanent individual self.

The doctrine of anattā therefore destroys all the basis of samsāra, and is complete proof that Buddhism is entirely dependent on the Upaniṣads which first clearly develop that view. There are numerous other signs of dependence. The dialogue form is copied from the dialogues of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya, and even the style of the Aitareya Upaniṣad, II, 6: yad etad hṛdayaṃ manaś caitat saṃjñānam ajñānaṃ vijñānaṃ prajñānaṃ medhā dṛṣṭir dhṛtir matir manīṣā jñātiḥ smṛtiḥ saṃkalpaḥ kratur asuḥ kāmo vaśa iti sarvāṇy evaitāni prajñānasya nāmadheyāni, is a forecast of those intolerable lists of practically meaningless synonyms which disfigure the pages of the Pāli Suttas. In estimating the causes of the fall of Buddhism,¹ it must, I think, be recognized how great a part was played by the unphilosophical and uncritical nature of the metaphysical doctrine, and by the elaborate mass of inaccurate and fanciful psychology,² which the school endeavoured to set up as its contribution to the knowledge of truth. The Upaniṣads contain much that is foolish and meaningless, but they are the first books of a new faith and were fated to be the sources of a system of philosophy whose influence in India is still paramount.

It follows with certainty that the Aitareya Upaniṣads are considerably older than Buddha, whose date of death is certainly about 487 or 477 B. C.³ We must therefore probably fix 600 B. C. as the lowest limit for their composition, or put 550 B. C. at the very latest, thus modifying slightly the results above reached. It is not possible to estimate how quickly thought then worked, but about 50 to 100 years will be required for the development from the earliest to the latest Upaniṣad, and I incline to fix approximately the dates at from about 700–600 B. C. for Āraṇyaka II, and 550 for Āraṇyaka III. Āraṇyaka I may be somewhat earlier, but not necessarily much earlier, while, as seen above, the Āraṇyakas IV and V belong to about 450 B. C., thus explaining the dictum of Sāyaṇa which distinguishes so sharply between the two parts. The upper date may perhaps be pushed farther back, but this involves the pushing back of the date of the R̥gveda, for which, at least at present, no satisfactory evidence has been adduced.¹ Among recent writers Rhys Davids² and Garbe³ ascribe to the eighth and seventh centuries the older Upaniṣads.

The position of the Aitareya gives some light with regard to the question how far the Brahmins were the authors of the change in philosophy shown in the Upaniṣads. Of late it has been more and more the practice to ascribe to the Kṣatriyas this step in philosophic progress. This view has recently been pressed by Garbe⁴ and Deussen.⁵ But it seems to me to rest on no substantial evidence and to be a priori improbable. The Aitareya shows a legitimate development from the Brāhmaṇa to the Upaniṣad, and no reason appears why the Brahmins should be considered unable to develop further the ideas which Deussen himself has shown were latent in the Brāhmaṇas. Doubtless, as the history of Jñātaputra and Gautama show, the Kṣatriyas in the eighth to the sixth centuries B. C. took an interest in the intellectual life of the day, but that is not to say that the Kṣatriyas developed new views as opposed to the Brahmins. The fact is that society had not yet attained that artificial character of separation of classes which is seen in the Mānava Dharmaśāstra. The literary activities of the Kṣatriyas were mainly spent at this time on the development of the epic⁶ which was soon to produce the Rāmāyaṇa, a development shared by the Brahmins but mainly directed by the Kṣatriyas, just as the latter shared the philosophic researches which were the main task of the former.

It is not unimportant to observe that there is as yet no trace in the Āraṇyaka of the doctrine of the misery of existence which characterizes both the Jaina and Buddhist creeds. It is I think correct to assume that these doctrines are descended from a Sāṃkhya⁷ view of existence which fell into pessimism by its unsatisfactory dualistic metaphysics. However open to criticism Jacobi's detailed derivation of the doctrines of Buddhism from the Sāṃkhya may be, yet it is clear that it was from the Sāṃkhya that Buddhism derived its theory of the soulless entity which yet goes through transmigration. For this is precisely the lingaśarīra which alone migrates, puruṣa being a truth utterly dissociated from matter. From this point of view also is reached the result that the Aitareya is considerably anterior to Buddhism.

Āraṇyaka I contains, in comparison with the Upaniṣads, little of philosophic interest. It is important, however, to observe that in it brahman appears already as a principle of unity. In I, 1, 3, gāyatrī is identified with brahman and the Mahāvratā day is also identified, because it leads to brahman. Similarly Vasukra is brahman and so is identified with the Mahāvratā day. There can be no doubt that the brahman conception is older than that of the Ātman, and that it originally meant the power of prayer, which even in the Ṛgveda is treated as a spell to bend the gods by its own force to grant what is craved, instead of being considered an appeal to the lovingkindness of the gods. That eventually this doctrine was amalgamated with a younger rival, the Ātman doctrine, as Oldenberg suggests, seems to me undoubted. The assimilation is seen complete in the Upaniṣad II, 6, which indicates the length of time which we must assume between the first book and the Upaniṣad proper.

It remains to consider whether any explanation can be given of the connexion with the doctrines of the Upaniṣad of the Mahāvratā rite. Some light on this matter is thrown by Prof. Eggeling in the introduction to Part IV¹ of his translation of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa. He there points out that the Agnicayana and the Mahāvratā appear to have been developed in connexion with a doctrine of the production of the world from the sacrifice of Puruṣa (cf. Ṛgveda, X, 90), which eventually yields the equation of Prajāpati at once to the sacrifice and the sacrificer (cf. Aitareya Āraṇyaka, II, 1, 2). But the sacrifice lasts a year, and so Prajāpati becomes time, and death, and eventually mind. Thus the Mahāvratā rite is treated in the Āraṇyaka as specially secret, and finds a natural development in the more purely philosophic Upaniṣads.

In conclusion, a few words may be said as to the relation of Āraṇyaka III to the other Vedic texts of similar content. It is of course very closely related to the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka VII, VIII, with which it agrees verbally in some parts, showing that both versions go back to a not very distant common ancestor. But on the whole the version of the Śāṅkhāyana seems the more modern in several respects.¹

The Saṃhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa is certainly a much more recent work. Burnell, in the preface to his edition, has urged general considerations for its comparatively late date. It shows a considerable advance of phonetic science, and mentions such points as lopa, atihāra, rephasandhi, and visargopagraha, while it deals with the svaras. Three sorts of Saṃhitā are distinguished, the deva, asura, and ṛṣi, an artificial conception. The Saṃhitā is also considered as śuddhā, aduḥspṛṣṭā, and anirbhuja. In the last section philosophy has degenerated into meaningless formulae, and the demand for gifts in Section IV is beneath the dignity of the older Āraṇyakas and Upaniṣads. Nor is it without significance that in so short a text are found sukhībhavati and gulmībhūtā, forms rare indeed in the older texts,² while the only narrative tense found is the perfect³ (in III), and the language is classical.

The Āraṇyaka III is also in all probability older than Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 3, which appears, as will be seen from the note on III, 1, 2, to be an enlarged version of the older Saṃhitā doctrine, although it seems likely that the Upaniṣad is much older than the Saṃhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa.

VI. Style and Grammar.

In this connexion it will be sufficient to consider the first three Āraṇyakas as forming one whole, as distinct from the fifth Āraṇyaka, and to disregard the differences in date among their parts. The quotations contained in the fourth Āraṇyaka, and also scattered throughout the rest of the work, may be left out of consideration until later (p. 74).

The prose of the Āraṇyaka is of considerable historic interest. The history of Sanskrit prose is one of continual degradation so far as the grammatical structure of the language is concerned. Classical prose, whatever the subject-matter, whether romance, as in Subandhu and Bāṇa, fable, as in the Pañcatantra, or philosophy, is composed in a style which combines all the disadvantages of an inflected with those of an uninflected language. It is characterized by the use of enormous compounds which, in addition to rendering comprehension of the meaning intended difficult and slow, make all precision impossible, and by the consequent paucity of verbal forms. The proportion of finite verbs to other forms of speech steadily decreases, and among finite forms the present indicative and the imperfect are predominant. Sentences are constantly cast in the passive, and the past participle passive becomes extremely frequent. A further economy in the use of finite verbs is effected by the employment of the gerund, which can conveniently convey a large variety of meanings, and take the place of subordinate clauses denoting time, cause, concession, &c. The past tenses, imperfect, aorist, and perfect, when the two latter occur, are used without discrimination of meaning. All clearness, precision, and accuracy are lost, and in addition to the disappearance of much that was merely superfluous in the older style the new prose loses the chance of variation by giving up the use of all but a few particles, and by diminishing the number of its prepositions.

¹ I have had available for comparison the MS. Sansk. e. 2 of the Bodleian Library, described in Winternitz and Keith's Catalogue, pp. 59, 60, and, as I fear Dr. Friedländer will not carry out his projected edition, I have not refrained

The prose of the first three Āraṇyakas is free from many of these faults. The use of compounds is, as in the Brāhmaṇas, generally restricted to combinations of two members for the most part, with a few exceptions easily explained, like manovākprāṇasaṃhataḥ (III, 1, 1), and the two members stand in natural relations. The use of finite verbal forms is in no way restricted, and both aorist and perfect are used normally with correctness. Passive forms are comparatively rare, and the gerund is quite infrequent. The subjunctive is still occasionally used in persons other than the first, while the use of particles is comparatively varied. The style is essentially simple and natural in grammatical structure in comparison with the artifice of the later prose, while it possesses a considerable number of variant forms which reveal the poverty of the classical style. But beyond simplicity it has little to commend it. Prof. Macdonell¹ has described the style of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa in words which also apply well to the Aitareya Āraṇyaka, as 'crude, clumsy, abrupt, and elliptical'. The art of constructing sentences is entirely wanting; a long series of co-ordinate clauses takes the place of due subordination, and an inordinate love for parallelism of structure is the chief sign of conscious literary effort (cf. II, 1, 4 ; 4, 3). There is no power of transition from thought to thought, and in other cases it is difficult to tell whether it is the thought which is defective or the language which has failed to express it (cf. e.g. II, 1, 2 : na tasyeṣe yan nādyād yad vainaṃ nādyuḥ ; II, 1, 5 : na tasyeṣe yan mahyaṃ na dadyuḥ). Some defects it shares with all Sanskrit prose. Although it has at command a considerable range of particles, it fails to use them with any clear discrimination of sense, thus contrasting with the analogous phenomena in Greek literature where a delicate discrimination in the use of particles runs on from Homeric into classical Greek. Again, although it commands a wide range of pronominal forms, they are not used with any clear difference of sense, and indeed a characteristic of the Aitareya, as of all Brāhmaṇa prose, is the use of double pronouns, like sa eṣa, without the slightest real difference of sense from the single pronouns. The same result, lack of precision, arises from the free use of the cases of the noun and the absence of prepositions to define exactly the sense intended.

But utterly lacking as is the style in precision, balance, and elegance, and although the Āraṇyaka is destitute of any attempt at ornament, it has nevertheless a certain fitness to its subject-matter. The naïve speculations, the vague guessings after truth, the confusion of thought, which make up the matter, are not inadequately mirrored in the harsh abruptness and elliptic brevity of the style, and a certain variety is introduced in the frequent quotations of verses intended to bear out the argument.

The historical position of the prose is not open to serious doubt. It cannot be contemporary with the classical prose of the Kāvya type, and it is clearly anterior to the prose of the Sūtras. This is shown not merely by the disuse in the Sūtras of various grammatical forms still found in the Āraṇyaka, but still more by the form of the Sūtras. The Āraṇyaka is written in prose as a literary composition ; other Sūtras consist merely of strings of rules, and though, as Dr. Knauer in his edition of the Gobhiliya Gṛhya Sūtra, and Hillebrandt in his edition of the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra have shown, they can be construed as texts written continuously, still such compositions must be later than original prose works. On the other hand, not only does the Āraṇyaka contain fewer grammatical antiquities than the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, but it is written in a more developed style and with a greater approach to a command over the language.

The style shows also interesting affinities with that of the Buddhist Pāli Sūtras. It is impossible not to recognize in both the same long lists (e.g. II, 6) of names of mental phenomena, in which thought is hidden under meaningless verbal distinctions. Similar in both is the affection for parallelism of structure and the remorseless love of completeness which insists on repeating in every detail ideas applicable to more than one subject in every instance in which they apply, while the set formulae with which the Pāli Sūtras open and close have close parallels in the Āraṇyaka.

On the whole the vocabulary of the Āraṇyaka shows little that is remarkable; a few R̥gvedic words are used with direct reference to the passages in the Saṃhitā in which they occur. Viśva is found only in the phrase viśve devāḥ and twice in etymologies, I, 2, 2; II, 2, 1. Yathā tu kathā ca occurs twice, III, 1, 3; 4. Other interesting words are āyattāḥ, III, 1, 2, from √yat, to stretch; āndam, III, 1, 2; addhātamau, I, 2, 3; bidale, III, 1, 2; baṭarakāṇi, III, 2, 4; mañjiṣṭhā, III, 2, 4; saṃbālhatamāḥ from √banh, I, 4, 1; bisāni, III, 2, 4, and bṛsiḥ, I, 2, 4, where the dental s is remarkable; dutāḥ, I, 4, 1, which is taken by Sāyaṇa from √du gatau; ulbaniṣṇu, II, 3, 8; āvayat, II, 4, 3, which is usually derived from √av, meaning 'devour'; santani, I, 2, 2; viṣṭapam, II, 1, 2; vikṣudram, I, 5, 1; vijavaḥ, of doubtful number, I, 4, 1; sattiyam for satyam, II, 1, 5; saṃānodarkam, I, 5, 3; stomātisaṃsanāyai, I, 4, 1; antastyam, I, 5, 1; kṣudramiśrāṇi, II, 6; udbhijjāni, II, 6, &c.

Throughout between vowels ḍ and ḍh are written ḷ and ḷh. This is carefully observed in the best MSS. and has been followed consistently. In II, 4, 3, saiṣo is supported by the MSS.; and in III, 2, 4, mayūrāgrīvāmeghe seems to stand for mayūragrīvā(h) ameghe, and cf. acyoṣṭhāvarābhyām, III, 1, 3. Namo astu is the form in the MSS. in III, 1, 3; 4, and they read in III, 1, 2: tasmin ha smin. Irregular lengthening of vowels appears in iū nu, III, 1, 2, and viyūyā, II, 3, 8, in the latter case in a verse. The sandhi of au is peculiar; it becomes āv before all vowels except u or ū, when it becomes ā. The same rule is usually followed in the Aitareya and other Brāhmaṇas (Aufrecht's ed., p. 427).

In noun and adjective declension there are few irregularities. Ātman,

I, 5, 2, occurs besides ātmani, II, 5; śirṣau, I, 5, 2, also is found. Akṣībhyām, II, 4, 1 (cf. Ṛgveda, X, 163), shows irregular lengthening of the vowel. Āpaḥ, II, 4, 1, appears to be an accusative as not seldom elsewhere. Aikyā, III, 2, 3, is perhaps a neuter instrumental. The genitive singular of nouns and adjectives and pronouns which show āḥ in the Ṛgveda and in the later language have ai as usual in the Brāhmaṇas. The only exceptions appear to be prthivyāḥ, II, 1, 7; III, 1, 2; asyāḥ, and amuṣyāḥ, III, 1, 2; 2, 5. In the ablative is found brhatyai, II, 3, 6; asyai pratiṣṭhāyai, I, 2, 4; of superlatives, brahmatatamam, II, 4, 3, for brahmatatatamam, and annatamāṃ pratyacyante, I, 4, 1, are remarkable. Catuṣpādūḥ and catuṣpātsu occur in I, 1, 2, with a v. l. catuṣpādah. Navasrakti in II, 3, 6, anomalously appears to stand for navasraktiḥ. Enat in II, 4, 3, is apparently a nominative as in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 22, and if so parāṇ is used as a neuter. Nābhyaḥ with the longer form occurs in II, 4, 1, in the ablative. Enam is used almost as an adjective, III, 1, 3. Imasmai occurs in II, 3, 7.

The numerals show certain interesting forms. Ekayā na triṃśat occurs in I, 1, 2. Besides sapta śatāni viṃśatiś ca, III, 2, 1, appears sapta viṃśatisatāni, III, 2, 1; so also trīṇi ṣaṣṭiśatāni (= 360), III, 2, 1; and pañca catvāriṃśatsatāni (= 540), III, 2, 2, as usual in the Brāhmaṇas. The form ṣaṭtriṃśatam sahasrāni, II, 2, 4; 3, 8, denotes 36,000, and may be considered, perhaps, like ṣaṭtriṃśatam ekapādāḥ, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 1, as an irregular use of accusative for nominative; cf. pañcaviṃśatiṃ sāmīdhenyah, V, 1, 1.

Among verbal forms may be noted the Vedic forms, duhe, I, 3, 2, and īse, II, 1, 2, 5, as third persons; both these forms occur in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. As in that Brāhmaṇa unaugmented forms occur in īkṣata, II, 4, 1; 3; and pādi, II, 1, 2. Upaniṣasasāda in II, 2, 3, is supported by all the MSS. Abhivyaikhyat in II, 4, 3, appears, if the reading is correct, to be the aorist of abhivikhyā with the vi augmented. Atrapṣyat and the irregular agrahaiṣyat, II, 4, 3, are examples of the rare conditional. The perfects dādhāra, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 7; and bībhāya, I, 3, 4, occur also in the Brāhmaṇa. Dadyṣe, II, 1, 3; 8; and mene, III, 1, 1, are, the former certainly, the latter probably, passive. The √kr alone is used as an auxiliary in the periphrastic perfect, viz. upāsāṃ cakrire, II, 1, 8, and vedayāṃ cakre, III, 1, 1. The following desiderative forms occur: īpsati, II, 3, 2; īpsantaḥ, I, 1, 1; vicikitset, III, 2, 6; ajighrkṣat, II, 4, 3; atyajighāṃsat, II, 4, 3; abhilitṛtsati, I, 3, 1; bībhatseta, II, 3, 7; mīmāṃsante, III, 2, 3; viruruciṣeta, III, 2, 5; and the rare aorist samadhitsiṣam, III, 2, 5, which is a distinct sign of antiquity. The only intensives are poplūyante, sarīṣpyante, I, 3, 5, and probably the form vāvadiṣat, II, 4, 3, which I take as an aorist subjunctive, also an old form. The denominative patiyasi occurs in I, 3, 5. For the infinitive and subjunctive forms see below. There are no irregularities in the use of °tvā and °ya, such irregularities being characteristic especially in the case of °ya of epic style, not of the Vedic style. The gerund in am appears in praṇāvam and chandaskāram, I, 5, 1. It may be noted that in II, 1, 4, smak is substituted for smasi of the quotation. Āttam, II, 3, 6, and apikitā, III, 2, 5, may also be mentioned.

Very characteristic of the early date of the Āraṇyaka is the separation of prefixes and their verbs. It is not normal; the great majority of prefixes are placed immediately before the verb, and I have accordingly printed them as forming compounds. But the older tradition survives in the following cases: ati-manyeta, II, 3, 3; anu-yujyate, II, 3, 8 (in a verse); abhi-samvahanṭi, ibid.; ā-gachati, gachataḥ, gachanti, I, 1, 4; ā-jāyate, II, 3, 1; abhi-tyjati, I, 3, 1; parā-bhavati, II, 1, 4, &c.; adhi-caranti, bhavati, jāyate, II, 3, 1.

Pluti and the consequent lengthening of the vowels concerned occurs sporadically. The MSS. differ considerably, like the editions, in noting the Pluti, and it has as a rule been considered proper to insert it in the text only where Sāyaṇa mentions its presence.

In regard to syntax it may be noted that the rules of concord are usually carefully followed as in all old works. In II, 1, 7, examples will be found of a masculine and a feminine singular, and a masculine and a neuter singular, being accompanied by a verb in the dual, and a plural masculine accompanies a feminine plural and a masculine singular. Ādam in III, 1, 2, is unusual, as ādaḥ would be expected, but cf. sarvam asāni, I, 5, 2; samānam aśitayaḥ, II, 1, 2. In III, 2, 4, etesām kimcid occurs, although svapnānām is to be understood. The usual attraction to the number and gender of the predicate occurs in I, 4, 1: athāto vijavas tā virāḷo bhavanti; II, 6, 1, &c. The plural in adyuḥ, II, 1, 2, and dadyuḥ, II, 1, 5, offers difficulties.

In the use of the pronouns there is little of note. The forms of the base enad occur frequently, but as in all the Brāhmaṇas the pronouns are used in a very confusing and inaccurate way. Double pronouns are very common: e.g. sa eṣaḥ, II, 1, 5; 8; 3, 3; 6; 4, 3; III, 1, 1; 2, 4, &c.; saiṣā, II, 3, 6; 4, 3; III, 1, 6; tad etad, II, 1, 2; 3, 6; 4, 3; tasyaitasya, (neut.) II, 2, 4; III, 2, 1; (masc.) III, 2, 1; 3; tasyā etasyai, (gen.) III, 2, 6; tā etāḥ, II, 1, 4; 2, 2; 3, 3; 4, 2; etat tad, II, 1, 8; tam imam, I, 1, 2; tad idam, II, 1, 2; tā imāḥ, II, 1, 1; tānīmāni, II, 1, 1; so 'yam, II, 5, 1; seyam, II, 1, 2; tasya me, II, 2, 3; ya eṣaḥ, II, 2, 1; yo 'yam, III, 2, 3, &c. Ya forms numerous indefinite combinations which are given in the Index, s. v. The usual correlations are ya and sa; e.g. ye-te, II, 1, 1, &c.; yad-tad, II, 3, 6, &c. More unusual are tad etad-yad etad, II, 1, 2; yad etad-tad etad, II, 5, 1; etad-yad etad, II, 3, 6; yad etad-tad, II, 3, 7. In one case it is uncertain whether a relative is not omitted, viz. II, 5: ko 'yam ātmeti vāyam upāsmahe, where yam may be read.

In case construction there is the usual freedom. The accusative denotes duration of time in śatam varṣāni, II, 2, 1; saṃvatsaram gā rakṣayate, III, 1, 6, where the use of the historic present is to be noted; ahorātre varṣati, III, 1, 2, where the meaning is 'day and night continuously'. The cognate accusative appears in atyāyam āyan, II, 1, 1, and kākakulāyagandhikam vāyati, III, 2, 4. Other uses are: sarvam madhyato dadhe, II, 2, 1; enam atikṣaranti, II, 2, 2; jyotiḥ prakāśam karoti, II, 1, 8; aḥaḥ śamset, III, 2, 4. More unusual is the use of the accusative as if in apposition to the main sentence, as in īryatām cābhyutthānam ca, I, 5, 1. The instrumental is used with √stu: mahāvratena stuvīta, III, 2, 4. The dative is used with √arc: sarvebhyo bhūtebhyo 'rcata, II, 2, 2, and sarvebhyo 'rdheebhyo 'rcata, ibid., which is probably an extension of the usual dativus commodi found in the same passage with kṣarati. The date of 'work contemplated' appears in puṇyebhyaḥ karmabhyaḥ pratidhīyate, II, 5. Other datives used predicatively are practically equivalent to infinitives, see below. In sarvebhyo bhūtebhyo dadṛṣe, II, 1, 3; 8, the case may be dative or ablative. The ablative follows anyat in anyat kuśalād brāhmaṇam brūyāt, III, 1, 3 (cf. I, 1, 2), when the double accusative is interesting. In III, 2, 4, ātmana evāsya tat kṛtam bhavati, ātmana may stand for ātmanah, a predicative genitive, or for ātmane, a dativus commodi; the former view is supported by V, 3, 3, ātmano haivāsya tac chastam bhavati. In either case asya is to be taken probably directly with kṛtam and śastam; cf. naḥ proktam, III, 2, 1; asya-uditam, II, 1, 5. Worthy of note is the construction in

III, 2, 1, tasyaitasya trayasyāsthānāṃ majjñāṃ parvaṇāṃ iti. Iti cannot here mean 'et cetera', and the most probable explanation is that the preceding genitive attracted the subsequent nouns. Compare the not infrequent use of iti with the accusative for iti with the nominative found several times in as early a work as the Bṛhaddevatā. For the locative there is the rare sense 'for the sake of' in etasyāṃ smopaniṣadi, III, 1, 6. The use of the accusative and dative with $\sqrt{ād}$ may be noted, I, 1, 1. In the verses in II, 3, 8, astripumān is used instead of the accusative with bruvan.

With regard to prepositions, ā is separated from the ablative by several words in āhaṃ mām devebhyo veda oṃad devān veda, II, 1, 8. The phrase ubhayam antareṇa in III, 1, 3, is used as an undeclinable noun in the accusative and locative. See also Index V, s. vv. adhi, abhi, ā, parastād, pari.

With reference to the use of the numbers, naḥ in III, 2, 1, may denote the school of the teacher, Śākalya, and may be contrasted with the singular of the Buddhist style, evaṃ me sutam. Compare iti naḥ śrutih, Bṛhaddevatā, VI, 148. The same plural, which is the source of the plural of authorship, appears passim in Āraṇyaka III, in the verb.

The use of the tenses of the indicative is of special importance, as it enables us to confirm the views already arrived at as to the date of the Āraṇyaka. The case of the aorist is the simplest, and may be taken first. In the whole Āraṇyaka I-III, the aorist has its true use in the Brāhmaṇas, viz. that of a proximate past. The examples are: udagāt, I, 3, 4; samāgāt, II, 1, 5; samagāt, III, 1, 1; upāgāḥ, II, 2, 3; adarśam, II, 4, 3; acyoṣṭhāḥ, III, 1, 3; āraḥ, III, 1, 3; śamadhām, III, 1, 4; samadhitsiṣam, III, 2, 5; agamat, III, 1, 6; avocāma, III, 2, 2; 3; avocata, II, 2, 2; aśāri, II, 1, 4; prātāyi, II, 1, 5. The exceptions are: abhiprāgāt, which occurs twice in II, 2, 2¹, and pādi, which also occurs twice in that passage. In these cases the sense perhaps rather is equivalent to a present than to a narrative imperfect. Abhivyaikhyat, II, 4, 3, must be as narrative aorist, but the form is so extraordinary that it is almost certain that *abhivyaikṣat*² should be read, for the Parasmaipada of $\sqrt{ikṣ}$ is found though sporadically. The regularity of the use of the aorist is conclusive for a relatively early date.

Whitney¹ has shown that the use of the imperfect and perfect as narrative tenses varies greatly in the several Brāhmaṇas, and it is now² usually considered fair to regard the increasing use of the perfect as an indication of relatively late date. The facts of the case are as follows. In Āraṇyaka I there are seven occurrences of the imperfect from five roots (abhavat (3),³ udayachat, samajānata, apāhata, vyāharat). Of perfects, omitting āha and veda which are used frequently, as throughout the literature, as presents, there occur bībhāya, I, 3, 4; dādhāra, I, 5, 2; vivyāca, I, 5, 2, used in a present sense. This is probably a sign of early date, since in the Ṛgveda the present sense of the perfect is decidedly frequent. Of narrative perfects āsa occurs twice for a special reason, I, 2, 2, and vivyāca once in I, 2, 2, the latter in connexion with udayachat. It may, however, have a present sense. In Āraṇyaka II, 1-3, there are sixty-seven occurrences⁴ from twenty-three forms of nineteen roots (āyan (3), apadyata (3), abhavat (7), abhavatām, abhavan, abravīt (3), abruvan (6), asarpāt (2), aśrayata (2), ahimsanta (2), udakrāmat (5), āsta (5), anayanta, atāyata, arcat (4), arcata (4), āsīt (2), atrāyata (2), apavayata (2), aśiryata, aviśat (5), aśayat (4), atiṣṭhat). There are also in the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, the forms avindan and atṛpyan (2). On the other hand the only perfects used in narrative are (except in II, 2, 3 and 4), babhūvuh, II, 1, 8, and parābabhūvuh, ibid., and II, 1, 1, three occurrences of one root (cf. the use of āsa twice in Āraṇyaka I). In II, 2, 3 and 4, however, no imperfects occur, but seventeen instances from seven forms of six roots of perfects occur in narrative (in II, 2, 3, upaṇiṣasasāda, śaśaṃsa (3), upeyāya (3), uvāca (6); in II, 2, 4, babhūva, lebhe, provāca (2)). It is impossible to assume that this can be accidental, and the only fair conclusion is that these sections are not by the same hand as the rest of II, 2, a conclusion which runs in no way counter to their contents, which stand in no organic relation to II, 2, 1 or 2. The latter fact would, in so incoherent a work as II, 2, be quite insufficient as an argument for difference of authorship, but the argument from syntax seems irresistible. It may also be pointed out that in the parallel passage to II, 2, 3, the dialogue of Viśvāmitra and Indra, in Śāṅkhāyana

Āraṇyaka I, 6, there occur—as usually in the rest of the Āraṇyaka—perfects, upajagāma (cf. upayāya), uvāca, and ūce. There must be a common source for the two narratives despite the difference of their present forms, and it must have used perfects in narrative. Besides these narrative perfects, perfects in the present sense occur in dādhāra, II, 1, 7; dadṛṣe, II, 1, 3; 8, both of which are conjoined with present tenses.

In Āraṇyaka II, 4-6, occur sixty-one examples of the imperfect from twenty-three forms of nineteen roots (āsīt, asṛjata, ikṣata (5), amūrchayat, atapat (2), abhidyata (5), abhidyetām (3), apatan, ārjat, abravīt (2), abrūtām, abruvan (4), anayat (3), aviśat (5), aviśan (3), ajāyata (2), ajighāṃsat, ajighṛkṣat (8), aśaknot (7), āvayat, apadyata, apaśyat, abhavat (2). The only narrative perfect is uvāca, II, 5, and there is one present perfect, dadhe, II, 2, 1.

In Āraṇyaka III occur aśraṃsata and adadhāt (2), III, 1, 6, and the present perfects, mene, III, 1, 1; viduḥ, III, 2, 5.

The two periphrastic perfects, upāsām cakrire, II, 1, 8, and vedayāṃ cakre, III, 1, 1, may both be narrative perfects, but the latter may be a present perfect.

The results may be tabulated as follows, omitting periphrastic forms; the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, are not taken into account. The numbers in brackets denote the number of roots.

| Āraṇyaka. | Imperfects. | Present Perfects. | Narrative Perfects. |
|------------------|-------------|-------------------|---|
| I, | 7 (5) | 3 (3) | 3 (2, āsa and vivāca (?)) |
| II, 1; 2, 1-2; 3 | 67 (19) | 2 (2) | 3 (1, babhūvuh) |
| II, 2, 3-4 | None | None | 17 (6) |
| II, 4-6 | 61 (19) | 1 (1) | None |

The fair conclusion is that the Āraṇyaka is older than the later books, VI-VIII, of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as is indeed probable in view of the much more developed narrative style of the Śunaḥśepa legend. It is probably older than parts (if not the whole) of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, viz. I-V, X, XII-XIV, including the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, which uses the narrative perfect throughout. In view of the copious and rich style of that Upaniṣad, with its wealth of metaphor, ease of motion, and dignity, it seems impossible to doubt that it belongs to a much later period than the Aitareya, just as we have seen that its philosophic content goes far beyond that of the Aitareya. Bearing in mind that the Bṛhadāraṇyaka shows considerable evidence of the activity of the Kṣatriyas, and that the perfect as a narrative tense is common in the Epic, it may be suggested that the origin of the narrative use in the Brāhmaṇas is to be found in a borrowing from the style of the old Itihāsa literature. It is perhaps not without significance that such legends as that of Śunaḥśepa, Purūravas and Urvaśi (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 1), Cyavana (ibid., IV, 1, 5), and, in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka itself, that of Viśvāmitra, II, 2, 3, should be told in perfects. It may be noted that in the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XV, 17 sq., the Śunaḥśepa legend is also set out in perfects. The Brāhmaṇa use of the perfect is as a present, while both usages are found in the earlier language of the R̥gveda Saṃhitā. The older is undoubtedly the Brāhmaṇa use, as it corresponds most closely with the use of the Greek perfect as a completed action or state (cf. Monro, *Homeric Grammar*², p. 31).

The future indicative is used in its ordinary way as denoting future time in assertions or questions, but the so-called second future never occurs, as it does, e.g. in the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa.

The optative is of comparatively very frequent occurrence. (1) Its use as denoting wish is infrequent, the subjunctive usually being preferred, but (2) its use in directions as a mild imperative occurs passim. (3) It is also used in questions to express doubt, precisely as is used the subjunctive with which it alternates in II, 4, 3: katham nu idaṃ mad ṛte syāt katareṇa prapadyai. (4) Its most characteristic use in the Āraṇyaka is in the protasis and apodosis of conditional sentences. In the apodosis it may denote either direction or the potential. In all cases the condition is one referring to the future, and is of the type, 'If A happens, then B will happen, or should be done.' Examples of two potentials are yadi-aśnuvīta-manyeta, II, 3, 3; so III, 1, 6; (with yad = if) II, 3, 6; III, 2, 2; (with yathā) III, 1, 3; 4. Examples of a potential protasis and imperative apodosis are: (with yadī) I, 1, 1; III, 1, 3; 6; 2, 4; 6; (with relatives) I, 2, 2; III, 2, 4; 5, and without any particle, paśyet-dṛṣyeyātām-vidyāt, III, 2, 4; with double protasis, upaśṛṇuyāt-yadā śṛṇuyāt-vidyāt, III, 2, 4. (5) Arising from this potential use the optative appears as an indefinite, like the Greek subjunctive and optative or the Latin subjunctive. This is possibly the explanation of the difficult phrases in II, 1, 2: na tasyeṣe yan nādyād yad vainaṃ nādyuḥ; II, 1, 5: na tasyeṣe yan mahyaṃ na dadyuḥ, though the meaning might be merely a future. Definitely indefinite is III, 2, 1, yathā śālavanṣe sarve 'nyā vaṃsāḥ samāhitāḥ syuh, since the apodosis is an assertion of fact. (6) An optative of characteristic, that is of result, is found in III, 2, 3, brahmāṇam-kurvīta yo-paśyet. It will be seen that none of these usages offer any difficulty of explanation on the now generally accepted theory¹ that the optative is originally a weak future in sense.

As in other languages the indicative can be used modally, and in conditional sentences this use is well developed in the Āraṇyaka. In II, 3, 3, yady antarikṣalokam aśnute 'ty enam manyate is clearly modal, and is followed by yadi-aśnuvīta-manyeta. So yatra vihiyete-vidyāt in III, 2, 4. Hence indicatives are sometimes combined with optatives in protases of conditional sentences; the following occur in III, 2, 4: yatra-dṛśyate-paśyet-na paśyet-paśyeta, vidyāt; yatra-dṛśyate-abhikhyāyeta-paśyet, vidyāt; upekṣeta-tad yathā-dṛśyante-yadā na paśyet, vidyāt; III, 1, 4, ya-upavadet-cen manyeta-āha, brūyāt. The indicative also occurs in conditions where the fact is asserted in the apodosis (with yadi), e.g. II, 4, 3, or when the protasis and apodosis refer to the future, e.g. yasmin paśyati-bhaviṣyati, II, 1, 4.

The only case of a condition in the past which was not fulfilled occurs in II, 4, 3, yad hainad vācāgrahaiṣyad abhivyāhṛtya haivānnam atrapṣyat, &c., where the conditional is correctly employed. This accuracy in the use of the conditional and generally in the use of the optative is characteristic of an early date.

The subjunctive is of comparatively frequent occurrence, usually in the first person. It denotes (a) resolve: praviśāma, utkrāmāma, II, 1, 4; srjāi, II, 4, 1; 3; adāma (in a relative clause), II, 4, 2; (b) desire: asāni, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 4; 2, 2; asat, I, 4, 3; 5, 1; āpnavāni, I, 4, 3; 5, 2; avaruṇadhāi, I, 4, 3; aśnavai, I, 4, 3; (c) doubt in questions: bravāṇi, III, 2, 6; prapadyai, II, 4, 3; vāvadiṣat, II, 4, 3, if this is so taken; (d) with ned: ucchidyai, I, 2, 4; asat, I, 5, 2.

The imperative occurs several times, but there is no instance of the use of mā, except in II, 7, 1, which is not genuine, where mā prahāsiḥ (or prahāsit) is found. The Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, XI, 6, has mā with the future.

The infinitive in tum occurs only twice, in both cases with the verb

Latin Language, pp. 511-516).

śak, saṃdhātum nāśakah, III, 1, 4; śaknot-grahitum, II, 4, 3. This is consistent with the early date of the Āraṇyaka. On the other hand, as in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, īśvara is construed with the infinitive in toḥ, bhavitoḥ, II, 3, 5; 6; caritoḥ, I, 1, 1; praitoḥ, II, 3, 5. Mention should also be made of a series of datives formed from verbal roots by the affix tyai which serve as predicative datives signifying that to which an active tends, viz. klptyai, I, 3, 8; abhijityai, I, 1, 2; prajātyai, I, 2, 4; 3, 1; 4; 4, 1; saṃtatyai, II, 5; āptyai, I, 1, 3; 2, 1; 3; 3, 8; abhyāptyai, I, 4, 2; upāptyai, I, 3, 7; avaruddhyai, I, 1, 2, &c.; apahatyai (probably), I, 2, 2. The use of these forms is not precisely that of infinitives, but it is analogous and forms a distinct feature of the style of the Āraṇyaka. Similar forms occur in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa.

The injunctive, except in the form of the second person plural imperative, occurs only in arjayan, I, 5, 2.

In the use of participles the most characteristic feature is their use in place of finite verbs, a use arising from their employment as predicative adjectives. In the following cases the substantive verb is expressed: uktam bhavati, I, 3, 8; II, 1, 5; 8; III, 2, 4; uditam bhavati, II, 1, 5; viṣṭo 'smi, II, 2, 3; vyāptam bhavati, III, 1, 3; saṃāhitāḥ syuḥ, III, 2, 1; kr̥tam bhavati, III, 2, 4; apikhitā bhavati, III, 2, 5; anuśaktāḥ gsat, I, 5, 2. In all these cases the expression means more than the corresponding form of the finite verb would have conveyed, and denotes a completed action whose results persist in the present. The accurate use of these forms is a distinct sign of early style. The same remark applies to most of the cases of the use without the copula: sthitam, I, 1, 1; pratiṣṭhitam, I, 1, 2; pratiṣṭhitāḥ, I, 2, 2; 4, 2; pratiṣṭhitā, I, 3, 4; viṣṭāḥ, viṣṭāḥ, I, 3, 8; āviṣṭāḥ, niviṣṭāḥ, II, 1, 1; śritāḥ, I, 5, 3; II, 1, 4; channaḥ, II, 1, 6; sr̥ṣṭau, sr̥ṣṭāḥ, II, 1, 7; āttam, II, 3, 6; āvṛtam, II, 1, 6; viṣṭabdhāḥ, viṣṭabdhāni, II, 1, 6; sitam, II, 1, 6; niviṣṭāḥ, II, 3, 3; saṃāhitāḥ, III, 2, 1; vyastāḥ, III, 2, 4; samparetaḥ, III, 2, 4; in these instances the effect persists into the present, and no examples of a use like dr̥ṣṭā = 'she was seen', occur. In II, 4, 3, yadi vācābhivyaḥṛtam, &c., the sense approximates very closely to a mere present passive indicative.

There is no instance of the participle in vat formed from the past participle passive, which is so common later. That participle occurs also combined with the participle of √as: duṭāḥ satyaḥ, I, 4, 1; siktam sat, I, 4, 2.

In one case the present participle is combined with the $\sqrt{\text{as}}$: tapann asmi, II, 2, 3, expressing a continuing present. It is used with $\sqrt{\text{man}}$ in śaknuvan manyeta-aśaknuvantam manyeta, III, 1, 4, where the change of case is remarkable. Note also anūdgṛhnan saṃdadhad varṣati, III, 1, 2.

The gerund appears equivalent to a present participle in himṛtya pratipadyate, I, 3, 1, where the action of the verb and participle are simultaneous (cf. my note on the gerund, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 164).

The gerundive karaṇīyam is used with $\sqrt{\text{man}}$ in III, 2, 4. Here may be noted the strange form abhivyāhārṣan, III, 1, 6, which has the sense of a future participle and the form of a participle of the s aorist. No correction seems probable as hārṣyan (cf. Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 846) is impossible.

The use of conjunctive particles is marked by the number of combinations allowed as contrasted with the comparatively barren character of the later language. In most of them ha plays some part. Examples are: ha vai, I, 2, 1, &c.; II, 1, 2, &c.; III, 1, 2, &c.; na ha vai, I, 2, 1; 5, 2; III, 2, 2; u haiva, I, 3, 8; II, 2, 4; evam u haiva, I, 3, 4; 8; atho-ha vai, I, 4, 2; haiva, I, 5, 2; II, 1, 4; 8; 3, 7; 4, 3; u ha sma, I, 1, 1, &c.; evam u ha sma, III, 1, 2; ha sma vai, I, 1, 3; II, 1, 5; 8; 2, 4; III, 2, 5; 6; ha sma, II, 3, 5; 7; III, 1, 3; 2, 1; ha tu, II, 3, 5; atha ha, III, 1, 1; 5; u ha-u, I, 3, 3; athāpi, III, 2, 4; atha khalu, III, 1, 5; 2, 5; athātah, I, 4, 1, &c.; atho, I, 1, 2, &c.; u khalu, III, 1, 6; u eva, II, 1, 1; 2, 1; III, 1, 3; tv eva, I, 1, 1; 5, 2; II, 1, 4; tasmād hāpy etarhi, II, 1, 8; utāpi, III, 1, 2; ahaiva (?), II, 1, 2.

Of single conjunctions the use of ca is most important. The regular use is ca-ca, a formalism distinctly indicative of age; see I, 1, 4; 2, 3; 3, 1; 2, 4; 5; 7; 5, 1; II, 1, 2; 6; 7; 8; 2, 2; 6, 1; III, 1, 1; 6; 2, 3; and in I, 1, 2, chandaḥ is in apposition to byhatim ca virājam ca. A single ca is practically restricted to numerals, e.g. vimśatiś ca, II, 3, 6. In I, 2, 2, is found ca-ca-ca; and in II, 6; III, 1, 6, ca-ca-ca-ca. In the Ślokas in II, 3, 8, appears yad-yac ca-yac ca-yad u ca. These facts render the usual division of vayāmsi vaṅgāvagadhās cerapādāḥ, II, 1, 1, into ca īrapādāḥ excessively improbable. Iva is used frequently (see reff. in Index V) in a sense hardly differing from eva, as is also the case in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, though it can always be translated 'as it were', merely modifying the literal sense of the verb; cf. I, 1, 2:

cirataṃ iva vā-āgachanti. Vā has the sense 'indeed' as well as that of 'or', but a single vā is more common than a double vā, unlike the case of ca. Hanta is used with the subjunctive, II, 1, 4, as in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. Iti has as usual a large variety of uses, and is never misplaced. Cana in III, 1, 3; 4, following na appears to have the force of 'even'. Kāmam, I, 1, 1; III, 2, 4; vata, II, 2, 2; 4, 2; and vāva, I, 3, 4, &c., also occur. Aha is contrasted with u in II, 3, 7.

The same relative wealth is seen in the case of correlative particles. The most common form is yad-tad, denoting time or cause, or comparison, I, 1, 1; 3, 1; II, 1, 4; 2, 2; 5, 1; III, 1, 3; variants are yat-tena, III, 2, 6; yat-tasmāt, II, 1, 6; 2, 1; 2; 3, 6; III, 2, 6, more definitely signifying cause. So yad hi-tasmāt, II, 1, 3. A characteristic and frequent type of sentence is I, 1, 3, tad yan mādhuḥchandasaṃ śamsati sarveṣāṃ kāmānāṃ avaruddhyai; cf. I, 2, 2, &c. Yathā is usually balanced by evam, II, 1, 6; 3, 5; III, 1, 2; 2, 1; 5; it stands alone in yathāṇḍam, II, 4, 1; yathā svam aṅgam, II, 5, 1. It is balanced by tathā in yathā prthivī tathā, &c., in II, 1, 2. In I, 3, 1, is yathā vai-evam. Yatra either has no correlative, as in III, 2, 4, or is balanced by tad, II, 1, 8; tad utāpi, III, 1, 2; tadā, III, 1, 6. Yadā is balanced by atha, II, 5; yadi ha vā api by haiva, II, 1, 5; yad ha by haiva, II, 4, 3. In III, 1, 3; 4, occurs the phrase yathā tu kathā ca-brūyād-abhyāsaṃ eva yat tathā syāt, where the words abhyāsaṃ eva yat tathā practically form a compound adverb.

Finally it may be mentioned that the grammatical terms yoṣan and vr̥ṣan are used for feminine and masculine, I, 2, 4, as in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 2.

A comparison of the forms and usages cited above with the valuable list of similar forms in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa given by Aufrecht¹ shows conclusively that the Āraṇyaka stands on nearly the same footing as the first five books of the Brāhmaṇa. It is not so old, e.g. it has fewer forms of the subjunctive, no infinitives in -e or -aḥ or -tavaḥ, and none in toḥ after ā or purā, but it is not much younger. The use of the narrative tenses is some argument for its being older than Books VI-VIII, to which otherwise it stands close in point of language, though it is much less developed in style.

The conclusion arrived at above on grounds of doctrine that the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka I, II, is later than the Aitareya Āraṇyaka I-III, is confirmed by the linguistic tests. Generally the two works correspond most closely in vocabulary, and confirm the view that they must be derived ultimately from a common source. For example, Dr. Friedländer well explains atiharān in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 7, as 'laying across', as it means in Aitareya Āraṇyaka, V, 1, 4, and not, as explained by the commentator on the Śrauta Sūtra, in the sense 'withdrawing'. Probably the common source of the two Āraṇyakas had the word which has survived only in the Sūtra part of the Aitareya, but in both the Sūtra and Āraṇyaka of the Śāṅkhāyanas. With the forms quoted above may be compared the irregular sandhi niṣ tad, I, 8; the noun and adjective forms, ātman, I, 8; II, 1; etasyai devatāyai (gen.), I, 8; adhitarām, I, 7; udyatatarah, I, 7; the datives of end served, bhogyāya, I, 8; śāntyai, I, 4; bhīṣajyāyai, I, 4; avāptyai, āptyai, I, 2; II, 6; the constructions īśvaraḥ-nāparājetoh, I, 8; gamīṣyanti bhavati, I, 8; upāptū āsan, I, 6; śamīṣyate, I, 5 (cf. śamīṣyantam, Aitareya, II, 2, 3); yathā-parivyayet-dhatte, II, 16; 1 ad fin.; the use of the particles u vai, I, 1; 3; na ha vai, I, 8; ha vai, I, 5; 7; tathā ha, II, 1; u ha, I, 6; II, 10; the construction of the sentence with tad yad, II, 10; the irregular numeral sapta viṃśatisatāni, II, 10. As has been seen above the narrative perfect occurs in II, 6, the parallel passage to Aitareya, II, 2, 3, and it occurs also in II, 17 (provāca, jīṣva), which may be compared with II, 2, 4, as far as the provāca is concerned. Whereas, however, the perfects in the Aitareya are marked exceptions, there is no other narrative tense in Śāṅkhāyana. Further, the language of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka is much more accurate and modern than that of the Aitareya. Instead of ṣaṭtriṃśataṃ sahasrāṇi the correct ṣaṭtriṃśat is found, II, 17; there are no subjunctives other than those of the first person, which occur with ned, I, 1, as in the Aitareya; there are no irregular forms either of nouns, pronouns, or verbs, save those mentioned above; the aorist is only represented by avocam in I, 6. Ca is used in śastreṇa ca vratacarayā, I, 6, in a way not paralleled in the Aitareya, and in that chapter occurs the form vijīṇāsam eva cakre, a periphrastic perfect of the desiderative, a form elsewhere practically confined to the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa. After making full allowance for the difference of length, the posteriority of the Śāṅkhāyana is almost certain. If, as seems probable, *brahma*¹ and brāhmaṇī in I, 5; 6, refer to Brahman and his wife, who perhaps owes her origin to these passages, then a strong argument is added for the later date of the Śāṅkhāyana, since the Aitareya does not even certainly know Brahman, since the passages in which brahmā certainly appears refer to the Brahman priest, and in all the others brahma may equally well be read. Brahman, however, appears in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 33, 1. Books VII–XIII of the Śāṅkhāyana are still later.

Āraṇyaka V is written in the regular Sūtra style. It is practically impossible to understand it without a commentary, for as usual the rules are condensed into unintelligibility. Characteristic is the weight thrown on single words and phrases, e.g. ajāpayā vṛtā, V, 1, 4; asvāhākāraiḥ, V, 1, 1, and the frequent use of gerunds, besides the piling up of adjectives and adverbial phrases.

In Sandhi it appears that au before u becomes ā, although here, as in Āraṇyaka I–III, the MSS. and the Ānandāśrama edition vary. Unusual forms are ātman, V, 1, 6; uttare (loc.), V, 1, 2; vadatyaḥ, without n, V, 1, 1; ardharcyāḥ, V, 2, 5, meaning 'to be recited by half-verses'; br̥hatikāram, V, 1, 6; gāyatrikāram, V, 3, 1; tr̥tīyavarjam, V, 1, 6; samutah, V, 1, 3. Of desideratives occur jijīviṣet, V, 3, 1; jigamiṣet, V, 1, 4; and, as amended, a desiderative causal cikīrtayiṣet, V, 3, 3. The imperative prabrūtāt occurs, in a direction, in V, 1, 5. The feminine genitive form is āḥ, not ai.

More characteristic is the pregnant use of case constructions, when for the sake of brevity everything is made to depend on the mere case relation, e.g., (accusative) avabr̥tham preṅkham hareyuh, II, 3, 2; apra-kampī, V, 1, 3, in quasi-apposition to the sentence; (dative) niṣkevalyāya stuvate, V, 1, 5; avaśyakarmane jigamiṣet, V, 1, 4; (abl.) hotrās catur-viṃśāt, V, 1, 1; (gen.) mahāvratasya pañcaviṃśatim sāmīdhenyaḥ, V, 1, 1, where the irregular pañcaviṃśatim is also noteworthy; (abl. and gen.) caturviṃśān marutvatīyasyātānaḥ, V, 1, 1; (loc.) dikṣite yajamānaśabdah, V, 1, 5; na vatse ca na tr̥tīye ('in the case of'), V, 3, 3; (loc. and instr.) anyāsu cet samāmnātāsu rājanena sāmṇā stuvīran, V, 1, 6; cf. bhuyāsiṣu cet stuvīran, V, 3, 2; other uses are the dative after dhatte with saṃ, saṃ pakṣayoh patanāya, V, 1, 6; an apposition of whole and part śākhayā mūladeśena, V, 1, 4; and abuddham-asya, V, 3, 2. Very strange is śriyaṃ gor aśvam ātman dhatte, V, 1, 6, where goḥ may be a possessive genitive or a genitive of description.

In the verb occur two subjunctives in directions put in the mouth of the sacrificer, parivrajātha, V, 1, 1; ninayātha, V, 1, 2. In V, 3, 2, purpose is expressed by yathā na with hanīśyasīti, a curious but not rare (e.g. in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa) use. The optative occurs in directions frequently, and in both protasis and apodosis of conditions, (a) with potential force in both, e.g. yāvatīr-āvaperan tāvanti-jijīviṣet, V, 3, 1; (b) with imperative force in the apodosis (with yatra-tatra, and yatra tukāmaṃ-tatra), V, 3, 3; (with yadī), V, 1, 4; 3, 3; (with ced), V, 1, 6; (with a relative), V, 1, 5. In V, 1, 4, yadā śrāmyet is probably indefinite; in V, 3, 3, yady api-adhīyāt-na snātako bhavati, the indicative in the apodosis probably expresses the certainty of the result; in V, 3, 2, the apodosis to cyaveta ced is curtailed; so also in V, 2, 1.

With regard to participles jāgarito bhavati, V, 1, 1, and upakṣpto bhavati, V, 1, 3, both denote a past action resulting in a present state. Upālambhaniyaḥ, V, 1, 1, is a sign of comparatively late date, the earlier form being upālambhyaḥ, cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 1. No infinitives occur, but many gerunds, e.g. V, 3, 3, and in all about 36 instances are found. In place of an infinitive there is in V, 3, 2, ījyāyai sampreṣitaḥ. The past participle passive in yathetam, V, 1, 2; 3, is simply the equivalent of a past indicative.

The use of particles is comparatively restricted. There occur the following combinations: atha ha, V, 2, 4; ihaiva, iho eva, V, 1, 6; ha sma, V, 3, 3; haiva, V, 3, 3; no eva, V, 3, 3; iva is equal to eva in V, 3, 2; aha occurs in V, 1, 6; khalu in V, 1, 6; kāmam in V, 3, 3; punar api in V, 1, 4. In the case of ca the single use is the more common, as compared with Āraṇyaka I-III; in na vatse ca na tṛtiye, V, 3, 3, the ca may connect with the previous sentence, or be like śastreṇa ca brahmacaryayā in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 6. In V, 1, 1, etais caivāsvāhākārair (mantrair) ehy-madhu iti ca occurs. In V, 3, 3, is na-cana.

Among other signs of late date may be reckoned the frequency of the locative absolute, the use of adverbial expressions like antarvedī, V, 1, 1; anuparikramaṇam, V, 1, 4; viharāṇaprabhṛti, V, 1, 1; ananvṛcam, V, 1, 1; the plural of authorship as found in nidarśanāyodāharīṣyāmaḥ, V, 3, 3; and the use of gerunds like nāpitena kārayitvā, V, 3, 3.

The same style and diction are found in Āśvalāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, which, like Āraṇyaka V, consists of a disconnected string of sentences, which, when consisting of more than a few words, are constructed by heaping adjectives on adjectives, adding adverbial phrases, using gerunds, and piling up cases in different senses. There is no independent evidence to show that there is any great difference in time between the Āraṇyaka V and the Śrauta Sūtra.

There seems no reason to suppose that the Āraṇyaka V is not more ancient than the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra XVII, XVIII. Hillebrandt has, indeed, suggested that the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra is older than Āśvalāyana, and although the last two Adhyāyas may be of different date from the first sixteen, still they are hardly likely to be later, so that, if Hillebrandt's conclusions are sound, the Sūtra XVII, XVIII, will be older than the Āraṇyaka V. But Hillebrandt's reasons are not convincing.¹ He points out that, as Weber has said, parts of the Sūtra are written in the Brāhmaṇa style. This refers mainly to Adhyāyas XV, XVI, which contain inter alia the Śunaḥśepa legend. But even assuming that these books are part of the original Sūtra, it cannot be denied that the version of the legend is in no way original; it is merely the same as that in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and differs so little from it that both versions must be descended from a common source. The part of the Aitareya where it occurs is decidedly later than the first five books. The Brāhmaṇa-like style is therefore not to be attributed to Suyajña, the author of the Sūtra. Secondly, he refers to the description of the Aśvamedha and of the Puruṣamedha as signs of early age. But this argument depends greatly for its force on acceptance of the theory that Ṛgveda, X, 18, 8, can be explained from Śrauta Sūtra, XVI, 13, and this view is not now usually accepted.² Thirdly, he points out that the Sūtra is not written with the full brevity of the latest Sūtra style. This is true, but the argument is really in favour of the priority of Āraṇyaka V. For that work is written in a style less condensed than that of Suyajña, and certainly less condensed than that of Books XVII, XVIII. Further, it must be admitted that as a Sūtra these books are much superior to the Āraṇyaka V. The ritual directions are far more precise and detailed, contrasting with the brevity of the directions in the Āraṇyaka, which mainly concerns itself with a description of the litanies. In the Sūtra the whole process is gone through methodically while the Āraṇyaka covers only a part of the field. The style is of the usual Sūtra type; it is not in any marked manner more recent than that of the Āraṇyaka, but it contains practically no irregular forms. With the forms quoted above from the Āraṇyaka the following facts may be compared. The Sandhi of a + r is ar, XVII, 5, 9; 7, 8; of āu + u is ā, XVII, 10, 5; 16, 5; while tasyāḥ occurs in XVII, 3, 2, as always in Aitareya Āraṇyaka V, tasyai is found XVIII, 2, 4; 19, and prathamāyai, dvitīyāyai, uttamāyai, XVIII, 20. In XVII, 3, 12; 15, occur ghāṭarīḥ and ghāṭakarkarīḥ, nominatives with the s preserved. The locative is used with \sqrt{stu} in XVIII, 2, 2; 22, 7, and extended to \sqrt{kr} in atichandaḥsu kuryuḥ, XVIII, 22, 9. Adverbial phrases besides antarvedi are prasalavi, XVII, 14, 16; 15, 4; antaḥsadaḥ, XVII, 4, 3; nānā badhnanti, XVII, 3, 8; while jaghanena is used with the accusative, XVII, 5, 8.

Of verbal forms may be noted pratyāgrṇītāt, XVII, 14, 3; prabrūtāt, XVII, 14, 4; vininiṣamānaḥ, I, 7, 3; paryeṣyanto bhavanti, XVII, 4, 8; bhokṣyamāṇā(h) bhavanti, dhakṣyanto (bhavanti), XVIII, 24, 14; 15; the gerundives prāyaṇīyaḥ, udayaṇīyaḥ, XVIII, 24, 2; kāryam, XVII, 6, 2; deyam, XVIII, 24, 32; the gerunds in am, punarādāyam, XVIII, 4, 3; 4; 5, 3; 4; kakupkāram, XVIII, 4, 3; 4; 5, 3; 4; pañktiśaṃsam, XVIII, 6, 4; 14, 4; 17, 5; gāyatrīśaṃsam, XVIII, 16, 1; and the late simple form śaṃsam, XVIII, 16, 2. Of the uses of the optative that in clauses of purpose with na is very frequent; in XVII, 10, 8, yadi-syāt-mimīte, it is purely indefinite; in yadi-na vidyeta ya etām dhiyaḥ kuryāt sa etat kuryāt, XVII, 5, 4, the second optative is one of characteristic, 'one who can do.' In XVIII, 24, 15, yadi dhakṣyanto (bhavanti)-syāt, the protasis is future in fact and the apodosis is equivalent to a mild future. In XVIII, 23, 4, yadi yajñāyajñīyam-kuryuḥ-tasyoktau stotriyānurūpau, the real apodosis is suppressed. Of particles may be noticed the use of api vā, XVIII, 3, 4, and of yady u vai, XVIII, 7, 17; 23, 5. It may be noted as a sign of more recent date that very few particles occur, ha only in XVII, 13, 8; u ha in XVIII, 2, 3; 5. In XVII, 9, 7; XVIII, 22, 10, is found the remarkable phrase iti nv ā u Marutvatīyam, Vaiśvavedam; in XVII, 1, 5, athāpi; in XVIII, 20, 6, atho.

of date somewhat later than the Āraṇyaka V, the Bṛhaddevatā, which shows a style much more modern, even despite poetic licences, than the Āraṇyaka I-III, but which is still in vocabulary an archaic work, coeval in date with the early epic. An interesting list of its irregularities is given by Prof. Macdonell,¹ but they are rather of the epic type, e.g. use of °ya for °tvā in the gerund, nominative for accusative, unaugmented pasts, &c. It is significant that (1) no genitives or ablatives for ā, i, ū, stems in ai occur; (2) there are no subjunctive forms other than first person forms; (3) the infinitive in °tum is common and no other form is found, while in VI, 37, even śaptukāmaḥ occurs. Significant also is the use of the narrative tenses. The aorist occurs only in the later narrative use and is rare, being formed only from the roots gā, bhū, vac, vadh. The perfect surpasses the imperfect in frequency as a narrative tense, for in some 340 lines of narrative² there occur 202 perfects to 150 imperfects, and the proportion elsewhere is not materially different. Further, the periphrastic perfect with āsa is frequent, kāmayām āsa, VI, 76; utsādayām āsa, VII, 53; śikṣayām āsa, III, 84; bodhayām āsa, VI, 37; varayām āsa, VI, 38; chandayām āsuḥ, VII, 157; prasādayām āsa, VIII, 3; kīrtayām āsa, VI, 24; prasvāpayām āsa, VI, 13; darśayām āsa, V, 63; while the use of kr is very rare, upāmantrayām cakre, V, 20. Further, the past participles passive are freely used to denote action either past or present in place of finite verbs, and use is made of the new participial form in vat, kr̥tavat occurring in VI, 41; VII, 58; VIII, 18; dr̥ṣṭavān, V, 58; dr̥ṣṭavati, VIII, 33; pr̥ṣṭavān, V, 71; labdhavān, V, 66; hatavān, VI, 152, &c. Prefixes are not separated from the verbs with which they are connected. Particles are much restricted in number, and combinations are limited. Mention may also be made of the great development in grammatical doctrine seen not only in the discussion in I as to nouns, &c., and in II, 93, as to particles, but in the use of such forms as āvi, locative of au, the case termination, ayoḥ from e, the sign of the dual, idi, the root id, and so on. Indeed it is hard to resist the conclusion that the bulk of the Āraṇyaka I-III must lie before the more systematic treatment of grammatical questions in Yāska's Nirukta, and a new support is derived for the giving an early date to these books, since Yāska cannot well be later than 500 B. C.

It has been noted that Book III presupposes the Padapāṭha of the R̥gveda¹ and also the Kramapāṭha. It is therefore later than Śākalya, the author of the Padapāṭha. This, however, leaves the date undetermined, since Śākalya's date is still uncertain. Geldner² has recently argued that he dates from the later Vājasaneyya period, and not as supposed by Oldenberg from the end of the Brāhmaṇa period, and that he was a contemporary of the Āruṇi and Yājñavalkya known from the Brāhmaṇas. But it is extremely hard to reconcile this with the facts that the Padapāṭha presupposes the Saṃhitā, that the Saṃhitā exhibits a text which cannot be reconciled with the statements of the Brāhmaṇa texts³ as to the number of syllables in word groups, in consequence of the Sandhi carried out in the Saṃhitā. The evidence, therefore, is certainly in favour of Oldenberg's hypothesis, but it leaves the lower date of Śākalya vague. He is, however, cited by Yāska and older than Śaunaka, so that in all probability he must date not later than 600 B. C. The Āraṇyaka III need not be much later than Śākalya; and if it is, as seems most probable, earlier than Yāska, it may be dated from about 600-550 B. C. It may be added that it must be older than the Taittirīya Upaniṣad and the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, VIII (see note on III, 1, 2).

These chronological results are admittedly uncertain. They are based on the views that (1) the Āraṇyaka I-III is older than Buddhism by reason of the undeveloped character of its philosophic content; (2) that these books are older than the Bṛhaddevatā and Śaunaka, who may be dated about 450-400 B. C., and probably older than Yāska, who can hardly be brought down lower than 550-500 B. C.; (3) that they are older than the developed systems of philosophy whose beginnings are at any rate known to Āpastamba, whom Bühler dates in the fourth or fifth centuries B. C., and who cannot well, on any view, be later than 300 B. C., and that they are older than the Atharvaśīras Upaniṣad, known, it seems, to Gautama, who is older than Āpastamba by some generations; (4) that they are older than Pāṇini, Kātyāyana, and Patañjali, who cannot well be dated later than 300, 200, and 100 B. C. respectively; (5) that Books I and II date from the later Brāhmaṇa¹ period, but are probably older than the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, parts of the Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa and Upaniṣad, the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa, and the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, and so belong to a comparatively early date.

The verses and sentences quoted contain, despite their brevity, a remarkable set of old forms. The Ślokas in II, 3, 8, and the prose directions in Āraṇyaka V, are more properly treated as above as part of the main work, with which the latter no doubt coincide in time, while the former are not very much older. Of these forms may be mentioned tanūm, tanvām (loc.), but tanvaḥ (gen.) in I, 3, 5; sarvasyai (gen.) in the verse in III, 2, 5, which is a sign of more recent origin; the compounds Vārunāvāyvitamam, prthivyuparām, brāhmaṇābhartṛkam, varṣāpavitram, V, 3, 2; the forms ārājaḥ (?), tūjaḥ, āti vyāthiḥ, rāntyam, vānam (?), ādhrṣaḥ, in V, 2, 1. Among verbal forms are the third person singulars iṣe, vide, IV, 1; the first person stuṣé, IV, 1. The curious forms ṛñjāse, sāṃnyase, bhūvaḥ, IV, 1; dukām, V, 3, 2; the subjunctives anuśamsiṣaḥ, parṣat, IV, 1; jūjoṣat, V, 2, 2; vibhajātha, V, 1, 1; the injunctives vidāḥ (?), IV, 1; sprṣat (?), V, 2, 2; kartana, V, 2, 2; and perhaps āvīt, V, 1, 1; the precatives, āpyāsam, V, 3, 2; bhūyāsam, V, 1, 1. Of noun constructions may be noted, yaja somānām, V, 3, 2; svar yajñam vakṣyantim, V, 1, 5; vaśāṇ annu, IV, 1; pratī vām ṛjīṣī, V, 2, 1. In V, 2, 2, kartana seems used instead of a dual; in IV, 1, bravāvahai needs explanation. In V, 1, 1, occur antarikṣam ivānāpyam-bhūyāsam, &c., where the predicate adjective follows the gender and number of the nearest noun, the object of comparison. The uses of svam in that passage, of maricayaḥ, and of ināḥ and sāmajaḥ in V, 2, 1, are all unusual. The question of the date of the verses in IV, 1, has been dealt with in the note on that passage, and cf. J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 224 sq.; Oldenberg, Gött. Gel. Anz., 1907, pp. 215 sq.

॥ इति द्वितीयारण्यकम् ॥

This ends the second Āranyaka, but the majority of the MSS. of the text, and of Sāyaṇa's commentary, and of Ānandatīrtha's own commentary, and his ṭīkā, add a seventh Adhyāya, which is:—

² प्रहासीद् T, and Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda. ³ वादथा A here.

⁴ मा३म् D. ⁵ This occurs in A, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, M, N, O, Q, R, S, T, U. In T, however, it is placed at the beginning of the Upaniṣad, and in S at the end of Āranyaka V, and see also note on I, I, I. It does not occur in most MSS. of Saṅkara's commentary, and it is omitted even in L, which is a complete MS. of all the text. It appears clearly not to have been known to Saṅkara. It is, however, known to Ānandatīrtha in his own commentary in the MSS., H and O. In the edition, U, of Ānandatīrtha's commentary on Saṅkara, it is said: षष्ठ्यष्टस्य भाग्यं स्पष्टत्वादात्मतत्वाप्रतिपादनाच्च श्रीमच्छङ्कराचार्येण कृतमित्येतदुक्तात् एव ज्ञायते । सा तु टीका दीपिकातोऽभिनिवेति ज्ञात्वाच न संगृहीता । M, N, Q, and apparently Max Müller's MS., S. B. E., I, 246, n. 2, have एवं षष्ठेऽध्याये तत्त्वविद्यां परिसमाप्य सप्तमे (so N, Q; सप्तसु श्रीमत्परिव्राजकाचार्य add. M) शान्तिकरो मन्त्रः पठितः वाङ्मे मनसीत्यादि । तस्य स्पष्टार्थत्वादात्मतत्वाप्रतिपादकत्वाच्च भाग्यकारेण व्याख्यातः । स मन्दानां बोधाय दीपिकाकारोक्तरीत्या व्याख्यायते । यथोक्तं &c., exactly as in Sāyapa's commentary. The end is इति श्रीसप्तमाध्यायस्य दीपिका संपूर्णा M; इति सप्तमाध्यायदीपिका समाप्ता N. The question arises whether this wholesale borrowing was due to Ānandatīrtha or not. On the whole the evidence is against the view that it was. (1) It compels us to date Ānandatīrtha after Sāyapa, which is (a) contradictory to the accepted dates of either writer, and (b) cannot be reconciled with the fact that Sāyapa sometimes follows Ānandatīrtha closely in his commentary, cf. on II, 4, 3. (2) It is of course clear from the consensus of MS. evidence that the explanation of the last section was added at a comparatively early date to Ānandatīrtha's commentary, but this could easily have happened, and as a matter of fact the alteration needed to introduce the extract was very slight, as Sāyapa begins: षष्ठे तत्त्वविद्यां परिसमाप्य सप्तमे शान्तिकरं मन्त्रं पठति । वाङ्मे मनसीति । The addition was very natural, since the fact that the Adhyāya is recognized by Ānandatīrtha in his own commentary shows that it had already in his time become a recognized part of the Āraṇyaka. In Jones' MS. (Tawney and Thomas, Catalogue of Two Collections of Sanskrit MSS., p. 2) we have the commentary of Saṅkara without the ṭīkā, followed by 'Mādhava's' commentary as in the edition. After II, 7, E continues: हरिः श्रीं । अथातस्संहिताया उपनिषत् । वाङ्मे मनसि प्रतिष्ठिता । कोऽयमात्मिति वयमुपास्महे । पुरुषे ह वा अयमादितो गर्भो भवति । स ईक्षते नु लोकाश्च लोकपालाश्च । ता एता देवतास्सृष्टाः । आत्मा वा इदमेक एवाय आसीत् । तत्रैते श्लोकाः । तद्वा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तद्यशस् इन्द्रः । तद्वा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तस्य वा एतस्य । तद्वा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तद्वैतदेके । यो ह वै यज्ञे यज्ञं वेद । स एष पुरुषस्समुद्रः । तस्य य आत्मानमाविस्तरां वेद । यो ह वा आत्मानं पञ्चविधमुक्थं वेद । तद्वा इदं बृहतीसहस्रं संपन्नं तस्य यानि व्यञ्जनानि । विश्वामिदं ह्येतद्दृश्यं सिध्यन्तम् । एष उ एव विभद्वाजः । एष इदं लोकमभ्यर्चत् । आपाः इति आप इति । अथातो

E omits accents, and R has the accents in many cases obviously wrong. In the case of the double accent of compounds, some of these may be correct; similar instances—some clearly wrong—occur, however, in the Kashmir MS. of the Khilas of the R̥gveda, as Scheffelowitz (p. 39) points out. The chief cases are, v. 1, वाचो, हृदयस्त्वं सर्वं; v. 2, इन्द्रः कर्माचितममृतं, वाचो; v. 3, सर्वं, पिबति, वाक्प्रभृतं, हृदयोयं, ब्राह्मणमर्तुर्कं; v. 4, वर्षपवित्रं, पृथिव्यपरं, तपस्विन्द्रज्यैष्ठं, मयुताचरं; v. 6, वेदानां सखि, तेनाहं विश्वमाप्यासं सर्वान्कामान्दुहां; v. 7, स्वस् and ब्रह्मवर्चसं. विशं मे and यशो मे are conceivable but improbable.

the number of Khaṇḍas thus: खंड ३५ प्र २२ द्वि २६ तु १२ च १ पं १४ । ⁷ At the end of the Āraṇyaka S adds a second set of Sānti Mantras, see on I, 1, 1. Similarly in the Ānandāśrama edition, 1895, of thirty-two Upaniṣads, there is prefixed to the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, and also appended to it, a set of Sānti Mantras, similar to those in Aitareya Āraṇyaka, II, 7, and Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 1.

AITAREYA ĀRANYAKA

TRANSLATION AND NOTES

ADHYĀYA I.

Now begins the Mahāvratā¹ rite. Indra having slain Vṛtra became great. When he became great, then there came into being the Mahāvratā. Therefore the Mahāvratā ceremony bears the name of Mahāvratā. Some² say the priest should make two recitations with the ghee-offering for that day, but the established rule is one. He who desires prosperity should use the hymn, 'To Agni, to this god of yours, (I sing aloud)' (RV., III, 13). He who desires increase should use the hymn, 'The guest of all your folk' (RV., VIII, 74). For the folk indeed are increase and therefore he gains increase.³ Some say that one should not use that

² The two Ājyas recommended are RV., VIII, 74 and VII, 1; the reference is to the view of the Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 2. The former is the prākṛta because it is an Ājya Śāstra in the Agniṣṭoma, the latter the vaikṛta because it is an Ājya Śāstra in the Viśvajit (see Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXV, 11). The Aitareya holds that only the vaikṛta, VII, 1, should be employed, according to Sāyaṇa because the Agniṣṭoma which is the prākṛti has twelve Śāstras, and if there were two Ājya Śāstras the Mahāvratā would have thirteen. VII, 1, which is the Ājya Śāstra, is also at the same time a kāmya ājyasastra used by those who desire proper food (see I, 1, 2).

³ This is the rendering adopted by Max Müller from Sāyaṇa, who explains that Vaiśyas making large earnings offer much taxation (karam api bahulaṃ prayachanti, which Max Müller takes as 'increase their capital', but this is in view of prayachanti (Sāyaṇa on Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 29) hardly possible). Perhaps it would be possible to translate: 'For he (Agni) is the increase of the folk and so he (the sacrificer) becomes prosperous,' but it is probable that the commentator has preserved the correct rendering, though of course in the original the vilo vilo is in the genitive. For taxation, cf. Fick, Die sociale Gliederung, pp. 79, 80; Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 48; Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, II, 10, 26, 9, &c. Already in the RV., I, 65, 7 (see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 56, and Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, xvi) the king devours the rich. In a series of passages (XI, 5, 7, 1; XIII, 5, 4, 24; XIII, 1, 5, 4; V, 4, 2, 3) in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, cited by Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 173, 174) the king receives the people, save only the Brahmins, as his food, because they pay him taxes. So often in the epic the exactions of kings are mentioned, cf. Hopkins, India Old and New, pp. 240, 243, n. 3; Keith, Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 68.

hymn because there is in it the word 'guest', and a guest is liable to go begging⁴. But (Mahidāsa⁵) said that one should use that hymn. For he, who becomes good and attains excellence,⁶ is indeed a guest. For him who is not so men do not deem worthy of hospitality. Therefore one may by all means use that hymn. If he does use it, he should place first the tristich, 'To him, best Vṛtra-slayer, are we come' (RV., VIII, 74, 4-6). For eager for this day they worship the whole year,

It will be seen that in the text throughout padam bhavati and so forth have been printed, m being in every case when final save at the end of a sentence, altered to anusvāra, and further, in all cases where m occurs as the end of the first member of a compound (e.g. sam²m) m is used. It is clear that, in a text of the Brāhmaṇa period, before mutes generally the appropriate nasal should be used; before y, l, v either anusvāra or those semivowels nasalized; and before r, ṣ, ś, h anusvāra, with m in pausa (see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 212, 213; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 333, 334; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 53, 68), but this course merely adds to the unnecessary difficulties of the Devanāgarī script (the continual use of which is an unfortunate necessity), and I have followed most editors, including Prof. Macdonell in his Bṛhaddevatā, in using anusvāra before mutes, semivowels and sibilants, as allowed by Pāṇini, VIII, 4, 59, and approved by Whitney, §§ 71, 73. The practice of writing m before labials while using anusvāra before the other mutes is convenient but illogical, and has not been followed. I have also written ch for ch of the MSS. (with many exceptions) except where ch represents an assimilated letter + ch. It is no doubt the case that ch in Sanskrit is rarely, if ever (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 155, allows puccha as representing kh, but Dr. Scheftelowitz rejects the view), a representation of any save a conjunct consonant in Indo-Germanic (either s + kh or (as Dr. Scheftelowitz, in his forthcoming Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, tries to prove) s + k, normally). But there is no proof that ch represents this more properly than ch (the fact of position is of no importance), and the use of ch for the simple letter prevents any distinction between e.g. t + ch and ch alone. For this reason I follow Aufrecht (in his Ēgveda), Bloomfield, v. Schroeder, Knauer (see his Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra, pp. xxxiv, xxxv, with all his MSS.), Macdonell, and others, in writing ch for the simple letter. Lévi, Whitney's and Lanman's use (in the Translation of the Atharvaveda) of ch even for t + ch (for t) is the opposite extreme (cf. Prof. Macdonell, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 1105).

and now they draw nigh to it. The next three tristichs⁷ begin with anuṣṭubh verses. Now the gāyatrī verse is brahman,⁸ the anuṣṭubh is Vāc, and so he unites Vāc and brahman. He who desires glory should use the hymn, 'Agni is aroused by the fuel of the folk' (RV., V, 1). He who desires children⁹ and cattle should use the hymn,¹⁰ 'The wise sacrificer has been born' (RV., II, 5).¹¹

⁸ Sāyaṇa gives as reasons for these identifications that the parabrahma is set forth by means of the gāyatrī (RV., III, 62, 10), and that, like this anuṣṭubh, Vāc has four forms (RV., I, 164, 45; Nirukta, XIII, 9, &c.; Z. D. M. G., XXXIX, 58), (parā palyantī madhyamā vaikhari, later, see J. A. O. S., XXII, 69; Mallinātha on Kumārasambhava, II, 17). There is no reason to suppose that the identification of Vāc and anuṣṭubh and gāyatrī and brahman has any basis beyond mere fancy; for different identifications, cf. J. A. O. S., XVI, 3 sq. The original sense of brahman (so throughout to contrast with Brahman, the god) must clearly have been prayer or spell (cf. II, 3, 8), the two ideas blending indefinitely since the prayer could be regarded as a spell and vice versa (Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 315). Deussen's view of brahman (Allg. Gesch. der Phil., I, 1, 241 sq.) as 'der zum Heiligen, Göttlichen emporstrebende Wille des Menschen' is quite untenable, see Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 211, 212. That Vāc is brahman was the doctrine of Jitvan Śailīni and it is set forth by Yājñavalkya, Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 1, 2, and the identification is developed in the late Logos doctrine. Cf. also Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, XX, 14, 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VII, 2, 2; Hopkins, India Old and New, p. 147, n. 1, with whose view of the slight importance of the Logos doctrine in this form I agree.

In the Śāṅkhāyana Gīhya Sūtra, VI, 4 and 5, verses are given to accompany the recitation of the Samhitās (Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, VIII), and the formulae are placed at the beginning

^a Cf. also v. Schroeder, Die Tübinger Kāṭha-Handschriften, p. 115, and the Śānti prefixed to the Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad in the Ānandāśrama ed.

2. He who desires proper food¹ should use the hymn, 'Agni men kindle from the twigs with splendour' (RV., VII, 1).² For Agni is the eater of food. In the other chants accompanying the ghee-offerings men approach as it were more slowly to Agni, but here they come upon Agni at the very beginning; at the very beginning he³ obtains proper food, at the very beginning they smite away of the text in the Āraṇyaka thus: ṛtaṃ vadīṣyāmi satyaṃ vadīṣyāmi | adadhmaṃ mana iṣiraṃ cakṣuḥ | sūryo jyotiṣāṃ śreṣṭha | dīkṣe mā mā hīmsiḥ | Other verses are prescribed to precede adadhmaṃ, &c., in the case of the Śakvaris and of the Māhāvratas, the Mantha (Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, IX), &c. In Khaṇḍa 3 are given the expiatory formulae: udītaḥ śukriyaṃ dadhe | tad ahaṃ ātmani dadhe | and then other differing formulae (see Oldenberg's ed., pp. 163 sq., and S. B. E., XXIX, 145 sq.) Oldenberg renders ud itaḥ, &c., as 'From here I take out the brightness (!)', but I would much rather take udītaḥ (and the version in the Ānandāśrama ed., p. 295, accents ūdītaḥ) as 'He, arisen, gives forth brightness. That (brightness) I appropriate to myself', referring to the beneficial and purifying effects of the radiance of the sun (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 31). Oldenberg also takes sūryo, &c., as predicate to adadhmaṃ, &c., which is hardly necessary. The phrase sarwaḥ, &c., probably means, 'I arise whole (possibly with a suggestion of salvus, i. e. complete, perfect, healthy), with breath, with strength; may prosperity attend me; may the gods attend me.' The assertion, uttiṣṭhāmi, may be based on the magic principle exhibited in faith-cures. The other clauses offer no difficulty, but dhūmim, &c., is obscure. idā (unaccented in R) may be nom. to uparpiśed, namaḥ being interjected, but this is very unlikely, as agne idā occurs alone (see Crit. Note). It may be, 'Honour (to thee), O Agni, and oblation,' but this is merely possible.

In the Mānava Śrauta Sūtra, II, 1, 2, 36 (cited by Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, pp. 40*, 484*) occurs: adadhmaṃ cakṣur ariṣṭaṃ manas sūryo jyotiṣāṃ śreṣṭhaḥ dīkṣe mā mā hīmsiḥ satapā, which illustrates the position here of cakṣuḥ. In Taittirīya Saṃhitā, III, 1, 1, 2: dīkṣe mā mā hīmsiḥ occurs. The exact words used here are found in Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 1; IX, 1.

² Sāyaṇa points out that the hymn is both a nitya and a kāmya hymn. It is hardly correct to say, as Max Müller does, that it is an obligatory part of the sacrifice, since, as we have seen in I, 1, 1, the kāmyasūktāni are sufficient to complete the ceremony. What Sāyaṇa means is that it is both the normal form and also a form for a special purpose. He compares the use of dadhi in the Agnihotra both as normal and where strength is desired, and the use of khādira in the Agniṣomīyapaśa rite as normal and when might is wished. The possible forms then are: (1) this hymn as normal; (2) this hymn as annādyakāma; (3) any of the other kāmyasūktāni enumerated in I, 1, 1. In RV., VIII, 1, vv. 1-18 are in virāj metre, the rest in triṣṭubh, which explains the reference to these metres below.

evil. Because of the words (RV., VII, 1, 1^b), 'with moving of the arms they bring to birth 'Agni,' the hymn has the word 'birth' in it. Verily the sacrificer is born from this day, and so the hymn has the word 'birth'. There are four verses (in the triṣṭubh), cattle are four-footed, the verses serve to win cattle. There are three verses (in the virāj), these are the threefold worlds, the verses serve to gain these worlds. These two verses form a support. Man has a double support, cattle have four feet. The hymn places the sacrificer with his double support among the four-footed cattle.⁵ The verses if said straight on number twenty-five. Man consists of twenty-five elements. He has ten fingers, ten toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. By this hymn he adorns the trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further, this day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, the stoma hymn⁶ of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are⁷ twenty-five. By repeating the first thrice, and the last thrice, the verses Syntax, p. 477; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 230, and Schefelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, p. 79, who calls this use late, hardly correctly. Cf. III, 2, 6; II, 1, 2; 6, 1; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 430. I think that iva must originally—or at any rate quite early—have had a sense approaching more or less to eva. Cf. RV., I, 145, 3: tām it prchanti nā simā vā prchati svēneva dhīro mānasā yād āgrabhīt. The sense is hardly 'by his own mind alone', as Oldenberg (S.B.E., XLVI, 164) takes it. The phrase is softened by iva, just as metaphorical phrases are softened by quasi, &c. in Latin (Berger, Stylistique Latine, p. 140). This sense appears clearly in III, 2, 6: vāgbrāhmaṇam ivopadāharati. This avoids amendment to eva as proposed for the RV. passage by Oldenberg. So in RV., IV, 5, 8: vār iva. See also Eggeling, S.B.E., XLIII, 375, n. 3, on Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 5, 3, 1, 'Sāyana seems to take "iva" here in the sense of "eva", as indeed it often has to be taken, especially in negative sentences.' The real sense is clearly seen in phrases like pratarām iva kriyante, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 48, 4. See also n. 5 on II, 1, 2. So in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 2, 2, for the Kāṇva text eva, the Mādhyandina has iva explained as eva by the commentator (Max Müller, S.B.E., XV, 159, n. 3); ibid., III, 9, 28, 5, for the Kāṇva iva vai, the Mādhyandina has u vai (S.B.E., XV, 150, n. 5). This use is not found in independent passages of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, where in VIII, 10, eva takes the place of iva in Aitareya Āraṇyaka, III, 2, 6. Cf. also Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., LXI, 824 sq.

⁴ Sāyana is probably correct in taking janayanta in a timeless or present sense. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 930; Avery, J. A. O. S., XI, 326–361.

⁵ The hymn has two metres and in one of these metres four feet; man has two and cattle four feet, and the union in the hymn produces union in reality. catuspātsu occurs also in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 2, 7, where the whole phrase occurs with padāḥ. For catuspādāḥ paśavaḥ cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 2, 20, and often in the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa. The whole phrase is also identical with Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 31, 13, &c.

⁷ The plural is explained by Sāyana as due to the res being thought of and not the hymn, but here the 'attraction' of the predicate is an adequate explanation, since such examples of carelessness are very rare. Cf., however, RV., III, 6, 3, where Oldenberg (S.B.E., XLVI, 24, 6) refers yajñīyāṇaḥ to Heaven and Earth; RV., II, 5, 6 (ibid., 204); RV., VII, 93, 7: yātīm āgar cakṛmā tāt sū mṛṣā tād aṛyamāditiḥ śīrathantu | where Agni and perhaps the other become thirty less one, that is equivalent to a virāj verse minus one syllable. For in the small (womb) seed is deposited,⁹ in the small (heart) the vital spirits, in the small (stomach) food is placed. So (the virāj small by one) serves for the obtainment of these desires. He who knows this obtains those desires. The verses include also the bṛhaṭī metre⁹ and the virāj metre, and the perfection of that day. They also include the anuṣṭubh metre,¹⁰ for the chants accompanying the ghee-offerings depend on anuṣṭubhs.¹¹

3. 'The Praūga' should be in the gāyatrī metre,' some say,² 'for the gāyatrī is brightness and splendour and thus (the sacrificer) becomes bright and splendid.' Others say, 'The Praūga should be in the uṣṇih metre, for the uṣṇih is life

Ādityas are in the mind of the poet. Ibid., X, 85, 47 (altered in Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 8, 9), hṛdayāni is used of a man and wife. In Maitrāyaṇīya Saṃhitā, I, 5, 12, śṛṣṭvāhai is used of the gods, cf. bravīmāhai in IV, 1, infra. Cf. too the verse cited V, 2, 2, īṣam no Mitrāvaruṇā kartanāśīm and Atharvaveda, XIV, 1, 39, with Whitney's note. Cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 102; Speijer, Sanskrit-Syntax, § 26, n.; Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXIX, 62, n. 1.

⁹ See I, 3, 7, where this recurs.

¹¹ The first verse, though called virāj in the Anukramaṇī, is really a verse of thirty-three syllables, and by the doctrine that one or two syllables make no difference, it can easily be regarded as an anuṣṭubh of thirty-two syllables. The acc. is due to the force of abhi, cf. janitvām abhi śāmbabhūta, RV., X, 18, 8 as explained by Whitney, A. J. P., XIII, 297, and Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 306. Later √bhū governs the acc., see Hopkins, Great Epic of India, pp. 265, 473. For the exact sense of abhi, cf. abhi samcinatī, Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 2, 4, 1 with Eggeling's note; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 22, 6: virājam datinīm abhisamṣadye-tām, and elsewhere in the Brāhmaṇa and Sūtra literature.

and so (the sacrificer) wins life.' Others say, 'The Praṭiga should be in the anuṣṭubh metre, for the anuṣṭubh is valour, and so it serves to obtain valour.' Others say, 'The Praṭiga should be in the brhāṣi, for the brhāṣi is prosperity, and so (the sacrificer) becomes prosperous.' Others say, 'The Praṭiga should be in the pañkti metre, for the pañkti is food and so (the sacrificer) wins food.' Others say, 'The Praṭiga should be in the triṣṭubh metre, for the triṣṭubh is strength and so (the sacrificer) becomes strong.' Others say, 'The Praṭiga should be in the jagatī metre, for cattle³ are like the jagatī and so (the sacrificer) acquires cattle.' But (the sacrificer) should take a gāyatrī hymn only. For the gāyatrī is brahman,⁴ and that day is brahman, and so through brahman is brahman commenced.⁵ The hymn should be one by Madhuchandas. For Madhuchandas desires⁶ honey for the singers and so he is called Madhuchandas. Now food truly is honey; all is honey; all desires are honey; therefore if one recite the hymn of Madhuchandas, it serves to obtain all desires. He who knows this obtains all desires. Now this Praṭiga in the one day form⁷ is perfect.⁸ Much indeed on that day is done that is forbidden,⁹ and (the Praṭiga) is the atonement.¹⁰ Now atonement ³ Cf. I, 1, 2, n. 5. The point of resemblance is the number of feet. See Taittirīya Saṃhitā, III, 2, 9, 4; VI, 1, 6, 2; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, I, 21, 15; 28, 11. Elsewhere the gāyatrī is connected with aṣṭāṣṭāḥ paśavaḥ, Jaiminīya Brāhmaṇa, III, 241; Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, III, 8, 2, or paśavaḥ are pañktāḥ, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 23, 5.

⁷ The Agniṣṭoma, which is the prakṛti of the Viśvajit and that of the Mahāvratā, is a one day sacrifice. Cf. Sabbathier, Agniṣṭoma; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma.

is rest, and at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (Praṭga)¹¹ as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotṛ priest, who knows this, recites this Praṭga.

4. (There is the word 'ready' in the verse,) 'Come hither, O Vāyu, conspicuous; these Soma draughts have been made ready' (RV., I, 2, 1); this day indeed is ready for the sacrificer and for the gods. Truly the day is ready for him who knows this or for whom a Hotṛ priest who knows this recites. In the verse, 'Indra and Vāyu, these draughts are poured forth, come to what is prepared' (RV., I, 2, 4), by 'prepared' (niṣkṛta) he denotes what is 'well prepared' (saṃskṛta).¹ Indra and Vāyu approach what has been well prepared by him who knows this or for whom a Hotṛ priest who knows this recites. In the verse, 'Mitra of holy might I summon (and Varuṇa) who make perfect² the oil-fed rite' (RV., I, 2, 7^{ao}), speech is the oil-fed rite. Speech is his who knows this or for whom a Hotṛ priest who knows this recites. In the verse 'Aśvins, (accept) the sacrificial offerings' (RV., I, 3, 1^a), the sacrificial offerings are food and this serves to gain food. The Aśvins go to the sacrifice of him who knows this or for whom a Hotṛ priest who knows this recites the verse, 'Come hither, ye whose path is red'³ (RV., I, 3, 3). In the verses, 'Indra of bright splendour, come hither; Indra impelled by prayer, come hither; Indra hastening, come hither' (RV., I, 3, 5^a; 6^a; 4^a), he recites, 'Come hither, come hither.' Indra goes to his sacrifice who knows this or for whom a Hotṛ priest who knows this recites. The All-gods come to the call of him who knows,

It is a curious inversion of ideas by which the old popular rites retained no doubt reluctantly in the ritual become regarded as improper and needing atonement.

¹ From niṣkṛta comes the Vedic iṣkṛti according to Bloomfield, J. A. O. S., XVI, xxvi. For saṃskṛta as 'well-cooked', see Thomas, J. R. A. S., 1904, p. 748; Kirste, J. R. A. S., 1905, p. 353. For iṣ and √iṣ, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 2-4. For aram above, which as against alam, V, 2, 3, is a sign of early date, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 211 sq.; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 43 sq. alam already appears in the Atharvaveda. The syntax is normal, see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 146, 147. Sāyaṇa, probably correctly, explains that the hymn has the word aram because the day is aram, not vice versa. The use of vai favours this.

² Sāyaṇa interprets sādhantā either as dual or as equivalent to sādhayantam. In the original, the pāda has Varuṇaṃ ca rīṣādasam (cf. Pischel, Vedische Studien, III, 190).

nigher, with thy strengths preserve thy singers'³ (RV., VIII, 53, 5-6), (there is 'the word 'singers'); this day indeed is a hymn, and being possessed of a hymn, the form of this day is perfect. (There is the word 'hero') in the verse, 'Let Brahmanaspati come forth, hither the hero' (RV., I, 40, 3^{ac}); the form of this day indeed is perfect as endowed with strength. (There is the word 'heroic might') in the verse, 'Rise up, O Brahmanaspati; heroic might' (RV., I, 40, 1^a, 2^b); the form of this day is perfect as endowed with might. (There is the word 'hymn') in the verse, 'Now doth Brahmanaspati proclaim the hymn of praise' (RV., I, 40, 5); this day indeed is a hymn and the form of this day as endowed with a hymn is perfect. (There is the word 'slaying Vṛtra') in the verse, 'Agni, the slayer of Vṛtra, will bear' (RV., III, 20, 4^{ac}); the slaying⁴ of Vṛtra is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'strong') in the verse, 'Thou art strong by insight, O Soma, thou art mighty in thy might and greatness' (RV., I, 91, 2^{ac}); might indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'strong') in the verse, 'They fill full the waters; they lead forth the strong one⁵ like a horse for rain' (RV., I, 64, 6^d); strength indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. Further in that verse, 'They milk the thundering never-failing spring' (RV., I, 64, 6), (there is the word 'thundering'); thundering indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's, and Indra's is the form of this day. (There is the word 'great') in the verse, 'To great Indra' (RV., VIII, 89, 3); what indeed is great, is large, the form of this day as endowed with largeness is perfect. (There is the word 'great') in the verse, 'Sing a great song to Indra' (RV., VIII, 89, 1); what indeed is great is large, the form of this day as endowed with largeness is perfect. (There are the words 'was in the way of' and 'stayed not') in the verse, 'No one was in the way of, none stayed, the chariot of

⁴ This is, I take it, the meaning. The verses contain words because the day has certain qualities. It is also possible to invert the relation, and derive from the epithets in the verses the qualities of the day, but the position of the verse in the sentence points to the former interpretation as slightly the more probable, and that view is supported by Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 3 ad fin.: mahatvad hy etad ahaḥ. The literal version is 'As to the words, &c.'

Sudās' (RV., VII, 32, 10); the form of this day as endowed with the terms pariyasta and rāñsi is perfect. He recites all the Pragāthas to obtain all the days, all the Ukthas,² all the Prṣṭhas,³ all the Śāstras, all the Praūgas, all the pressings of the Soma.

2. He recites¹ the hymn, 'Fair has been my effort, singer; slayer of truth' (RV., X, 27). True, indeed, is this day and perfect its form as endowed with truth. This hymn is composed by Vasukra. Vasukra indeed is brahman, and this day is brahman. Thus by brahman is brahman commenced. Here they ask: 'Why then is the Marutvatīya Śāstra commenced by Vasukra's hymn?' Because no other than Vasukra produced² a Marutvatīya Śāstra nor separated it. Therefore by the hymn of Vasukra the Marutvatīya Śāstra is commenced. This hymn is not addressed to any definite deity³ and is therefore Prajāpati's. For Prajāpati is undefined, and the hymn serves to win Prajāpati. Once⁴ he describes Indra, and so the hymn retains its form as Indra's. He recites the hymn, 'Drink the Soma, for which in anger thou breakest' (RV., VI, 17). (There is the word 'mightily') in the verse, 'The cow stall, Indra, mightily being lauded;' the form of this day as endowed with the word mightily⁵ is perfect. This hymn is deliberately chosen wrongly. The exact sense of the original is, however, open to doubt, cf. Ludwig and Griffith's translations.

² The Ukthas here meant, Sāyaṇa says, are those for the *ukthyakratu*s, following the Yajñyājñīya Sāman. The Prṣṭhas are the four Prṣṭha Stotras of the midday pressing. The Śāstras are those of the Ājya and other rites. The Praūgas are the Śāstras of the Praūga and are specially mentioned on the nyāya, brāhmaṇā āgatāḥ parivrajāḥ apy āgatāḥ (so S; R reads abhy^o, which is nonsense).

² Cf. Macdonell, Sarvānukramaṇi, p. 183, Bṛhaddevatā, II, 256; Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 7, 8. See Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 30, 3: te ete dhōyye anirukto Prajāpatye, VI, 20, 18; Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXIII, 2; Maitrāyaṇi Samhitā, III, 6, 5; Nirukta, VII, 4. Sāyaṇa says Prajāpati is anirukta as he has no mūrti. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 1 has: anirukto vai Prajāpatiḥ. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 333; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 16.

⁴ In RV., X, 27, 22. The Bṛhaddevatā and Sarvānukramaṇi ascribe X, 27-29 generally to Indra, with certain exceptions (Macdonell, Bṛhaddevatā, I, 127).

⁵ Clearly the Āraṇyaka takes mahi as an accusative = mahad, and presumably, like Sāyaṇa, grāṇa as active. Māhi in the original is taken by Griffith in his translation as a vocative from composed by Bharadvāja, and Bharadvāja was of seers the most learned, the longest lived, and the greatest practiser of austerities. By this hymn he drove away evil. When⁶ therefore a man recites the hymn of Bharadvāja, it is that mahin against the accent. Cf. also Grassmann and Ludwig's translations. For the passive sense of gṛhṇāna cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, p. 362; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 264.

⁶ The form apahatyā may be either a dative, 'for the driving away,' or an ablative, more probably the latter, as presumably the sense is that Bharadvāja attained his length of years by the hymn rather than the reverse. āsa above is clearly differentiated in time from the narrative; cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VI, 1, where the imperfect avasat describes the dwelling from time to time of Gārgya Bālāki, while āsa is used to denote his permanent character, and uvāca in describing his conversation with Ajātasatru. This use of the perfect as a narrative tense is not a sign of lateness when the use is different from that of the imperfect. In the Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa itself uvāca and āsa (XIII, 6, 9) are both found in such cases. Cf. also Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 48, 5: Bharadvājo ha vai kṛṣo dīrghaś palīta āsa (so 'bravit'), and III, 48, 4. The position of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and Āraṇyaka as early appear clearly from the following table of the proportion of perfects to imperfects (see Whitney, P. A. O. S., May, 1891, pp. lxxxv sq., slightly modified):—

The earlier part of the Aitareya (I-XXVI) can thus claim to be older than anything save the Pañcaviṃśa and the Saṃhitās, and may be as old (for in such small matters as those of the Aitareya the proportions are not fair) as the Saṃhitās (Brāhmaṇa parts, of course). Against this sporadic cases like saṃ lokete, lajjate, saciva (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xxx) cannot be regarded as of decisive weight. lajjamānā indeed as a Prākṛitism⁷ would be note-

he may become, by the driving away of evil, learned, long-lived, and versed in asceticism; for that he recites the hymn of Bharadvāja. He recites the hymn, 'With what splendour do ye who are of equal age and dwell together?' (RV., I, 165). (There is the word 'praises') in the verse, 'They call for me, the praises long for me' (RV., I, 165, 4^o); this day is praise and the form of this day as endowed with praise is perfect. This is the kayātubhiya hymn,⁷ and it is harmony and worthy, but when it is considered that the form is unique (III, 22, 7), that the later language had always √lajj and that lajjā was a common word, there can surely be no hesitation in restoring lajyamānā, just as the Atharvan Prākritisms, cited above, must be removed. The exact verbal form of the text cannot always be relied upon, and it may be noted that, as Sāyaṇa's note on VII, 10; 11 shows, in his time some versions of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa had, which some had not, these chapters, of which the second is a mere corruption of Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, VII, 11 (see Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, pp. 236, 382, 444). The case of the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa may be held to contradict the deductions here accepted, since Bloomfield (Atharvaveda, pp. 164 sq.) has shown grounds for holding that the Pūrva is not later than the Uttara, but this objection is not of importance, since it is the case that the two parts owe most of their grammatical forms to these sources and the Pūrva borrows from the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI and XII, in the first of which books the number of perfects is very high, while the Uttara exploits the Aitareya, &c. The potential in īta (see Aufrecht, p. 429) also urged as a sign of late date is merely, in all probability, an inaccurate analogical form to forms like īta (dadhīta, &c.), and gives no criterion of date (cf. Liebhich, Pāṇini, p. 32). āmantrayānu āsa occurs only in VII, 17 and proves nothing for the earlier part of the Brāhmaṇa. Pāṇini, III, 1, 40, allows only kr (Liebhich, p. 33); but as there can be no doubt of the priority of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa to Pāṇini (cf. Liebhich's own paper, Benz. Beitr., XI, 309), this clearly shows either the selective character of Pāṇini's work or more probably the incorrect transmission of the text (the Sākhāyana has cakre, Liebhich, pp. 80, 81). The use of āvām (for āvam) is apparently a note of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa's style, not a proof of date.⁸ Liebhich (p. 30) holds that āsa was obsolete in Pāṇini's day in prose and says Yaska uses only babhūva. I cannot accept this view as to Pāṇini.

⁷ The story of Indra, Agastya, and the Maruts has received full treatment from Sieg (Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 108-119). He holds that RV., I, 170, 171, and 165 make up an Itihāsa to the effect that Agastya offered a sacrifice to the Maruts. Indra came and claimed it, and Agastya had to pacify Indra and the Maruts. The result is possible, but not certain. The Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXVI, 9, has (as amended by Sieg, p. 117, n. 7): kayā tubhā

p. 302; Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 604). So in Khilla, I, 2, 9^a, MSS. read prīṇayanti for prīṇanti and this Prākritism is found in Varṭtika 1 to Pāṇini, VII, 3, 37. See also Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 135.

abiding, the kayāsubhiya hymn. For by means of it Indra, Agastya, and the Maruts came to harmony. So the recitation of the kayāsubhiya hymn tends to harmony. Further the hymn tends to long life. So if the sacrificer be dear to the priest, let him recite for him⁸ the kayāsubhiya hymn. He recites the hymn, 'Indra, with the Maruts, powerful, for joy' (RV., III, 47). There are the words 'Indra, powerful'; power indeed is a characteristic of Indra, this day is Indra's and Indra's its form. This hymn is composed by Viśvāmitra. Now Viśvāmitra was the friend of all, and all is the friend of him who knows this and of those for whom a Hotṛ priest, who knows this, recites this hymn. The hymn 'Thou art born, terrible, for strength, for energy' (RV., X, 73) is one containing nivids,⁹ and, as belonging to the one day ceremonial, is perfect in form. Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden, and (this hymn) is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (nividdhāna) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom a Hotṛ priest, who knows this, recites this nividdhāna. If recited straight on, the verses number ninety-seven.¹⁰ The ninety is made up of three virāj sets of thirty, and then savayasah sanīdā iti marutvatīyam | tad etat sanjñānaṃ santani sūktam | etena hendrat ca Marutā ca samojānatām, which must go back to the same source as the Aitareya version, found also in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 16, which agrees verbally with this passage. For sanjñāna see also Bloomfield, Ātharvaveda, pp. 72, 73.

⁸ The gen. here is probably possessive and predicative (eius faciat), cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 63 and 71; Liebhich, Bezz. Beitr., XI, 307 sq.; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 162, while the gen. with priya is adnominal and regular from RV. onwards. Not unnatural is the transition from such genitives to the genitive which is really a dative, e.g. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 15, 7: tasya satam dattvā would if hṛtvā were put for dattvā be quite regular. On the other hand in tasya brah dadhāti (ibid., II, 40, 6) the gen. is practically dative. In Pāli (Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 67) and in Prākṛit (Pischel, Prākṛit Grammar, p. 246) the dative of the indirect objective is always represented by the genitive, the dative of purpose alone surviving. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 297. Note the dative with mītram below, and genitive in ekṣām paśūnām, I, 2, 3; and Geldner, Vedische Studien, I, 283. On the low morality of the Brāhmaṇas, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, p. 9; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 180 sq.; Garbe, Philosophy of Ancient India, p. 62.

¹⁰ Sāyaṇa explains thus: the two treas referred to in I, 2, 1 = 6; six pragāthas each of two verses made into a treā = 18; three dhāyās = 3; asat m = 24; pība somam = 15; kayā subhā = 15; marutvān Indra = 5; janīthā ugraḥ = 11; total 97. But in I, 2, 1 there are seven pragāthas which would give 100. Apparently the author overlooked this, although of course the explanations are possible. Oldenberg (Prolegomena, p. 353) thinks that some of the pragāthas may have been counted as two, others as three verses.

there are seven which are over. Whatever is praise of the seven is also praise of the ninety. If the first and last are repeated thrice the verses number 101. There are five four-jointed¹¹ fingers, two pits, the arm, the collar-bone, the shoulder-blade; these make up twenty-five. The other parts¹² have twenty-five each, making a hundred, and the trunk is the one hundred and first part. The hundred is life,¹³ health, strength, glory; the sacrificer is the hundred and first, resting on life, health, strength, glory. These verses become triṣṭubh.¹⁴ For the midday pressing is accompanied by triṣṭubh verses.¹⁵

3. They ask, 'Why is a swing¹ a swing?' He who blows is the swing. He

¹¹ The four are, according to Sāyaṇa, agra, madhya, mūla, tanmūla, and he notes that though the aṅguṣṭha has really only three, it is given a fourth for the sake of symmetry. So in the systems of Caraka and Suśruta (Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 122, 123) there are sixty phalanges, giving fifteen in each hand. Here the phalanges and the metacarpus are reckoned as phalanges. In Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 5, each pāṇi, on the other hand, is given three parvāṇi, which is the more correct view, and perhaps later. The expression kakṣasī is doubtful. It cannot mean 'armpits', for there is but one on each side; Max Müller says the pits 'in the elbow and the arm'; Monier-Williams, Dict. (where the reference is inaccurate) gives the sense as the two depressions on the wrist; Sāyaṇa says kakṣasya pūrṇadvayam, and possibly the armpit may be conceived of as in some way double. He takes, followed by Max Müller, akṣaḥ as eye, but (a) śīras is a separate element and the eye belongs to it; (b) the form is unparalleled. Friedländer holds that akṣa (Ar. aksa, Lat. axilla, O.H.G. ahsala) means 'shoulder-blade', but that is the meaning of amṣaphalaka in the systems of Caraka (Hoernle, J.R.A.S., 1907, p. 13), perhaps of Suśruta and Vāgbhaṭa (J.R.A.S., 1906, p. 931; Osteology, pp. 76, 91). So akṣa must mean 'collar-bone', as I would take it in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 4 (akṣā and akṣaḥ) and as in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa (akṣa). The later form is usually akṣaka, though akṣa is found in the 'non-medical version of Ātreya', see Hoernle, Osteology, pp. 55, 134, n. 1, and my review, Z.D.M.G., LXII, 135 sq. Sāyaṇa's error is found in the commentators on Yājñavalkya and in the modern translations.

¹⁴ Because the last hymn is triṣṭubh (Sāyaṇa). But all the hymns in that Khaṇḍa are in triṣṭubh.

¹ The use of the swing refers, in the opinion of Oldenberg (Religion des Veda, p. 444), to the sun, which is called 'the golden swing in heaven' in RV., VII, 87, 5. This is quite probable, as the Mahāvratā rite is, at least to some extent, a sun-charm (cf. Introd., p. 28). Sāyaṇa's interpretation follows the text and makes the swing Vāyu, as does Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 7. I, 2, 4 below is in favour of the sun; cf. Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, XXXIV, 5, cited in Ind. Stud., III, 477. Compare the dolāyātrā of the young Kṛṣṇa, clearly a vegetation rite.

swings forward in these worlds and then is a swing a swing. 'There should be one plank,' some say, 'for the wind blows in one way and (the swing should be) like the wind.' But this is not to be accepted.² Others say, 'There should be three planks, for threefold are these worlds and (the swing should) resemble them.' But this is not to be accepted. There should be two planks, for these two worlds³ seem most real, and the ether between them is the sky. So let there be two planks. Let them be of udumbara wood.⁴ The udumbara is sap and proper food, and planks of it serve to win sap and proper food. Let them be raised in the middle. For in the middle food delights men, and so he places the sacrificer in the middle of proper food. There are two kinds of ropes,⁵ the right and the left. The right serves for some animals, the left for others. When there are both kinds, they serve to win both kinds of animals. The ropes should be of *darbha*⁶ grass. For of all plants darbha is free of evil,⁷ and so they should be of darbha grass.

² This is the constant phrase of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. That of the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa and it may be added of the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, is na tad ādriyeta. Cf. Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 432; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 38, n. 6; 44, n. 1.

⁷ The construction of the genitive with a positive is based on the analogy of the superlative, e.g. infra, I, 2, 4 (Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 65, 91 II). Similarly the ablative is found dependent on a positive, e.g. RV., V, 10, 4 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 390), Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 58, Sanskrit Syntax, p. 78; Delbrück, Grundriss, III, 1, 216; Fischel, Gött. Gel. Anz., 1884, p. 509, Vedische Studien, I, 309; Geldner, ibid., III, 76, 77; and see II, 3, 1, n. 6. For the word apahatapāpmā, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 25, 4: apahatapāpmāṇaḥ and anapahatapāpmāṇaḥ; Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 3, 21 (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 168, n. 3); Chāndogya Upaniṣad, I, 2, 9; VIII, 1, 5; 4, 1; 7, 1.

4. Some say, 'The swing should be one ell above the ground, for by that are the heavenly worlds measured.' But this is not to be accepted. Others say, 'It should be a span, for by that are the breaths measured.' But this is not to be accepted. It should be one fist¹ above the ground, for by that all proper food is made and all proper food is taken. So let it be just one fist above the ground. Some say, 'Let him mount the swing from east to west, like the sun here who shines, for he mounts these worlds from east to west.' But this is not to be accepted. Some say, 'Let him mount sideways,² for men mount a horse³ sideways, thinking thereby to win all their desires.' But this is not to be accepted. They say, 'Let him mount from behind, men indeed mount a ship from behind and the swing is a heavenfaring⁴ ship.' Therefore let him mount from behind. Let him touch the swing with his chin.⁵ For thus does the parrot mount a tree, and the parrot eats most of all birds. Therefore let him touch the swing with his chin. Let him mount the swing with his arms.⁶ So the hawk sweeps down on birds, and so he mounts trees, and he is the strongest of birds. Therefore let him mount with his arms. Let him not withdraw from the earth one foot, lest he lose his hold of it. The Hotṛ mounts the swing, the Udgātṛ the seat of udumbara wood. The swing is masculine, the seat feminine, and they are united. This union is made at the beginning of the hymn for the sake of offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Now the swing is food, the seat prosperity. Thus

² The swing is east and west; north and south is sideways, says Sāyaṇa. The accusatives below are quasi predicative, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 78, 79; III, 2, 4.

⁶ That is the forearm from the elbow. For further details of this ceremony see V, 1, 4. For ned below, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 317; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 240, n. The agreement of annūdātamaḥ with īyenaḥ is characteristic. See Taittirīya Saṃhitā, V, 9, 11, 1: īyēno vai vdyasām pātīṣṭhaḥ; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 80. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 95 c) is unable to cite an example from Sanskrit. It is the general rule in Latin, where, however, post-Augustan exceptions occur, e.g. velocissimum animalium delphinus est (Pliny, Nat. Hist., ix, 8, 20).

they⁷ mount to food and fortune. The Hotrakas⁸ with the Brahman sit down on seats of grass. Plants and trees having grown up bear fruit. So then if they mount all together on this day they mount on strength, on sap, on proper food. This serves to win sap⁹ and proper food. Some say, 'Let him descend¹⁰ after saying vaśaś.'¹¹ But this is not to be accepted. For the honour done to one that sees it not¹² is indeed not done. Others say, 'Let him descend after taking the food.'¹³ But this is not to be accepted. For the honour done to one that has approached near is indeed not done. Let him descend after seeing the food. For that is honour indeed which is done to one who sees it. Therefore only after seeing the food, let him descend. Let him descend towards the east, for in the east is born the seed¹⁴ of the gods. Then let him descend towards the east.

⁷ They, i.e. the Hotṛ and Udgātṛ. Max Müller follows R in translating 'he', but this makes nonsense and the commentary shows that R is wrong.

¹³ Max Müller suggests, and S apparently independently also suggests, that the reading may be devaretāḥ saṃprajāyate. But the use of saṃprajāyate is curious, as the saṃ has no intelligible force, and on the other hand the form retasā is not impossible, as forms from a, as, asa, exchange more or less freely throughout Sanskrit, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 415, 1319, and a long list in Wackernagel, op. cit., II, i, 113, 114; in a Bahuvrīhi agniretasā occurs in the Śatapatha, ibid., 111. In Pāli of course the asa form prevails, Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 65. Cf. also Pischel, Prākṛit Grammar, §§ 407 sq.

They say, 'Let him begin this day' with saying the word him.¹ In the word him is brahman, this day is brahman, and so he begins brahman by means of brahman,² who knows this. Now with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is masculine,³ and the ꣳc feminine. They make a pair and so he makes a pair at the beginning of the hymn for the sake of offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Again with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is to brahman like a wooden shovel.⁴ Just as one desires to dig up anything with a wooden shovel, so with the word one digs up brahman. Whatever he desires, he digs up with the word him, who knows this. Again with regard to his beginning with the word him, the word is the discrimination of divine and human speech.⁵ So he, who begins with the utterance of the word him, discriminates divine and human speech.

¹ The time of hinvṛtya and pratipadyate are obviously really identical. This is readily explained by the originally timeless force of the form ṛtya (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 889, 894). So the aorist participle in Greek sometimes coincides with the time of the verb, e.g. Monro, Homeric Grammar, p. 212. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 405-409) holds that in all these cases the distinction of time between the main verb and the gerund exists, but, however natural the growth of this use is, it is only to be found in the examples by forcing the sense. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 223) lays stress on the 'aoristic' effect of the weak root and appears to think that this accounts for the past force. But it should be noted that in Vedic we have no evidence that the forms were ever felt as other than participles either present or past. In striyaṃ dṛṣṭvāya kṛtvāya tatāpa it is most probable that the writer did not feel dṛṣṭvāya as 'after having seen', but as 'seeing'. Cf. my remarks in J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 164. For beginning the Mahāvratā with him, cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 1. For hinv + ꣳkr, cf. Whitney, § 1079. It is obsolete in the classical language.

2. They say, 'What is the beginning of this day?' Let him reply, 'Mind and speech.'¹ All desires rest on the one, the other yields all desires. All desires rest on the mind,² for with the mind man conceives all desires. All desires rest on him who knows this. Speech yields all desires, for by speech man expresses all desires. Speech yields all desires to him who knows this. Then they say, 'One should not really begin the day with a ṛc, yajus, or sāman verse, nor start from³ a ṛc, yajus, or sāman verse.' So one should say the vyāhṛtis first. The vyāhṛtis are bhūh, bhuvaḥ, and svaḥ,⁴ and they are the three Vedas. Bhūh is the Ṛgveda, bhuvaḥ the Yajurveda, and svaḥ the Sāmaveda.⁵ Therefore

The real meaning of the discrimination is suggested by Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 18, 13: om iti vai daivam tatheti mānuṣam | daivena caivainam tan mānuṣeṇa ca pāpān enasaḥ pramuñcati, cf. Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 162, n. 1. The later use of divi vāc must be related to Devanāgarī. For the question of Prākṛit, cf. I, 5, 2, n. In the Rāmāyaṇa passage where Hanuman ponders as to addressing Sītā, the possibilities he contemplates are (according to Jacobi) vācam mānuṣīm saṃskṛtām, or divijātir iva, vācam saṃskṛtām, which appears clearly to discriminate between the popular and sacerdotal forms of Sanskrit. That the former expression means (as Dr. Grierson, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 56, holds) the Prākṛit of the educated Kṣatriyas and well-to-do persons round the court appears excessively improbable. Nor is it correct to say that these forms of Sanskrit were practically alike. The Epic and the Sanskrit of the Brahminical schools are of distinctively different style, and Sītā might well have been surprised at being addressed not in the Kṣatriya fashion but by priestly expressions, much as a lady of the middle ages would find a great difference between the address of a countess and a monk, even when both spoke the same Latin language.

¹ Sāyana explains this as referring to the need for care in going through the service, composed as it is of mixed verses.

² Sāyana explains that the desires are phases of mind, manoṛttivileṣāḥ, which is too subtle for the Āraṇyaka. Cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, III, 2: manasā hi kāmān kāmāyate; and Jacob, Concordance, p. 292; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 2, 3.

he does not really begin the day with a ṛc, yajus, or sāman verse, nor start from a ṛc, yajus, or sāman verse.

3. He begins with tad,¹ this. Now 'this this'² is food, and so thus he obtains food. Prajāpati indeed uttered this as the first word consisting of one syllable or of two,³ viz. tata or tāta. So a child when it first speaks utters the word of one or two syllables, tata or tāta. So with this very word with tata in it⁴ he begins. A Ṛṣi says (RV., X, 71, 1), 'O Bṛhaspati, the first point of speech,' for this is the first point of speech. 'Which they have uttered making a name,' for by speech are names made. 'That of them which was the best and flawless,' for this is the best and flawless. 'That is hidden in secret by their love and yet is made manifest,' for this as regards the body is secret, merely the deities (who enter the body), but as regards the gods⁵ it is made manifest. This is the meaning of the verse.⁶

(apparently as a fourth Samhitā), and Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 110), but the recognition is a sign of later date (Taittiriya Samhitā, VII, is not probably early, but, like VI, is later than the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa).

⁴ I take tat tatavatya separately and eva tat as = 'so'. This seems also to be Sāyaṇa's interpretation. Max Müller says: 'With this very word, consisting of tat or tatta [cf. the reading of L], he begins,' and in a note: 'If tat is called the very same word, eva is used in the sense of iva.' This appears rather unsatisfactory, and Sāyaṇa is probably right in thinking tat and tata similar enough for the purpose here in view. This passage, indeed, seems to be a deliberate and somewhat elaborate variant of the older legend (preserved in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 1, 6) by which Prajāpati when he first spoke uttered bhūh, bhuvaḥ, and sva, which are words of one and two syllables respectively. Sāyaṇa has: ekena hrasteno-petaikākṣarū | dvābhyāṃ hrastadvirghābhyām upetū dvayākṣarā. Eka dvayākṣara is apparently an adjunct. Dvandva with disjunctive force; cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 70; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 73 sq.; Vergl. Syntax, III, 224 sq., for early examples. The whole sense is little more than that tad which is equal to tat(a) or tāt(a) is the name which, as brahman, is revealed in the deities and implicit in man in whose organs, &c., the deities are (as in II, 1, 5; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, IX, 1, &c.).

⁶ This stanza is very obscure. Sāyaṇa quotes Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 15, 8, where it is laid down that a child's secret name is only to be known by father and mother until the upanayana. That this is what is referred to here is not impossible, as Max Müller points out,

4. He begins with,¹ 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1), for that² is indeed the oldest in the worlds. 'Whence sprung the terrible one with brilliant might,' for from it he was born who is terrible with brilliant might. 'Immediately on birth he destroys his foes,' for immediately on being born he destroyed evil. 'After whom all helpers rejoice,' for all creatures are helpers, and they rejoice after him, saying, 'He³ has risen, he has risen.' 'Growing by strength, the powerful one' (RV., X, 120, 2), for he grows by strength, the powerful one. 'As foe he smites fear into the Dāsa,' for all fear him. 'Taking that which breathes and that which breathes not,' this refers to the living and the lifeless. 'What was offered in the feasts came to thee,' this means, 'all is in thy power.' 'All turn their thoughts on thee' (RV., X, 120, 3), this means all beings, all minds, all thoughts, turn on thee. 'When these two become three helpers,' these two being united produce offspring. Children and cattle are his who knows this. 'Join what is sweeter than sweet with the sweet,' for the pair is sweet, the offspring sweet, and so with the pair he joins the offspring. 'He⁴ conquered by the sweet that which is sweet,' for the pair is sweet, the offspring is sweet, and thus through the pair he conquers offspring. A Ṛṣi⁵ says, but the interpretation adopted in n. 4 above seems to render the reference quite unnecessary. The last verse he explains as meaning that the form of the gods who enter the body is hidden from men, but the gods themselves know the name well. This is practically meaningless, and Max Müller suggests that it may be that the name refers to the gods or to tad, the brahman. The reference, however, to the deities who enter the body is clearly meant in some form, cf. II, 4, 2; 1, 5; and the sense is the brahman = tad, which is the beginning of speech and the first of names is revealed (as the gods) and implicit in man. This section is referred to by 'Sāyaṇa' on Atharvaveda, XVIII, 4, 77; see Lanman in Whitney's Atharvaveda, p. 892.

² i.e. brahman (Sāyaṇa). The explanations of this hymn in the Āranyaka must be deliberately perverse, so absurd are they. Cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xxix, n. 6.

⁴ Sāyaṇa takes adaḥ as referring to mithunam which is sumadhu as consisting of the son and daughter-in-law. Madhunā is equal to grandchildren, and abhiyodhiḥ is 'provide', i.e. 'provide that dear pair with dear offspring, our grandchildren'. He does not therefore even follow the Āranyaka, which clearly took sumadhu as accusative. Max Müller translates: 'And this (the son when married) being very sweet conquered through the sweet.' But this represents neither the Āranyaka nor Sāyaṇa.

⁵ This verse, which is not in the Ṛgveda, is not by any means clearly connected with the rest. Sāyaṇa gives two alternatives, that it is connected with the verse svādoḥ svādīyaḥ svādunā 1ṛjā sam, or with the whole Śāstra (not, as in Max Müller, that it is connected with the hymn tad id āsa, or the Veda in general). In the first case 'this body' is the body of the sacrificer, the other

'Since he raised this body in that body;' he means this body consisting of the Veda in that corporeal body.⁶ 'Then let this body' be the medicine of that,' he means this body consisting of the Veda is to be the medicine of that corporeal body. Of this eight⁸ syllables are gāyatrī, eleven are triṣṭubh, twelve jagatī, and ten virāj. This consisting of ten syllables rests in the other three metres. The three syllable word *puruṣa*⁹ goes into the virāj. These indeed are all metres, the three and the virāj. To him who knows this¹⁰ thus is this day completed with all the metres.

5. He extends the verses by the use of nada.¹ Nada indeed is man. So a man speaking sounds as it were. In the words *nadaṃ va oḍaṭinām*² (RV., VIII, 69, 2), oḍaṭyaḥ are the waters in heaven, for they water all this; and they are the waters of the mouth, for they water all proper food. In nadaṃ yoyuṇvaṭinām, yoyuṇvaṭyaḥ are the waters of the sky, for they inundate as it were; and they are the waters of perspiration,³ for they run constantly as it were. In the words patim vo aghnyānām, aghnyāḥ are the waters that are born of the smoke of fire,⁴ and they are the waters that spring from the organ. In dhenūnām body the body of the parents and the result is seen in svādoḥ, &c. The other case gives the interpretation of the Āraṇyaka, as Sāyaṇa himself admits, tad etad dvitīyaṃ vyākhyānam aśyām ity ādinā brāhmaṇena spaṣṭikriyate. This shows how little Sāyaṇa felt bound to follow his authorities. The words svām—ārayata occur in various guises in Atharvaveda, VII, 3; Taittirīya Saṃhitā, I, 7, 12, 2; Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, I, 10, 3; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, II, 19, 32; Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 17, 1.

⁷ The hymn tad id āsa (Sāyaṇa).

⁸ The hymn, RV., X, 120, is triṣṭubh, and the desired metres are only obtained by torturing it. The first, second, and fourth pādas have ten syllables, the third eleven. The first eight of the first pāda give the gāyatrī, the remaining two added to the ten of the second and fourth pādas the jagatī, and the first, second, and fourth (or rather the fourth), the virāj.

¹ The exact meaning is explained in V, 1, 6. After each pāda of RV., X, 120, 1, is inserted (besides the syllables pu, ru, ṣaḥ) one pāda of the hymn, RV., VIII, 69, 2, so as to make a brhatī. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, and Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 113, n. 1.

² Sāyaṇa explains the verse with reference to juice produced at the third pressing of the Soma, the ṛjṣa (cf. Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 235 sq.), and takes nadaṃ as the sacrificer, and supplies raśata. For the real sense see Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 191 sq.

iśudhyasīti, the dhenavaḥ are the waters, for they stir all this, and by iśudhyasi he means 'thou art lord'.⁵ He extends⁶ a triṣṭubh and an anuṣṭubh. For the triṣṭubh is male, the anuṣṭubh female, and the two are a pair. So a man having taken to himself a wife regards himself as it were more complete. By repeating the first verse thrice, the verses become twenty-five.⁷ The trunk is the twenty-fifth, Prajāpati is the twenty-fifth. He has ten fingers, ten toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. He adorns this trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further the day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, and the stoma hymn of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are twenty-five.

6. He begins¹ with tad, this. Now 'this this' is food, and so thus he obtains food. Prajāpati indeed uttered this as the first word consisting of one syllable or of two, viz. tata or tāta. So a child when it first speaks utters the word of one or two syllables, tata or tāta. So with this very word with tata in it he begins. A Ṛṣi says (RV., X, 71, 1), 'O Bṛhaspati, the first point of speech,' for this is the first point of speech. 'Which they have uttered making a name,' for by speech are names made. 'That of them which was the best and flawless,' for this is the best and flawless. 'That is hidden in secret by their love and yet is made manifest,' for this as regards the body is secret, namely the deities (who enter the body), but as regards the gods it is made manifest. This is the meaning of the verse.

7. He begins with the hymn, 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1). What is oldest is great; the form of this day as possessing greatness¹ is perfect. (There is the word 'greatness' in the verse, 'That fame of thine, O Maghavan, through thy greatness' (RV., X, 54, 1); the form of this day as possessing greatness is perfect. (There is the word 'strength') in the verse, 'He groweth more for strength' (RV., VI, 30, 1); the form of this day as possessing strength is perfect.

saṃnipātāḥ kva neghaḥ. The waters are aghnyā, he says, because plants and trees are to be tended by all. Cf. also Bṛhaddevatā, IV, 41, which explains RV., I, 164, 43: śakamayaṃ dhūmam; Atharvaveda, IX, 10, 25.

⁷ The twenty-five are made up by nine verses of RV., X, 120, 1; six of X, 54; five of VI, 30, and three of I, 51, 4 which are mentioned in I, 3, 7 below. Cf. I, 1, 2, 4 and n. 6 on V, 1, 5.

² The difference in the first two verses, of course, is that in the first jyeṣṭham needs to be equated to mahat, whereas mahitvā actually occurs in the second. For the construction, cf. I, 2, 1, n. 4.

(There is the word 'hymns') in the verse. 'Then, manliest of men, with songs, with hymns' (RV., III, 51, 4); this day is indeed a hymn, and the form of this day as possessing a hymn is perfect. He extends the first two² verses, which are deficient, by a syllable. In the small³ (womb) seed is deposited, in the small (heart) the vital spirits, in the small (stomach) food is placed. This serves for the obtainment of these desires. He obtains these desires who knows this. The two of ten syllables serve to obtain both kinds of proper food, that which is footed and that which is footless.⁴ They become eighteen syllables apiece.⁵ Of the ten, nine are the breaths,⁶ one is the self. This is the perfection of the self. Eight syllables⁷ remain in each. Who knows this obtains whatsoever⁸ he desires.

8. He extends the verses by means of nada.¹ Now breath is sound. Therefore every breath, when it sounds, sounds loud as it were. The verse nadam va odaṣṇām (RV., VIII, 69, 2) is by its syllables² an uṣṇih, but by its feet an anuṣṭubh. Uṣṇih is life, anuṣṭubh speech. Thus he places speech and life in him. By repeating the first verse thrice, the verses become twenty-five. The trunk is the twenty-fifth, Prajāpati is the twenty-fifth. He has ten fingers, ten ² That is RV., X, 120, 1^a, with ten syllables, and VIII, 69, 2^a, with seven. He adds pu to them.

³ Cf. I, 1, 2 ad fin.

⁴ i. e. animals and vegetables (Sāyana).

⁶ (śiraśi) chidrāṇi is the version of Sāyana and it is as probable as any other, though the word originally meant breath and only metaphorically is transferred to its use as describing the organs of sense. The nine 'orifices', seven in the head and two in the body, according to a Śruti (Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, 5, 9; 10; 6, 8, is the reference, I think) cited by Sāyana (saṣṭa vai śirṣanyūḥ prāṇa dvau avāntau), are referred to in the Kāthaka Upaniṣad, V, 1 (where in all, however, there are eleven), Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, III, 18, Yogasūcā Upaniṣad, 4, Yogatattva Upaniṣad, 16, and elsewhere. They are ears, eyes, mouth, nostrils and organs of evacuation, with the navel when ten are counted, as in the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad, and Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa, II, 77 (J.A.O.S., XV, 240), and brahmaraṇḍhra when eleven are counted. Cf. Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, p. 243; E. T., p. 265; Sechzig Upanishads, p. 281, n. 1, and nava vai śiraśi prāṇāḥ, Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 2, which points to a different idea, for which see I, 4, 1, n. 5; 5, 1, n. 6; 2, n. 13.

⁷ That is, after deducting the ten from the eighteen.

² It has four pādas, and is therefore like an anuṣṭubh, which of course it really is. But it has in the Saṃhitā form only twenty-seven syllables, or resolving the y in aghnyeṇām in pāda 3, twenty-eight, which is the number of syllables in an uṣṇih, which, however, has three pādas (8 + 8 + 12) only.

toes, two legs, two arms, and the trunk is the twenty-fifth. He adorns this trunk, the twenty-fifth. Further this day (of the sacrifice) is twenty-five, the stoma hymn of this day is twenty-five, like is brought about by like. So the two are twenty-five. This is the twenty-fifth with regard to the body. Now with regard to the deities. The eye, ear, mind, speech, and vital spirits, these five deities³ have entered into this person, and he has entered into these five deities. He is then⁴ pervaded wholly in all his limbs up to his hair and nails. So all beings, down to ants, are born thus pervaded. A Ṛṣi says (RV., X, 114, 8), 'A thousandfold are these fifteen members,'⁵ for five arises from ten. 'As large as heaven and earth, so large is it,' for the self is as large as heaven and earth. 'A thousand-fold are the thousand mights,'⁶ thus does the poet please and magnify the members. 'As far as brahman extends so far does Vāc,' wherever there is brahman, there is Vāc,⁷ wherever Vāc, there is brahman, is what is meant. The first⁸ of these hymns has nine verses, for nine are the breaths, and it serves to win them. The second has six verses, the seasons are six, and it serves to win them. The third has five verses, the *pañkti*⁹ has five feet, and it is food, so it serves to win proper food. Then comes a tristich, there are three threefold worlds, and it serves to conquer them. These verses become brhatīs,¹⁰ the

¹⁰ The first pāda of RV., X, 120, 1, has, with pu, eleven syllables, the first pāda of RV., VIII, 69, 3, seven verses, making eighteen. So two pādas give thirty-six syllables, or a brhatī. The twenty-three verses give forty-six brhatīs, as each is extended similarly (Sāyaṇa).

ADHYĀYA 4.

Then comes the sūdadohas verse.¹ Sūdadohas is breath and by breath he joins together all joints. Then the neck verses.² They denote them as uṣṇīh verses according to their metre. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath and by breath he joins together all joints. Then come the head verses. They are in gāyatrī, for it is the beginning of the metres, and the head is the beginning of the members of the body.³ They are in *arkavat*⁴ verses. Arka is Agni. They are nine verses, the head is of nine pieces.⁵ He recites the tenth verse. It is the skin and hairs of the head. It serves for reciting more than

Sūdadohas is interpreted as yielding milk and it represents the verse, RV., VIII, 69, 3, tā aya sūdadohasaḥ sōmam śrīṇanti pṣṭṇayaḥ | jānman devānāṃ vllas triṣṭu ā rocanē dīvāh || This is the verse immediately after the nada verse. Its use here is explained by Sāyaṇa because it is prāṇasvarūpā. Cf. Śāṅkhāyana, II, 1: imāni parvāṇi saṃhitāni bhavanti. parvan is apparently used vaguely; cf. I, 2, 3, n. 12.

⁴ That is, RV., I, 7, 1-9; in v. 1 arkebhīr occurs.

the stoma.⁶ These form the trivṛt stoma and the gāyatrī metre, and it is after the production of this stoma and this metre that there arises all that is. These verses serve for production. Children and cattle are his who knows this. Next comes the sūdadahas verse. Sūdadahas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then come the vertebrae verses.⁷ They are in virāj metre. So one man says to another, 'Thou shinest above us,' or, 'Thou bearest a high neck,' to one who is proud.⁸ Or, again, because they run⁹ close¹⁰ together, they

For tā virājo bhavanti, if it is, as is not likely, attracted, cf. examples in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 564-566; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, VI, 16, 2 : etat ātmyam idam sarvaṃ tat satyaṃ sa ātmā; infra, II, 6, 1, and for Sanskrit, Speijer, Sanskrit Syntax, § 27. Examples, however, on non-attraction are found when needed to make plain the sense, e. g. the Chāndogya passage cited has tat tvam asi and so passim in the Upaniṣads (see Jacob's Concordance, p. 137). The use is very old, being found in Greek and Latin also. Cf. below, II, 2, 2 : eṣa vā rg eṣa, &c.; eṣa vai padam, &c. A case or two seems to occur of the reverse attraction, e. g. Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, I, 2 : etat vṛttam purastād dūḥśakyam etat praśnam, where see, however, Max Müller's note (S. B. E., XV, 288, n. 1).

⁹ duṭāḥ must be from √du gutau (Dhātupāṭha, XXII, 46) as Sāyaṇa says. Monier-Williams' Dict. omits this form, giving daviṣāṇi, RV., X, 34, 5, as the only quotable form (see v. Schroeder, Vienna Oriental Journal, XIII, 119-122). v. Schroeder (ibid., 297, 298) finds the same root with upa + ā in the sense 'anlegen' in Kāthaka Samhitā, VI, 2 : kikṣa upādityaḥ, and are taken to be¹¹ the best food. For virāj is food, and food strength. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints.

2. Now comes the right wing. It is this world,¹ it is this Agni, it is speech, it is the Rathantara, it is Vasiṣṭha, it is a hundred.² These are the six powers of it. The sampāta hymn serves to win desires and for firmness. The pañkti verse serves for proper food. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then follows the left wing. It is that world, it is that sun, it is mind,³ it is the Bṛhat, it is Bharadvāja, it is a hundred.⁴ These are the six powers of it. The sampāta hymn serves to Kaṣiṭhala Saṃhitā, IV, 1: kakṣa upādutyah, and compares Greek δέω, ινδέω, λεδέω, and Latin induo, enuo. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 98) still treats daviṣṭāni as if it meant 'I will play', as taken by Geldner (Siebenzig Lieder, pp. 158 sq.). It cannot be from √du 'burn', as suggested doubtfully in Whitney, Roots, 6th ed., p. 75.

¹⁰ sambāḥatamāḥ is clearly the reading, from √baḥ (i.e. bāḥa for baḥa). It occurs in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 954; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 58; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 44.

¹ Agni is the guardian of this world and he is also Vāc, II, 4, 2, and Vāc is Rathantara, III, 1, 6 (Sāyaṇa), while Vasiṣṭha brought the Rathantara.

² See V, 2, 2 for the verses. They are RV., VII, 32, 22 and 23; VIII, 3, 7 and 8 (three each according to the reckoning of the Āraṇyaka); I, 32 (15 vv.); VII, 18, 1-15; VII, 19 (11 vv.); 20 (10 vv.); 23 (6 vv.); 25-29 (26 vv.); IV, 20 (11 vv.); making 100 in all, and then the pañkti, I, 80, 1; IV, 20, is styled the sampāta hymn.

⁴ See V, 2, 2 for the verses. They are RV., VI, 46, 1 and 2; VIII, 61, 7 and 8 (three each according to this reckoning); VI, 18 (15 vv.); 23 (10 vv.); 24 (10 vv.); 25 (9 vv.); 31-38 (40 vv.); IV, 23 (11 vv.); making 101 in all, and then the pañkti, I, 81, 1. The sampāta is IV, 23; cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 30, 2. The śatam is not precisely accurate, but the inaccuracy is deliberate. There are 100 in the right and 101 in the left, and the pañkti verse adds one to each of them. For the varying sizes of the wings see Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 3.

win desires and for firmness. The pañkti verse serves for proper food. These two are deficient and excessive. The Bṛhad is male, the Rathantara is female. The excess is of the male, the deficiency of the female. Therefore are they deficient and excessive. Now by one feather is the left wing of the bird the better and therefore the left wing is the better by one verse. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Then follows the tail. This consists of twenty-one dvipadā verses.⁶ For twenty-one are the backward feathers of the bird. Again of all stomas is the ekaviṃśa the support, and the tail the support of all birds. He recites a twenty-second verse. This is given the form of two supports.⁶ So all birds support themselves on their tails, and having supported themselves on their tails, they fly up. For the tail is a support. He (the bird) is supported by two decades of virāj verses. He again, the man, is supported by these two dvipadās, the twenty-first and twenty-second. That which forms the bird serves to obtain the desires of the man. That which forms the man serves for his prosperity, glory, proper food, and honour. Next comes the sūdadohas verse, next an additional verse, next the sūdadohas verse. The sūdadohas is male, the additional verse female. Therefore he recites the sūdadohas verse on either side of the additional verse. Therefore the seed of the two when effused obtains oneness with regard to the woman alone. So birth takes place in and from the woman. Therefore he recites the additional verse in that way.⁷

3. He recites the eighty gāyatrī tristichs.¹ The eighty gāyatrī tristichs are this world, and whatever glory, might,² wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in this world, may I obtain it, may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine.

⁶ The feet, Sāyaṇa says. The idea seems to be, when there are twenty-two verses, that twenty represent the feet of the bird, and two those of the man. When twenty-one, it is the tail that is in question. See also V, 2, 2.

² Might is interpreted by Sāyaṇa as vedalīṣṭraprayuktā pūjā and is opposed to aparitih as dhanadhānyādīnamṛddharūpā pūjā, but he gives tejas as an alternative rendering.

Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all this world. He recites the eighty bṛhaṭ tristichs. The eighty bṛhaṭ tristichs are the sky-world, and whatever glory, might, wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in the sky-world, may I obtain it, may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine. Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all the world. He recites the eighty uṣṇih tristichs. The eighty uṣṇih tristichs are that world, heaven,² and whatever glory, might, wedlock, proper food, and honour there is in that world, and the divinity of the gods,³ may I obtain it,⁴ may I win it, may I possess it, may it be mine.⁵ Next comes the sūdadohas verse. Sūdadohas is breath, and by breath he links together all that world.

ADHYĀYA 5.

He recites the *vaśa*¹ hymn desiring all to be in his power. There are twenty-one² verses, for twenty-one are the parts in the stomach. Then the ekaviṃśa is the support of all stomas and the stomach the support of proper foods. They are in different metres. For the intestines are larger one than the other,³ some small,

² The insertion of dyaus is curious and Sāyana notes it as being vispaṣṭārthan.

² Only twenty of RV., VIII, 46, but the sūdadohas verse is counted in; see, however, on V, 2, 5 ad fin.

³ Vikṣudram is rendered 'confused' by Max Müller. The rendering in the text is that of Sāyana and is supported by the use of vikṣudrā iva hi palataḥ in Altareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 6, 5, some big. He recites them with the word om according to the metre and according to the manner of the occurrence.⁴ For the intestines are as it were according to the manner of their occurrence, some shorter, some longer. Next comes the sūdadōhas verse. Sūdadōhas is breath, and by breath he joins together all joints. Having recited this verse twelve times,⁵ he leaves off. Twelfefold are these breaths,⁶ seven in the head, two in the breast, three below. There are they contained, there are they perfected. Therefore there⁷ he leaves off. The hymn, 'O Indra and Agni, ye two' (RV., VIII, 40), forms the two thighs which belong to Indra and Agni,⁸ the two supports with broad bones. The where see Sāyaṇa's explanation. For the compar., see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 196 sq. The hṛdaya is sthūla according to Sāyaṇa. The metres of RV., VIII, 46, are very various in the eyes of the Anukramaṇī. For the form antastya, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1245 c. The twenty transverse processes (kuntāpa) in the abdominal portion of the spine (udara), Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 12; 14 (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIV, 164, n. 1; Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 8, 10) suggest a different rendering, but the tradition is quite plausible. The epithet used too does not suit bones. It is, however, to be noted that in Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 6, the anūka, which can mean the lumbar portion of the spine (RV., VI, 163, 2, cited by Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1906, p. 917) as well as the thoracic portion (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 14, cited ibid., 1907, p. 9), is said to have twenty-one parvāṇi, and certainly this is so strikingly parallel to the udara with its twenty kuntāpas (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XII, 2, 4, 12), since the twenty-first may be the anūka itself, that it is possible that this passage should be so interpreted. But to do so would only be justified by the belief that these early medical statements rest, as Hoernle (Osteology, pp. 101-109) holds, on acquaintance with current medical views, an opinion I do not share for reasons given in Z. D. M. G., LXII, 134 sq.

⁷ He does not use that verse in the 'thigh' verses.

verses have six feet⁸ for firmness. Man¹⁰ has a double support, cattle have four feet. So he places the sacrificer with his double support among the four-footed cattle. The second verse has seven feet,¹¹ and he makes it into a gāyatrī and an anuṣṭubh. Now the *gāyatrī*¹² is brahman, the anuṣṭubh is Vāc, and so he unites Vāc and brahman. He recites¹³ a triṣṭubh at the end. The triṣṭubh is strength and so with strength he surrounds animals. Therefore animals¹⁴ depend on strength for their rising and their going forth.

2. In the Niṣkevalya hymn addressed to Indra,¹ 'To thee, the mighty, the intoxicated one' (RV., X, 50), he inserts a nivid.² For clearly thus does he place strength in himself. They are triṣṭubhs and jagatis.³ They say, 'Why then does he insert a nivid among triṣṭubhs and jagatis?' 'One metre only in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, they are referred to the wings, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 111, 112. See also V, 3, 1, n. 1; above, p. 37.

¹⁰ Cf. I, 1, 2, n. 5.

¹¹ It consists of seven pādas of eight syllables, and can be made into an anuṣṭubh preceded by a gāyatrī. According to Sāyaṇa, following Āśvalāyana, in the latter case there is a pause after the second pāda, and om after the third. In the former the om follows the fourth, and there is a pause after the second pāda.

¹² Cf. I, 1, 1, n. 8.

¹³ Sāyaṇa holds this to refer to a special mode of recitation, by which after the first pāda there is a pause, and om follows the second, and so for the third and fourth, and which he calls triṣṭupṣamaya. This is from Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 15, 6; RV., VIII, 40, 12, is in triṣṭubh.

cannot support or fill the nivid of this day,' so he inserts the nivid among triṣṭubhs and jagatis. Let him know that this day has three nivids.⁵ The vāṣa hymn is a nivid, the Vālakhilyas are a nivid, and the nivid is a nivid. So let him know that there are three nivids in this day. Then come the hymns, 'Who in the forest as it were has been put down' (RV., X, 29), and 'Who first is born, the wise one' (RV., II, 12). In these is the verse, 'When the hopes of all are on food' (RV., X, 29, 4), and it serves to win proper food. Then comes an insertion. As many decades of verses⁶ in triṣṭubh and jagati addressed to Indra as they insert between these two hymns, after transforming them into brhatīs, so many years do they live beyond the normal life.⁷ By this insertion life is gained. Next he recites the *sajaniya*⁸ hymn that cattle may come to his offspring. Then he recites the Tārksya⁹ hymn. Tārksya is welfare, and the hymn leads to welfare. Thus he procures welfare. He recites

the *ekapādā*¹⁰ verse that he may at once be all and win all the metres.¹¹ In the hymn, 'All songs have caused Indra to grow' (RV., I, 11), there are additions¹² to the verses. Seven verses does he make additions to. For seven are the breaths¹³ in the head, and so does he place breaths in the head. He makes no addition to the eighth. The eighth is speech, and (he thinks), 'Let not speech be mingled with my breaths.' Therefore speech, though it has the same abode as the breaths, is not mingled with them. He recites the virāj verses.¹⁴ Virāj verses are food, and serve to win food. He ends with the hymn of Vasiṣṭha,¹⁵ that he may become Vasiṣṭha. (He should end) with the perfect verse,¹⁶ with the word 'great' in it, 'This praise to the great, the terrible, the bearer' (RV., VII, 24, 5). In the verse, 'Like a steed labouring at the yoke, he has taken his place' (RV., VII, 24, 5), the yoke is the end (of the car). This day is the end.¹⁷ Thus is (the verse) fit for the day. (He should end) with the perfect verse, with the word 'praise' in it, 'O Indra, this praise celebrates thee' (RV., VII, 24, 5^e). With regard to the verse, 'As heaven over

¹³ The openings are referred to above, I, 3, 7; 8; 4, 1; 5, 1. The eighth as Vāc refers no doubt to the tongue. The first reference to seven openings is not (as Deussen seems to hold) that in Atharvaveda X, 8, 9, which is there practically unintelligible, and which is given up by Whitney (Translation, p. 597), but which appears in a more plausible form in Brhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 2, 3, where the verse has as its last pāda: vāg aṣṭamī brahmaṇā sanvidānā, but that in AV., X, 2, 6, where the seven khāni are given as eyes, nostrils, ears and mouth (see Whitney, Translation, p. 568; Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 12). In ver. 7 the tongue is specially mentioned. The seven, however, seem already to have included Vāc, to judge from the explanation in that Upaniṣad, II, 2, 4, where, according to Deussen's translation, it is intended to stand for the tongue, as indeed seems clear from its being connected with Atri and attī, though Böhtlingk, in his translation, p. 26, takes it otherwise. Sāyaṇa here refers to the other prāṇas as jihvāvagādibhiḥ. Vāc apparently then is little more than a duplicate. Cf. I, 3, 7, n. 6. For the seven prāṇas, cf. also Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 5, 2, 8.

¹⁵ RV., VII, 24. For the word vīṣa in ver. 5, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 135.

¹⁷ The last day is the udayanīyātīrātra. For dhūḥ, cf. RV., II, 2, 1: dhūḥśadam 'charioteer'; Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XIII, 237 sq.

heaven,¹⁸ give us glory' (RV., VII, 24, 5^d), wherever the speech of the Brahmin¹⁹ is uttered, this is his glory, when he who knows ends with this verse. So let him who knows this end with this verse.

¹⁹ Sāyaṇa vaguely says vedasambandhi vākyaṃ. But I think there is a clear reference to the speech of the Brahmins. The opposition is probably as yet mainly to non-Aryan tongues, cf. Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, XVII, 1, 2, 9. Whatever be the history of Vedic and Sanskrit, it is difficult to believe at this date (800-700 B.C.) in very much development of Prākṛitic forms so as to render contrast with them natural, though no doubt such forms existed. (Cf. the discussions in J. R. A. S., 1903, pp. 435 sq.) See also I, 3, 1, n. 5; III, 2, 5; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, III, 2, 1, 23, with Eggeling's note on the Kāpva reading; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 20-24; Lanman's notes on Whitney, Atharvaveda, III, 12, 4; X, 9, 23; XII, 4, 4; XIX, 8, 4; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xviii. The Atharvan passages point to the possibility that some of the Prākṛitic forms are due to the later tradition and are no evidence for the time of the Atharva. Similar considerations are familiar in the Homeric question, see especially Monro, Odyssey, XIII-XXIV, Appendix, pp. 455-484. The early date of the Epic if adopted (cf. my notes, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 1 sq., 1907, pp. 681-683) would bear out the view that Prākṛit was not so early as has been claimed (cf. Franke, Pāli und Sanskrit (1902), pp. 49 sq.) the ruling speech of the people. No doubt the Mantra literature represents a poetic diction (cf. Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 38 sq.), but it has not yet been made even plausible that contemporaneous with it were really Prākṛitic dialects, though no doubt in certain cases the tendencies which produced Prākṛit were already in full force. The subsequent history is doubtless that of the more and more marked separation of the literary and the vulgar speech (cf. Delbrück's neat summary of the history, Altindisches Verbum, pp. 3 sq.), and the place of the Epic must (it seems to me) be found either before the decay of speech had rendered the Sanskrit unintelligible to the warrior classes of the populace—and the Epic appears in origin to have been precisely like the Homeric Epic (see Lang, Homer and His Age, 1906) poetry composed by poets at the courts of princes who sang to the retainers and friends of their patron—not of course an epic of the lower classes or the mere cultivator, though he would understand it in part—or after the general revival of Sanskrit in the second and third centuries A.D. The latter view seems to raise more serious difficulties in our conception of the history of language and literature than it can pretend to solve. I still think the earliest epic (as distinguished from mere ākhyānas or itihāsas) must date from the eighth to sixth centuries B.C. and be contemporaneous with the Brāhmaṇas and Āraṇyakas, though of course in the case of both Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa extensive additions have been made by priestly hands in the two or three centuries before the Christian era. Only thus can a real place be found for Pāṇini's dhātū, or for the custom of the Drama which must represent a real state of affairs when Sanskrit could be used by kings and nobles as intelligible to their inferiors. For what Kṣatriyas spoke in the eighth to sixth centuries B.C. we have no evidence save the Brāhmaṇas, where they speak Sanskrit, and the Epic, so far as we can regard it as contemporaneous. In view of the fact that Patañjali knew the Drama (Ind. Stud., XIII, 486 sq.), it seems only reasonable to assign to his period the separate use of Sanskrit and Prākṛit for the different characters, and either then or earlier the state of affairs must have been real. Nor is it possible to accept the theory of Lévi, Barth, and Grierson (Ind. Ant., XXIII, 110) that an originally Prākṛit drama was turned into Sanskrit. This theory leaves no plausible explanation open of the use of Prākṛit for some characters, since ex hypothesi both men and women equally used Prākṛit in conversation, and, while it is quite intelligible that after the drama was an

3. 'We choose that of Savitr' (RV., V, 82, 1-3) and 'O god, Savitr, this day' (RV., V, 82, 4-6), are the strophe and antistrophe (of the Vaiśvadeva hymn¹) and are perfect in form as belonging to the one day ceremonial.² Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden and (the Vaiśvadeva)³ is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and so at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (the Vaiśvadeva) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotṛ priest who knows this recites this Vaiśvadeva. Then comes the Savitr hymn, 'Of Savitr, the god, this great and desirable thing' (RV., IV, 53). Great⁴ is the end. This day is the end. So the verse fits this day. Then comes the Dyāvā-Pṛthivī hymn, 'Which is the elder, which the younger' (RV., I, 185), in which (the verses) end alike.⁵ This day is one on which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits the day. Then comes the Ṛbhu hymn, 'Born not for steeds nor reins, worthy of praise' (RV., IV, 36). With regard to the words, 'The chariot of three wheels,' the hymn is possessed of three (trivat), and what is possessed of three⁶ is the end. This day is the end. So the hymn fits the day. The hymn, 'Of this benignant, greyhaired, priest' (RV., I, 164), addressed to established fact it could remain popular long after it had ceased to be intelligible, the popularity of a literary form ex initio unread is very strange. People in England would not go to Italian opera (which by the by is certainly understood by fifty per cent. of the spectators), but for the fact that there was once and still is a popular drama in England.

Of course it cannot be contended—nor is it so claimed—that Sanskrit was ever the vernacular of the lower classes. What we have to conceive is rather a parallel series of languages diverging from vernaculars older than the Vedic of the earliest hymns, each current among certain portions of the people, but in their earlier stages intelligible to all. The Greek and English dialects give a fair parallel, in both cases ending in a common form of educated and literary speech. Cf. Jacobi, Z.D.M.G., XLVIII, 407 sq.

² The prākṛti is here the Viśvajit, and the mūlaprākṛti the Agniṣṭoma, as usual.

³ Cf. I, 2, 1. Sāyaṇa selects the two tristichs as the immediate point of reference.

⁴ Because greatness is the ne plus ultra of all things (Sāyaṇa).

the All-gods, is multiform.⁷ This day is multiform. So the hymn fits the day. (Of what he recites) the end⁸ is, 'Forming the waters, the buffalo hath lowed' (RV., I, 164, 41). The hymn, 'May powers auspicious come to us on every side' (RV., I, 89), addressed to the All-gods, is one containing an insertion, and is perfect in form as belonging to the one day ceremonial. Much indeed is done on this day that is forbidden and (the hymn with the insertion⁹) is the atonement. Now atonement is rest, and so at the end (of the sacrifice) the sacrificers rest on the atonement of the one day (insertion) as their rest. He rests who knows this, and they also rest for whom the Hotṛ priest who knows this recites the hymn with the insertion. The verses, 'To Vaiśvānara, who strengthens law, our praise' (RV., III, 2, 1 sq.), are the strophe of the Āgnimāruta Śāstra. Praise is the end. This day is the end. So the hymn fits the day. The hymn, 'The Maruts, rushing onward, with gleaming lances' (RV., V, 55), addressed to the Maruts, is one in which (the verses) end alike. This day is one in which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits this day. He recites, before the next hymn, the verse, 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' (RV., I, 99, 1), addressed to Jātavedas. The Jātavedas verse is welfare and wins welfare. So he makes this into welfare. The hymn, 'To Jātavedas, who deserves our praise' (RV., I, 94),¹⁰ addressed to Jātavedas, is one in which (the verses) end alike. This day is one in which (the sacrificers) end alike. So the hymn fits this day.¹¹

⁷ It is of multifarious content, as indeed is the case and is recognized in the Anukramanī. The day is multifarious because of its collection of Vedic mantras and popular elements like dancing.

⁸ That is, only forty-one verses are to be taken. Cf. V, 3, 2.

¹⁰ On RV., I, 94, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 108 sq.

In some MSS. (see Crit. Note) a summary of the chapters of each Āranyaka is given at the end. For similar summaries, cf. those of the Taittirīya Upaniṣad, Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xxviii, xxix; that in VIII, 3 of the Śākhāyana Āranyaka, and Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, IV, 2.

ARANYAKA II

ADHYĀYA 1.

THIS is the path; this¹ is the sacrifice; this is brahman; this is truth. Therefore let no man diverge² from it; let no man transgress it. For they did not transgress it; of old, those that did transgress it were overcome. A Rṣi³

² Sāyaṇa thus discriminates: the divergence is due to mere laziness, the transgression to interest in other matters, ploughing or industry, or such forms of devotion as relic worship, &c. For pra + √mad, cf. Taittiriya Upaniṣad, II, 5; I, 11, 2; Kāthaka Upaniṣad, II, 6, which support my emendation pramattam in Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, XII, 29.

says (RV., VIII, 101, 14), 'Three peoples transgressed. Others settled round the sun. The great one stands in the middle of the worlds. The blowing one enters the dawns.' In the verse, 'Three peoples transgressed,' the three peoples which transgressed are the Vayases,⁴ the Vāṅgavagadhas, and the Cerapādās. In the ⁴ Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha agree in taking this as referring to the fates which in another life befell the three peoples who transgressed. The peoples are Brāhmaṇas, Kṣatriyas, Vaiśyas, and Śūdras, and only one set was saved. The others suffer a naraka-janma (cf. for this idea Hopkins, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 581 sq.), as birds, &c. Only they differ as to the meaning of the words vayāṃsi vāṅgavagadhāḥ cerapādāḥ. Sāyaṇa renders them as birds, trees (vāṇagadhā vykṣāḥ), plants (avanti manuṣyādīn and grāhyante 'bhikāṅkṣyante), and snakes (urapādāḥ sarpāḥ). Ānandatīrtha prefers Piśācas, Rākṣases (vāṅga is from vaṇa jñānaṃ and gamayanti, and avagadhā from grāhu abhikāṅkṣyām), and Asuras. We are justified therefore in holding that there was no trustworthy tradition, and it is therefore possible to consider whether Max Müller's suggestion that the words are perhaps old ethnic names is correct. In its favour it may be noted that Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha compel us to assume that the Āranyaka accepts the fullest form of the doctrine of transmigration as a punishment (e.g. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, I), which is a comparatively late view, and which I do not think is found in this Upaniṣad. If they are ethnic names, then Vayāṃsi gives us a people like the Matsyas, Ajas, &c., in whose names we may, if we like, see totemism*. The Vāṅgavagadhāḥ are a composite tribe or group of tribes like the Kuru-Pāṇcālas, whose name reminds us of the later Vāṅga (known to Mahābhāṣya (Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 386) and to Mahābhārata, Dharmasūtras, &c. in conjunction with Aṅga), as part of what is now Bengal. The Cerapādāḥ are a third tribe, whose name points to the later Ceras of Southern India. It is of course possible (cf. Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 32) to argue that these verses show a later date and a wider geographical knowledge than is compatible with the early pre-Buddhistic date here attributed to the Āranyaka. But in this respect it may be observed that Rhys Davids (cf. Bühler, S. B. E., II, xxxv sq.; Ind. Ant., XXIII, 246-248; Weber, ibid., XXX, 273; Z. D. M. G., XLIX, 479) presses unduly the argument from the Buddhist texts. There is in addition to the grave doubts as to the age of the Buddhist texts the possibility that these texts show only the regions where Buddhism had penetrated and that there were Brahminical countries beyond these limits (cf. Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 245 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 254 sq.; Mantrapāṭha, I, p. xv). It may be questioned whether Buddhism early gained a direct hold on much of Southern India; at least there is no evidence that it ever did. Besides the question arises whether the Cerapādās must have been settled in the South at this date. It should be noted that the text says they were destroyed, and this may refer to a disaster to the old tribe, a remnant of which wandered south and later appear as the Ceras, who are known in the south to Aśoka and to Kātyāyana, Weber, l. c., p. 371; Bhandarkar, History of Deccan, p. 143.

The version of Sāyaṇa takes cerapādāḥ as ca irapādāḥ. This seems very unlikely, because a single ca with the second of three connected words is not elsewhere found in this Āranyaka, and is nowhere common. (For examples, cf. RV., I, 77, 2 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 101) and Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 475.) It is, I think, much more likely that three names of defeated tribes should not appear in the precise forms here found elsewhere than that names of plants and beasts should so disappear. At any rate they must all three be plants and verse, 'Others settled round the sun,'⁵ these people are settled round Agni here, as the sun. In the verse, 'The great one stands in the middle of the worlds,' that great one in the middle of the worlds means this sun. In the verse, 'The blowing one enters the dawns,' the meaning is the purifying air enters the quarters.⁶

* Mere animal names prove little as to totemism, which is not demonstrated for any Aryan stock, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, IV, 116, 256; Macdonell, Ved. Myth., p. 153; Hopkins, P. A. O. S., 1894, p. cliv; Keith, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 929 sq.; Bühler, Ind. Stud., III, 48.

2. People¹ say, 'Hymn, hymn.'² The hymn is indeed the earth.¹ For from it all that exists springs. It praises Agni. Food are its eighty verses,³ for by food one obtains all. The hymn is the sky. For (birds) fly along the sky, and along the sky men drive. It praises Vāyu. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The hymn is also yonder heaven. For by animals or names of tribes. Monier-Williams' Dict. takes vaṅga as plants, avagadha and cerapāda as names of peoples, which is quite impossible. Dr. Schefstelowitz in his forthcoming Zur Stammbildung in den indogermanischen Sprachen (which he has been so good as to show me in MS.) considers that vaṅga is formed from van by the suffix ga (when g = gñ). He compares madgu (not for mang*, but from $\sqrt{\text{mad}} + \text{gu}$), khadga, phalgū, svargd, vargu, phaligd, tuhga, śṛṅga, ārōhga, ulig, vanig, sphigī, dāga (not = I.G. oṅgū), &c. But even if this is the case the origin of the word throws no light on its being used as a tribal name, nor do I feel sure of the equation vaṅga = tree. Possibly Vaṅgā-Magadhāḥ may be read, cf. my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 46, n. 4; Baudhāyana Dharma Sūtra, I, 2, 13 and 14.

The citation of the Rgvedic verse in full is of course natural when an explanation is being given. So verses are cited and explained in full at II, 1, 6 (RV., I, 164, 31); II, 1, 8 (RV., I, 164, 38); II, 5, 1 (RV., IV, 27, 1); III, 1, 6 (RV., X, 114, 4); III, 2, 3 (RV., I, 115, 1). In the last case the verse is cited entire to indicate the sense desired to be understood. So also verses are cited in full in the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 15, 18, 20; VIII, 4, 6; IX, 1; XII, 8, 35.

² Sāyaṇa justifies this by prācyādīdīlāḥ tattatkarmasu vīhītāḥ satyo 'nuṣṭhānavaikalyam haranti.

The last rule shows the manner in which the Brahmins avoided the open rejection of sacrifice and yet justified their own speculations as a practical substitute for sacrifice.

⁵ The three sets of eighty tristichs, in gōyatrī, brhatī, and uṣṇīh, V, 2, 3; 4; 5.

its gift all that exists springs. It praises the sun. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. So much as regards the gods. Now as regards the self. The hymn is man. He is great and is Prajāpati. Let him know that he is the hymn.⁴ The hymn is his mouth, as in the case of the earth. It praises speech. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The hymn is the nostrils, as in the case of the sky. It praises breath. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The bend of the nose⁵ as it were is the place of the brilliant one. The hymn is the forehead,⁶ as in the case of the heaven. It praises the eye. Food are its eighty verses, for by food one obtains all. The eighty verses are food both with reference to the gods and with reference to the self, for by food all these beings breathe⁷; by food⁸ he conquers this world and by food that world. Therefore the eighty verses are food both with reference to the gods and to the self. The food and the feeder are the earth, for all that exists springs from it. Whatever goes forth, (heaven) consumes it all.⁹ Whatever goes thence, the (earth) consumes it all. So earth is both food and feeder. He¹⁰ becomes feeder and food. He is lord of nothing that he eats not, or that eats him not.

⁸ By giving food to retainers and by sacrifice respectively.

⁹ Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha take this as referring to the doctrine of transmigration. But this is hardly necessary. The earth consumes what the heaven sends, e.g. rain, not persons who are born again, or as Sāyaṇa says, sacrificers who having enjoyed heaven after death return again to earth. It is not proved that such an idea is known to this Āranyaka. Cf. II, 1, 1, n. 4; 3, n. 5; 3, 2, n. 3; 7, n. 5; 8, n. 15; 4, 1, n. 1; 5, nn. 6, 7, 9. For the use of prerite (for the form, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 2; Bartholomae, Iran. Grundr., I, 54, 70) as prāṇī Sāyaṇa has reference to the analogy of pra + √i. The form of the pluti is that laid down in Pāṇini, VIII, 2, 107; cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 298 sq.

¹⁰ This is very obscure. There seems little doubt, however, that it is intended as the expression of a vague pantheism. Cf. Emerson's 'I am the doubter and the doubt, And I the hymn the Brahmin sings.' The priest identifies himself with the hymn and also with Prajāpati (see above), and so becomes, as Max Müller says, subject and object in one.

3. Then comes¹ the origin of seed. The seed of Prajāpati are the gods.² The seed of the gods is rain. The seed of rain is herbs. The seed of herbs is food. The seed of food is seed. The seed of seed is creatures. The seed of creatures is the heart.³ The seed of the heart is the mind.⁴ The seed of the mind is speech. The seed of speech is action.⁵ The act done is this Ānandatīrtha interprets it that Viṣṇu consumes all worlds, and all beings enjoy him, which is the same idea attached to the name of Viṣṇu. Sāyaṇa contrasts the upāsaka and the anupāsaka and explains the matter slightly differently in the last sentence as meaning that other men do not enjoy him (yad vā = yasmāc ca kāraṇāt). He reconciles this with the fact that he is ādyaś because that refers to rodmabhūtasarvabhogyajātārūpatvam. This explanation is not probable, but undoubtedly the construction of the last words contains a serious difficulty as yad cannot correspond to ādyaś. The fact perhaps is that yad is used for formal correspondence with the previous yad though it is not quite parallel in construction. It must be taken literally as an accusative of point in which—or in so much as they do not consume him.⁶ For the metaphor cf. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, III, 2: anādyamāno yad udantam atī; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, II, 2: adyate 'tī ca bhūtāni; III, 7, 9, &c.; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 6, 2; XII, 9, 1; Maitrāyaṇī Saṁhitā, I, 10, 13; Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XI, 3; A. J. P., XX, 446, and the Pūrṇa Sūkta. Another possible explanation, however, is suggested by Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 5, 3: sā (satyam as devatā) ha tasya nele yad enam apasakhet, 'She is not able to drive him away,' where yad is a conjunction. So here the exact sense may be, 'He cannot help eating them and their eating him;' tasya being used to introduce the dependent clause. Cf. II, 1, 5, n. 5. No doubt originally yad was a relative, but the pronominal quality is clearly minimal in such cases. The opt. in such a case is one of consequence or characteristic, cf. brahmūṇaṁ kuruṣvā yo pāyēt, III, 2, 3, n. 3. So I would explain Rāmāyaṇa, III, 19, 7: na hi pāyāmy ahaṁ loka yaś kuryān mama vipriyam, which Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 271) explains (see § 191, 4) as merely indefinite. But the sense is slightly different from a mere indefinite. So Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 3, 23: nā tū tād dvitīyam asti tdo 'nyād vibhaktam yd pāyēt; ibid., 24-30, &c.

man, the abode of brahman. He consists of food,⁶ and because he consists of food, he consists of gold. He becomes golden⁷ in yonder world, he is seen as golden for all mortals, who knows this.

4. *Brahman*¹ entered into that man by the tips of his feet. Because brahman entered that man by the tips of his feet, so men call them the tips of the feet (prāpadyata-prapade), but in the case of other animals hoofs and claws. Then he crept higher up, and they became the thighs. Then he said, 'Swallow² widely,' and that became the stomach. Then he said, 'Make it wide for me,' and that became the chest. The Śārkarākṣyas³ meditate on the stomach as brahman, the Āruṇis on the heart. These two are indeed brahman. But he crept upwards still, and arrived at the head. Because he arrived at the head (aśrayata) then it became the head (śiras). So the head is the head. These delights settled in the head, sight, hearing, mind, speech, breath. Delights settle on him who duction of the transmigration theory, see II, 1, 1, n. 4; 2, n. 9, and Ānandatīrtha does not accept it. The passage only means that action is the man; the man is what he does; a perfectly plausible view. For the relation of speech and action see Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 33, 4; II, 2, 8; III, 32, 9; Mahānārāyaṇa Upaniṣad, IV, 7; Oertel, J. A. O. S., XVI, 231.

² Make a large hole, says Sāyaṇa. Max Müller's 'grasp' is a slip. The form is overlooked in the Dict. and in Whitney's Roots, &c.

knows thus why the head is the head. They strove together,⁴ saying, 'I am the hymn, I am the hymn.' They said, 'Come, let us leave this body, then that one of us at whose departure the body falls, will be the hymn.' Speech went forth, yet (the body) remained, speechless, eating and drinking. Sight went forth, yet (the body) remained, sightless, eating and drinking. Hearing went forth, yet (the body) remained, without hearing, eating and drinking. Mind went forth, yet (the body) remained, blinking as it were,⁵ eating and drinking. Breath went forth, when breath went out, (the body) fell. It was decayed. (Because men) said it had decayed, it became the body. Therefore is the body the body. Who knows this, his enemy, the evil one, who hates him decays, the enemy, the evil one, who hates him is defeated. They strove together, saying, 'I am the hymn, I am the hymn.' They said, 'Come, let us again enter this body; then that one of us, on whose entrance the body rises, will be the hymn.' Speech entered, (the body) lay still. Sight entered, (the body) lay still. Hearing entered, (the body) lay still. Mind entered, (the body) lay still. Breath entered, (the body) arose, and (breath) became the hymn. Therefore breath only is the hymn. Let men know that breath is the hymn. The gods⁶ said to breath, 'Thou art the hymn, thou art all this, we are thine, thou art ours.' A R̥ṣi says (RV., VIII, 92, 32), 'Thou art ours, we are thine.'

⁴ There are similar passages in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, VI, 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 1; Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 12-14; III, 2; Praśna Upaniṣad, II, 1. The comparative antiquity of the versions must be open to doubt. But this version certainly seems simpler and more original than those of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka, Chāndogya, or Kauṣītaki Upaniṣads, which seem to embellish the theme with further details. The account in the Praśna Upaniṣad is simple, but as that Upaniṣad is on other grounds late, that may be explained as merely a reference to a well-known theme, and indicates the danger of arguments from comparative simplicity. For hanta with subj., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 23, 43; Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 430.

⁵ The masculine, milita, is explained by Sāyaṇa as referring to dehaś understood. It is probable that the idea in the mind of the writer throughout was puruṣa as the subject; hence the masculines as long as prāṇa remains in the śarīra. mil is Brāhmaṇa style first. Cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 11 and 12 (2, 22 and 3 in the Mādhyandina text) where brahma is followed by sa. On the other hand in Bṛhadāraṇyaka, IV, 3, 22, the Kāṇva text, after a series of masculines, produces ananvāgatam puṇyena, and Śaṅkara explains; rūpaparatevā napuṃsakalingam. The Mādhyandina version (as in Weber and Böhtlingk) has the masc., but as Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 169) points out, Drivedagaṅga had ananvāgatam, as he says: ananvāgatam iti rūpaviṣayo napuṃsakanirdēśaḥ. There are also difficulties in the genders in Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, III, 7, see Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 245, n. 4. In Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 22, kāmarūpī and kāmacārī, according to one MS., agree with brahma. Such uses are not rare in Latin and Greek, e.g. φύλε νέστωρ; Vergl. Syntax, III, 244. For iti 3 ṣ, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 22, 2, against Böhtlingk, Sachs. Ber., 1890, p. 170.

⁶ The gods are those presiding over the parts of the body, see II, 1, 5, n. 3. For Prāṇa as brahma, cf. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 1; 2; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, IV, 10, 5; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, III, 3, 1; Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 33, 2. It was held by Udaṅka Śaṅkhāyana (Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 1, 2) and is refuted, ibid., V, 13, 1; Oertel, J. A. O. S., XVI, 230.

5. The gods carried him forward.¹ Being carried forward he was stretched out. (Because men say) he has been carried forward, the morning came into being. (Because men say) he has gone to rest, the evening came into being. Day is breathing forth,² night is breathing down. Speech is fire,³ sight yonder sun, mind the moon, hearing the quarters, this is the union⁴ of those sent forth. These deities are such in the body, but they openly appear among the deities; this is the meaning. This indeed said Hiranyadant Vaidā who knew this; 'Whatever they give me not,⁵ I own not myself. I know the union of those sent forth in the body which they enter. This it is.' To him who

² For the meanings of prāṇa and apāna see Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 249-251; E. T., pp. 276-279. The oldest view is that they mean expiration and inspiration respectively, whence apāna comes to refer to the wind of digestion. Cf. I, 3, 7; 4, 1; II, 3, 3.

⁴ The idea seems clearly to be that these four are gathered together in the body, and exist openly as deities, as Sāyana says. But prahitām is very difficult, and the whole seems an explanation of what was even then obscure. Cf. the varying versions of pūrṇam apravartī, amṛtam satyena channam, &c., cited in Deussen, op. cit., p. 20; E. T., p. 20, n. 3.

⁵ This authority occurs also in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 6. Is his name a reference to gold stoppings in his teeth? They were known to the XII Tables (n. c. 450?) and to very early Egypt. Yam is read by Rājendralāla and in the Ānandāśrama edition and also by Sāyana. But it seems obvious that it stands for yan written before m carelessly as anuvāra, cf. Max Müller, Marut Hymns, p. lx; II, 3, 3, n. 2; III, 1, 4, n. 3; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 62; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 333. To Sāyana yan presents no difficulty as he merely supplies padārtham abhiṣṭam. The word daiyuh is difficult, because the plural is unexpected after īte if that is a third person, when the sense would be 'nobody owns what the deities give not to me'. This is rather awkward but not impossible. The rendering of II, 1, 2 suggested in n. 10 there would give in this passage (though yan would still remain properly a pronoun), 'He owns nothing that they will not give me also,' which by an easy process of development would slide over into the sense, 'He cannot help them giving me (it),' showing the origin of such a developed construction as that in II, 1, 2. This comes to an assertion of the fact that all that the cosmic puruṣa has (he must be the subject of īte), that has man. It is simpler to neglect the commentators and take īte as first person, thus asserting the intimate union of man and the deities. In this use yad is used with consecutive force; cf. the Mantra use of yad as final with subj. or opt. (Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 321, 341), and the classical use (Speijer, Sanskrit Syntax, § 466). The absence of such a use in the Brāhmaṇas (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 279 e) is improbable. īte as a third person belongs to a type which occurs in all Brāhmaṇas, and is not a mere imitation of Mantra forms (as held by Aufrecht, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 429, where see other examples), see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 613. The form prahitām presents great knows this all creatures unconstrained pay homage. That is satya (truth). For sat is breath, *ti*⁶ is food, yam is yonder sun. That is threefold. Threefold as it were is the eye, white, dark, and the pupil.⁷ Even though he speaks falsely,⁸ yet speaks he truth who thus knows why truth is satya.

6. Speech is his rope, names the knots.¹ So by his speech as rope, and by names as knots, all this is bound. For all this is names, and by his speech he names everything. Men² bound with ropes carry him who knows this. His hairs are the uṣṇih, his skin the gāyatrī, his flesh the triṣṭubh, his sinews the anuṣṭubh, his bones the jagati, his marrow the pañkti, his breath³ the br̥hātī. He is covered with the metres. Since he is covered with the metres, therefore they call them metres (coverings). Thus the metres cover him from illhap⁴ in difficulty. To take it as Vedic for prahitānām, as Sāyaṇa does, is to introduce a very rare⁵ form (cf. Whitney, L.C., p. 114) into the text: on the other hand the word prahit has no parallel (save conceivably in form (Ind. Stud., III, 225) in prahitoḥ saṃyojane in the Ārṣeya Brāhmaṇa, if we may take that as dual form gen. and not as in Monier-Williams' Dict. as a gen. of prahitu) at any rate in sense. Whitney (Roots, L.C., p. 205) gives -hit as a form from √hi. I think that prahit should probably be taken as the 'impeller', i.e. the deities cause the organs to work, cf. II, 4, 1, and 2.

⁸ This doctrine undoubtedly shows the moral disadvantages of the doctrine of salvation by knowledge, and it is the precursor of the later immunity from moral censure of the jīvanmukta. Cf. Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, III, 1; Sadānanda, Vedāntasāra, 235: śubhāśubhayor audāśīnyam, and Jacob's note in his Translation; Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 164-167. In aiya the genitive is presumably possessive, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 153; Franke, Beiz. Beitr., XVI, 112; Speljer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 69, 92, n.; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 296 b. Compare evaṃ me sutaṃ with itī naḥ śrutiḥ (Introd., p. 57); J. A. O. S., XXV, 116, 117. For the position, cf. Z. D. M. G., LXII, 129.

² Like oxen who carry men.

whatever quarter he desires who knows thus why metres are called metres. A Ṛṣi says (RV., I, 164, 13), 'I saw the guardian,' for he is a guardian, for he guards all this. 'Never tiring,' for he never rests. 'Coming and going on his ways,'⁵ for he comes and goes on his ways. 'Illuminating' the principal and intermediate,' for he illuminates these quarters only, the principal and intermediate. 'He moves up and down in the worlds,' for he moves up and down in the worlds. Then there is the verse⁷ (RV., I, 55, 8), 'Covered' like caves by the makers.' For all this is covered by breath. This ether is supported by breath as brhasti, and one should know that, even as this ether is covered by breath as brhasti, so all things including ants⁹ are covered by breath as brhasti.

7. Now come the powers of this person. By his speech are created earth and fire. On the earth plants grow; fire ripens them. 'Take this, take this,' thus saying do these two, earth and fire, serve their parent, speech. As far as the earth extends, as far as fire extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of earth and fire decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of speech. By breath¹ the sky and the air are created. People follow the sky, and hear along the sky, and the air bears

⁷ Not RV., I, 55, 81 (Max Müller following Rājendralāla), nor I, 56, 8 (Ānandāśrama series).

⁹ Ānandatīrtha renders, 'beginning with ants.'

¹ In the nose, i. e. the power of smell (Śāyana). The use of the masc. ṛṣtau with a masc. and a neut. and of ṛṣtāḥ below do not entirely agree with the rules of concord later accepted. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 88) gives only one doubtful example (RV., I, 8, 10) and Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 101) thinks that in classical Sanskrit with names of things the neuter is a more common predicate if the genders differ and one is neuter. This is laid down in a Vārttika (not in the Kāśikā Vṛtti, it appears) on Pāṇini, I, 2, 72, which runs: tyadādītaḥ leze puṃnapuṃsakato liṅgavacanīni | sā ca Devadattāḥ ca ten | tac ca Devadattāḥ ca Yajñadattā ca tāni | tac ca Devadattāḥ ca te | So the neuter appears in Mahābhārata, III, 58, 10; VI, 6, 26; Rāmāyaṇa, VI, 62, 37. If only persons are concerned the masc. is regular, e. g. Mahābhārata, XVII, 1, 29: Ponḍavāḥ ca mahātmanō Draupadī ca yalarvinī | kṛtopavāsāḥ Kauravya prayayuh prāṇmukhās tataḥ || Raghuvamśa, III, 23: tathā nṛpaḥ sā ca sūtena Māgadhi nanandatus tadsadyena tattaman, &c. That this is old is indicated by the rule in Homeric Greek, thus formulated by Monto (*Homeric Grammar*², p. 157), 'Where an adjective pure scent.² Thus do sky and air serve their parent, breath. As far as the sky extends, as far as air extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of sky and air decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of breath. By his eye are created the heaven and the sun. Heaven gives him rain and proper food, the sun causes his light to shine. Thus do heaven and sun serve their parent, the eye. As far as the heaven extends, as far as the sun extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of heaven and sun decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of the eye. By his ear were created the quarters and the moon. From the quarters they come unto him, from the quarters he hears, the moon produces for him the bright and the dark halves for good deeds.³ Thus the quarters and the moon⁴ serve their parent, the ear. As refers to more than one noun, it follows the most prominent: or (if this is at all doubtful) the masc. is used of persons, the neut. of things: e. g., II. ii, 136:—

αἱ δὲ πον ἡμέτεραί τ' ἄλοχοι καὶ νῆπια τέκνα ἦσαν ἐνὶ μεγάροις ποτιδόμεναι, because the wives are chiefly thought of, but Od. xiii, 434:—

ἀμφὶ δὲ μιν βάκος ἄλλο κακὸν βάλεν ἥδ' ἑ χιτῶνα, βαργαλέα ρυτίωντα.

The neut. plur. is especially used of sheep and cattle. II. xi, 244:—

πρῶθ' ἑκατὸν βοῦν δῶκεν, ἔπειτα δὲ χίλι' ὑπίστην, αἴγας ὁμοῦ καὶ ὄνι.

The first example shows that a fem. can prevail over a neut. in the case of persons, the second that in regard to things the neut. prevails over the masc., the third that in regard to things the neut. may be used of masc. and fem. animals. Here antarikṣam is a deity and so naturally the masc. prevails, cf. Manu, VIII, 86, where hrdayam is personified. In Latin the rule is (Allen and Greenough, Latin Grammar, p. 173), 'generally, a predicative adjective will be masculine, if nouns of different genders mean living beings; neuter, if things without life:' as Livy ii, 40 uxor deinde ac liberi amplexi, but Livy v, 4 labor voluptasque societate quadam inter se naturali sunt iuncta. Even if masc. nouns and fem. occur, the neut. can be used if one of the subjects is a thing, e. g., Livy xlv, 24 natura inimica sunt libera civitas et rex, or even if two fem. nouns represent things, e. g. Cicero, de Fin. iii, 11 stultitia et temeritas et iniustitia sunt fugienda. The basis of discrimination, therefore, is rather between living creatures, especially persons, and things (which include sometimes the animals).

The use of the dual and plural of the verb is regular, cf. Delbrück, pp. 83 sq.; Speijer, l. c., though as in Greek and Latin and Anglo-Saxon the nearest subject may determine the verb, as is usual in the Bṛhaddevatā. Cf. ibid., VII, 74, for a set of mixed genders with a neut. plur.; VIII, 47, for a masc. plur. with a masc. sing., a fem. sing., and a masc. dual, which follow. Cf. Delbrück, Vergl. Syntax, III, 244-247, which this supplements.

³ Probably it refers to sacrificial acts.

far as the quarters extend, as far as the moon extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of the quarters and the moon decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of the ear. By his mind were created the waters and Varuṇa. The waters yield to him faith for good deeds and Varuṇa preserves his offspring by his law. Thus the waters and Varuṇa serve their parent, mind. As far as the waters extend, as far as Varuṇa extends, so far extends his world, and as long as the world of the waters and Varuṇa decays not, so long does his world decay not who knows thus the power of mind.

8. Was it water¹? Was it water? This world was water. This was the root, that the shoot. This the father, those the sons. Whatever there is of the son's, that is the father's; whatever of the father's, that is the son's. So it is said. Mahidāsa Aitareya² who knew this said, 'I know myself as reaching to the gods, and the gods as reaching to me.'³ For hence are they gifted, hence are they supported. This is the hiding-place,⁴ eye, ear, mind, speech, and breath. They call it the hiding-place of brahman. He who knows this throws down the enemy, the evil one, who hates him. The enemy, the evil one, who hates him is defeated. He is the life, the breath, being,⁵ and not-being. The gods adored him as being, and so became great. So in sleep a man breathes bhūr bhūh. The demons adored him as not-being, and so were overthrown.⁶ He becomes great by himself who knows this. The enemy, the evil one, who purposes of worship, a yathāvacanaṃ as opposed to a yathāvastu creation. Such inconsistencies are not very important, but this small point adds to the evidence against II, 1-3, and II, 4-6, being by one hand. For Varuṇa, cf. Lévi, La Doctrine du Sacrifice, pp. 152 sq.

² This mention is enough to prove that Mahidāsa did not write the Āranyaka. But it is quite probable that he was the redactor of the Brāhmaṇa, in its form of forty chapters. The saying here may no doubt be regarded as one of his Upaniṣads in the sense of secret teachings. Cf. Introd., p. 16. For the form, cf. Leumann, Gurupūjākaumudī, p. 42.

³ Rājendralāla's commentary is wrongly printed. Vedā is an error for veda, and omad is resolved wrongly. The end of the sentence explains the dependence of deities on men for devotion.

hates him, is overcome. He is death and immortality. A Ṛṣi says (RV., I, 164, 38), 'Down and up he goes, grasped' by food,' for this up-breathing restrained by down-breathing does not go forth. 'The immortal dwells with the mortal,' for through him all this dwells together. For these bodies are mortal, the deity immortal. 'These two even go in different directions, they increase the one, but not the other,' for they increase the bodies, but the deity is immortal. He who knows this becomes immortal in yonder world and is seen as immortal by all beings.⁸

ADHYĀYA 2.

He who shines approached this world¹ in the shape of man. For he is the breath. So he approached it. For he who shines is the breath. For a hundred years he approached it. Therefore a hundred are the years of the life of man.

¹ Ānandatīrtha renders svadhayā by Viṣṇu. Sāyaṇa takes it more properly as referring to digestion. The end of the verse means, according to Sāyaṇa, that men nourish the body by food and drink, but not the prāṇa. Ānandatīrtha renders, 'at death they see the bodies deserted by Vāyu.' The epithet śaśvanta can only be justified by the fact that one of the two is immortal, and on the principle chatrinō gachanti. For more or less analogous cases, cf. uśāsā, āhant (Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 102), and kṣapāh, RV., I, 70, 7, as interpreted by Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 70. On the same chatrinnyāya Govinda on Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 8, 10, explains why the Praūga Śāstra in the Mahāvratā according to that school is called Vāmadeva's though less than a half of it is by him (Friedländer, p. 33, n. 1); Weber (Ind. Stud., XIII, 113) quotes dvādaśau māsaṃ from Taittirīya Saṃhitā, VII, 5, 2, 1; Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, XXXIII, 1; Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa, IV, 1, 2; śtōman dvādaśau, Kāṭhaka, XXXIII, 3, and similar cases from Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IV, 5, 7, 2; XI, 6, 3, 5; XIV, 6, 9, 3; XII, 3, 2, 2; Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa, VI, 2, 5 (cf. Ind. Stud., IX, 18). Viśvācinā is explained as having diverse functions, the breath moving the bodily senses, the body supporting the prāṇendriyas. Viyaṇtā is referred to the fact that on death the body remains on the ground, while prāṇa seeks another world. Cf. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 374 sq.; Pischel, Vedische Studien, II, 221; Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1893, p. 92; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 336, n. 1; II, 8.

² Sāyaṇa explains 'immortal' as united with Hiraṇyagarbha; Ānandatīrtha says 'emancipated'. But that this Āraṇyaka knows emancipation, instead of immortality, as the highest end is not even probable. Dadyā (II, 1, 5) and menē (III, 1, 1) are both clearly present passives in sense. The original sense of the perfect was not distinguished from the present in point of time but denotes a state, cf. Giles, Comp. Phil., § 549; Monro, *Homeric Grammar*², pp. 31, 32; Delbrück, Synt. Forsch., II, 192 sq.; Vergl. Syntax, II, 211 sq.; Altindische Syntax, p. 297; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 823. The oldest sense is quite frequent in the R̥gveda. In cases like bībhāya (I, 3, 4) and dādāhāra (I, 5, 2) the naturally intensive form of the perfect is further strengthened.

The sun and prāṇa are as usual identified, the one being the adhivāsita, the other the adhyātman representation. The former attracts the vision, the latter impels the body.

Because he approached him for one hundred years, therefore they are the Śatarcins.² Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Śatarcins. He placed himself in the middle of all that is. Because he placed himself in the middle of all that is, therefore they are the Mādhyamas. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Mādhyamas. As up-breathing he is the swallower, as down-breathing delight. Because as up-breathing he is the swallower, as down-breathing delight, therefore he is Gṛtsamada. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Gṛtsamada. All whatsoever was his friend. Because all whatsoever was his friend, therefore he is Viśvāmitra. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Viśvāmitra. The gods spake to him, 'Let him be dear to all of us.' Because the gods spake to him, 'Let him be dear to all of us,' therefore he is Vāmadeva. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Vāmadeva. He protected all this from evil. Because he protected all this from evil, therefore they are the Atris. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Atris.

2. He also is a bearer of offspring. Offspring is vāja,¹ and he supports offspring. Because he supports offspring, therefore he is Bharadvāja. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Bharadvāja. The gods spake to him, 'Let him be the richest² of us all.' Because the gods spake to him, 'Let him be the richest of us all,' therefore he is Vasiṣṭha. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) Vasiṣṭha. He went forth³ to all this whatsoever. Because he went forth to all this whatsoever, therefore they are the Pragāthas. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Pragāthas. He purified all this whatsoever. Because he purified all this whatsoever, then they are the Pāvamānis.⁴ Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Pāvamānis. He said, 'Let me be everything, small and great.' They became the Kṣudrasūktas and Mahāsūktas.⁵ Therefore

² Vājāḥ is taken as either the body from the √vaj in the sense of going, or as food by Sāyaṇa.

⁴ This seems to be the sense, and it is so taken by Sāyaṇa. Ānandatīrtha takes it either as 'he obtained' or 'he sang'. Sāyaṇa says the verses are called Pragāthas and also the poets. Probably the poets, of Book VIII, are meant. Bharadvāja and Vasiṣṭha correspond to Books VI and VII respectively. The same lists appear in Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 4, 2, and Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 10, 3.

⁵ Presumably the poets of Book IX are so described. Cf. Ārṣeya Brāhmaṇa (ed. Burnell), p. 42; Vedische Studien, III, 99. In Āśvalāyana pāvamānās and in Śāṅkhāyana pāvamānās occur.

they are the Kṣudrasūktas. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) the Kṣudrasūktas. (He said), 'Ye have said what is well said.' These became a hymn.⁶ Therefore there is a hymn. Therefore men call him who is (prāṇa) hymn. He is a verse, for he went to⁷ all beings. Because he went to all these beings, therefore he is a verse. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a verse. He is also a half-verse, for he went to all these places.⁸ Because he went to all these places, therefore he is a half-verse. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a half-verse. He is a quarter-verse,⁹ for he has entered all these beings. Because he has entered all these beings, he is a quarter-verse. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a quarter-verse. He is a syllable, for he pours forth gifts to all these beings and because none can pour forth¹⁰ gifts beyond him. Because he pours forth gifts for all these beings, and because none can pour forth gifts beyond him, therefore he is a syllable. Therefore they call him who is (prāṇa) a syllable. Therefore one should know that all these verses, all these Vedas, all sounds¹¹ are one word, prāṇa, and that prāṇa is all the verses.¹² mahāsūktāḥ. See besides Āśvalāyana and Śāṅkhāyana, Bṛhaddevatā, III, 116; Sarvānukramaṇī, Introd., II, 10, with Macdonell's note.

¹⁰ 'Without him' is Max Müller's rendering. That of the text is supported by Ānandatīrtha, the other version by Sāyaṇa. Cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 441.

¹² Oldenberg (Z. D. M. G., XLII, 199-247) has shown conclusively that few if any of the

3. Indra¹ sat down beside Viśvāmitra who was about to recite the hymns of this day. He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand brhatis. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. Do thou, seer, repeat a second² hymn.' He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand brhatis verses. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. Do thou, seer, repeat a third hymn.' He saying, 'This is food,' recited the thousand brhatis verses. Thus he went to Indra's dear home. Indra said to him, 'Seer, thou hast come to my dear home. I give thee a boon.' He said, 'Let me know thee.' Indra said, 'I am breath, thou, seer, art breath, all creatures are breath, he that shines is breath. In this form I pervade all the quarters. This my food is my friend, my support.³ This is the food of Viśvāmitra.⁴ I am he that shines.' Thus said he.⁵

4. This is produced as a thousand brhatis.¹ The consonants² are the body, hymns of the R̥gveda go back to their nominal composers when these composers are the heads of the great families, but that they were written by members of the family. The only possible exceptions are Vasiṣṭha and Viśvāmitra under Sudās (p. 236). It is possible that here (p. 226, n. 1) a recollection of the facts is seen in that book V is ascribed to the Atris, while the others to individuals, Gṛtsamada, Viśvāmitra, &c., but more probably the plural is used because it gives the proper play of words with atrayata. This is not, however, a sign of late date, for it seems likely that in RV., X, 181, the author held the same view as he attributes to Vasiṣṭha the rāthanāra (VII, 32, 22; 23) and to Bharadvāja the brhat (VI, 46, 1; 2), later attributed to Śamyu Bārhaspatya (Oldenberg, pp. 225, 227, n. 1).

² The collection of verses is regarded as three asītis of tristichs, in gāyatrī, brhatī, and uṣṇīh respectively. For them, see V, 2, 3-5 and notes.

² What are called by Pāṇini kal (Sāyaṇa). The Kaumāra school adopt the term vyahjana the vowels⁵ the soul, the sibilants⁴ the breath. Knowing this he became Vasiṣṭha.⁶ Thence took he the name. Indra proclaimed this to Viśvāmītra, Indra proclaimed this to Bharadvāja, so Indra is in sacrifices invoked by him as a friend.⁶ This is produced as a thousand br̥hatis. Of this produced as a thousand br̥hatis there are thirty-six thousand syllables. So many thousands are the days of a hundred years. They make up the nights by the consonants, the days by the vowels.⁷ This is produced as a thousand br̥hatis. After this being produced as a thousand br̥hatis he who knows this becomes full of knowledge,⁸ of the gods, of brahman, of the immortal, and goes to the gods. What I am,⁹ he is; what he is, I am. A Ṛṣi says (RV., I, 115, 1), 'The sun is the self of all that goes or stands.' Let one consider this.

ADHYĀYA 3.

He who knows himself as the fivefold hymn¹ from whence all this springs, he is wise. Earth, air, ether, water, light, these form the self, the fivefold hymn. From him all arises, into him all resolves. He who knows this is a refuge for kādīni, as do the Sārasvata. The term corresponds with the use of the R̥gveda Prātiśākhya, see Max Müller's edit., pp. xli sq., and with the Śrauta Sūtras, St. Petersburg Dict., s. v.

² Sāyaṇa takes this as in II, 2, 2, n. 11, as aspirated sonants. This can hardly be accepted. Ātmā is taken by him as madhyakāram. The vowels must somewhere be alluded to, and ghoṣa can be = svara.

⁴ Sāyaṇa here ascribes the name to his causing to dwell, and his covering, cf. II, 2, 2, n. 2. Ānandatīrtha prefers 'best of dwellers'.

⁵ Sāyaṇa refers this to the Sobrahmanyā rite of the Soma sacrifice, where Indra is called, Indra ā gucha, hariva ā gucha (Śaṅkṛīṣa Brāhmaṇa, I, 1, 12; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, I, 12, 3, &c.).

for his friends. To him² who knows food and feeder a feeder³ is born, and food is his. Food is water and earth, for of them are foods compounded. Light and air are the feeder, for by them⁴ he eats food. Ether is the bowl, for in the ether is all poured. He who knows this becomes the refuge (bowl) of his friends. To him who knows food and feeder a feeder is born, and food is his. Plants and trees are food, animals the feeder, for animals eat plants and trees. Of animals, those who have teeth above and below and are formed like men,⁵ are feeders, the rest food. They overcome therefore the other animals, for the feeder is over his food. He becomes over his friends who knows this.⁶

2. He who knows more and more clearly the self obtains fuller being.¹ There are plants and trees and animals, and he knows the self more and more clearly (in them). For in plants and trees sap only is seen, in animals consciousness. In animals the self becomes more and more clear, because in them sap also is seen, while thought is not seen in others.² The self is more and more clear

² i.e. a son able to eat. The second asya must, I think, refer to the father, not the son. The change of reference is too abrupt to be probable, and either version is good sense. Sāyaṇa takes it as referring to the son. For the form ā-jāyate, cf. Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 27, 6.

³ They aid digestion.

⁵ In adhīva caranti the acc. is governed by adhī, a use found in Mantra and Brāhmaṇa alike (Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 87, 88; Atharvaveda, XIX, 49, 2: adhī vītvāny aruḥad gabhīrā; RV., VIII, 68, 15^b: adhī tiṣṭhan navaṃ rotham; Vājasaneyi Samhitā, VI, 2: adhī tvā sthāsyati, &c.). I do not, however, think it can well be construed with the gen., so I think the gen. saṁānānām is a partitive one, 'of his friends he, &c.' For similar cases of the partitive gen., cf. I, 2, 3, n. 6, and Harivamśa, II, 79, 12, where Hopkins, J.A.O.S., XXII, 152, n. 1, takes the gen. as local. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 441) is, I think, wrong in holding that adhī rarely has the accusative. The root sthā, e.g., would not naturally take an acc. without the aid of a preposition. Cf. II, 2, 4, n. 8.

⁷ Max Müller renders, 'but in others thought is not seen,' the apparent meaning being that in man. For he is most endowed with intelligence, he says what he has known, he sees what he has known, he knows to-morrow, he knows the world and what is not the world. By the mortal he desires the immortal, being thus endowed. As for the others, animals, hunger and thirst comprise their power of knowledge. They say not what they have known, they see not what they have known. They know not to-morrow, they know not the world and what is not the world. They go so far, for their experiences are according to the measure of their intelligence.³

3. This man is the sea,¹ he is above all the world. Whatever he reaches, he desires to be beyond it.² If he gains the sky world, he desires to be beyond it. If he were to gain yonder world, he would desire to be beyond it. Fivefold is this man.³ What is hot in him is fire; the apertures are the ether; blood, mucus, and seed are water; the body is earth; the breath is air. Fivefold is the air,⁴ up-breathing, down-breathing, back-breathing, out-breathing, on-breathing.

some animated beings have not thought. What must be meant is that others, i.e. plants and trees, have no intelligence, and so Sāyaṇa and Ānandatīrtha construe it. Itara frequently means, like ἄλλος and alius, others, not as opposed to a part of a species, but as another species; A. J. P., VII, 101. Stones have only sattā, says Sāyaṇa, i.e. are only objective, not also subjective.

³ Cf. II, 3, 1, n. 1. Ānandatīrtha here repeats the identifications with the different forms of Viṣṇu.

⁴ The five prāṇas frequently occur. No intelligible explanation of them all is possible. Prāṇa and apāna, once originally the same, were first divided as expiration and inspiration, then as breath, and the wind of digestion, cf. II, 4, 1 and 2. Vyāna 'through-breathing or circulating air' (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 263, n. 1) is the bond between the prāṇa and apāna. Samāna, which 'distributes the digested pieces through the limbs' (Eggeling, p. 264, n. 1), leads to union of the two first. Udāna conducts the soul from the body at death. See Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 249-252; E. T., pp. 276-280, and I, 3, 7, n. 6. Sāyaṇa says that prāṇa is in the mouth and nose, rising from the heart, apāna is in the lower parts, vyāna in all the veins, udāna in the throat to lead forth the soul, samāna leads food and drink evenly through the whole body. Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, II, 5, 6 adds avāna to the number. For further variations see on I, 3, 7; 4, 1. The same five as here occur in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 4, 2-6, and Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, II, 6, where see Cowell's

The deities, sight, hearing, mind, and speech, are comprised in up-breathing and down-breathing. For they depart with the departure of breath. He is the succession⁵ of speech and thought which is the sacrifice. The sacrifice is fivefold, Agnihotra, new and full moon sacrifices, the four-monthly sacrifices, the animal sacrifice, and the Soma sacrifice. The Soma sacrifice is the most perfect of the sacrifices, for these five kinds are seen in it; that which precedes the libations,⁶ is one; then there are three libations, and the rest (of the sacrifice) is the fifth.

4. He¹ who knows one sacrifice above the other, one day above the other, one god above the gods, is clever. This great litany is the sacrifice above the other, the day above the other, the god above the others. This litany is fivefold. As a chorus² it is trivṛt, pañcadaśa, saptadaśa, ekaviṃśa, and notes, and Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 293. With the following, cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (Kaṇva), I, 4, 17, where man, animal, sacrifice, and sarvam idam are all fivefold, and Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 7, 1, where mind, speech, breath, sight, and hearing are man.

² For *uttarottar*³, cf. Wackemagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, 1, 60. For api + √i, cf. Caland, Altind. Zauberrit., p. 18.

pañcaviṃśa. As a *sāman*² it is gāyatra, rathantara, bṛhat, bhadra, and rājana. As to metre it is gāyatrī, uṣṇih, bṛhatī, triṣṭubh, and dvipadā. The explanation⁴ is that it is the head, the right wing, the left wing, the tail, and the body (of the bird). He performs⁵ the prastava five times, the udgītha five times, the pratihāra five times, the upadrava five times, the nidhana five times. This forms a thousand syllables.⁶ The verses here are recited as five orders.⁷ What precedes the eighty tristichs is one order; then come the three sets of eighty tristichs; and the fifth consists of the rest. This makes a thousand (verses).⁸ That is the whole; these ten by tens are the whole. For number is such. Ten tens are a hundred, ten hundreds a thousand, and that is the whole. These are the three metres; this food indeed is threefold, eating, drinking, and chewing. He obtains this food by these.

5. This is produced as a thousand bṛhatīs. Some recognize a thousand of various metres, saying, 'Is there another?'¹ let us say there is.' Some say a thousand triṣṭubhs, some a thousand jagatis, some a thousand anuṣṭubhs. A Rṣi says (RV., X, 124, 9), 'Sages in their wisdom discovered Indra dancing an anuṣṭubh.'² That denotes, they discovered in speech then the breath of Indra. He can become famous and of splendid renown. 'Rather'³ he is liable to die untimely.'

⁷ There are 1000 stobhas and also in the whole Śastra a 1000 bṛhatīs. The rest refers to the nature of number as being measured by tens. There are nothing but sets of ten. The three 'metres' mean, according to Sāyaṇa, the numbers 10, 100, 1000 which govern all numbers. This, however, is inadequate, as the reference is clearly to the three sets of astītis. The reference to food is because these astītis are the food of the bird. There is no sign that the numbers 100 or 1000 are to be treated as specially important. Sāyaṇa's explanation is otherwise good. He quotes for darśataḥ, Pāṇini, V, 1, 60. Anandatīrtha is very weak on this point.

² Anandatīrtha takes the whole as one argument and as meaning, 'he can die when he likes.' This is impossible. For the construction, cf. I, 1, 1, n. 4.

he⁴ declares. For the self that is speech is imperfect, since⁵ a man understands if driven to thought by breath, not if driven by speech. Let him produce the br̥hātī,⁶ for the br̥hātī is the whole self. The self is on all sides surrounded by members, and, as the self is on all sides surrounded by members,⁷ so is the br̥hātī on all sides surrounded by metres. The self is the middle of the members, and the br̥hātī of metres.⁸ He can become famous and of splendid renown, while the other⁹ will die untimely, so said he. For the br̥hātī is the whole self. Therefore let him produce the br̥hātī.

6. This is produced as a thousand br̥hātīs. Of this produced as a thousand br̥hātīs, there are eleven hundred and twenty-five anuṣṭubhs.¹ For by the larger the smaller is comprehended. A Ṛṣi says (RV., VIII, 76, 12), 'I a speech of eight feet,' for there are eight feet of four syllables. 'Of nine corners,' for the br̥hātī.²

⁴ Ānandatīrtha points out that 'he' is Aitareya Mahidāsa or Mahaitareya. Sāyaṇa vaguely says 'a wise man'. Cf. I, 1, 1, n. 5.

⁸ Because metres are both bigger and smaller than the br̥hātī.

² i.e. it is nine feet of four syllables and is formed by adding one to the eight feet of the anuṣṭubh. Sāyaṇa says the MS. navasrakti is chāndasaḥ. Cf. Benfey, Sāmaveda, Glossary, p. 87. The correction navasrakti, though easy, is more convincing, because of r following. Cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 31; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 68, n. 15. MSS. frequently differ in such points, cf. Whitney's note on AV., VI, 33, 2 (vyathīḥ); cf. V, 1, 1, n. 18; 2, 1, n. 6. Note should be taken here of the readings of the Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 2, 6: caturvīṃśati in the acc., and I, 23, 15 and 23: pañcaviṃśaty anuvākān combined with Mānava Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6: sā ekaviṃśaty ayaṃ te (see Knauer, p. xli). I confess that the possible explanation suggested by Dr. Knauer of these cases as either contractions with omission of anuvāra or visarga or as neuters is not attractive. In the last case, as perhaps here, the original may have been as Dr. Knauer also suggests ekaviṃśati(ḥ) | ayaṃ te, &c., with the loss becomes nine-cornered. 'Touching the truth,' for speech³ united with verse is truth. 'I made⁴ the body out of Indra,' for from this thousand br̥hātī made into *anuṣṭubh*s, which is prāṇa connected with Indra, and from the br̥hātī he makes speech, the anuṣṭubh, as a body. The great litany is the highest development of speech, and it is fivefold, measured, unmeasured, music, true, and untrue. A ṛc verse, a gāthā,⁵ a kumbyā,⁶ are measured; a yajus verse, an invocation, conversation,⁷ are not measured; a sāman or part of it is music; om is true, no is untrue. The flower and fruit of speech is what is true. He can become famous and of splendid renown, for he speaks the truth, the flower and fruit of speech. The untrue is the root of speech, and, as a tree with roots exposed dries up, and perishes, so a man who speaks untruth exposes his roots, dries up, and perishes. Therefore let a man speak not untruth, but guard himself against it. The syllable⁸ om is empty and goes forward. So if

of h (as often in MSS. in pausa) and subsequent erroneous contraction. So pāṇcaviṃśatī(m) may have been written by error in the MS. and then the m dropped and contraction applied. But in verse, of course, we find clear cases of contraction or of the use of shortened forms, especially va for iva, e.g. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, XII, 29: puspam iva must metri causa be puspeva or puspaṇi va, probably the former, Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., LXI, 830; Roth, ibid., XLVIII, 682.

a man says om, then that² is taken from him; if he should say om to everything, he would empty himself and be unable to have delights. The syllable 'no' is full¹⁰ for one's self. If a man should say 'no' to everything, his fame would be evil and he would destroy himself. Therefore should one give at the proper time, and at the proper time he should refrain¹¹ from giving. So does he unite the true and the untrue. From their union he grows and becomes greater. He who knows this speech of which (the great litany) is a modification, he is clever. 'A' is the whole of speech and being manifested¹² through the mutes and sibilants it becomes manifold and various. If uttered in a whisper it is breath, if aloud it is body. Therefore it is as it were hidden, for what is incorporeal is as it were hidden, and breath is incorporeal. But spoken aloud it is body and visible, for body is visible.

7. This is produced as a thousand brhatis. It is glory,¹ it is Indra, it² is the lord of creatures. 'He who knows it as Indra, as the lord of creatures, leaves this world shaking³ off all ties,' so said Mahidāsa⁴ Aitareya. Having departed, having become Indra,⁵ he shines in those worlds. They say, 'If by this form he gains yonder world, then by what form does he experience this world?'⁶

¹⁰ Is selfish. Sāyaṇa cites Bhagavadgītā, II, 34: sambhūvitasya cākīrtir maraṇād atiricyate |

¹² 'A' with the different letters is the source of the alphabet. It may be interesting to speculate if this denotes that writing where the 'a' was not expressed was already known. It may be so, but it is not clear. In any case as the date of writing is very doubtful, no great light would be thrown on the date of the Āranyaka; cf. V, 3, 3 ad fin., where the reference is clear but cogent only for Śaunaka's period. For later reference to the akāra, see Jacob, Concordance, p. 2, and cf. Tāṇḍya Mahābrāhmaṇa, XX, 14, 2.

² Sāyaṇa compares Taittirīya Āranyaka, I, 1: na tasyete kalcana tasya nāma mahad yasaḥ | For Indra, cf. II, 4, 3; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 4; Kauṣṭaki Upaniṣad, II, 6; III, 1; Bṛhad-āraṇyaka Upaniṣad, III, 2, 2.

⁷ For the nasal in pluti, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 299, 300; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 78.

The blood in the woman⁷ is the form of Agni, therefore one should despise it not. The seed in the man is the form of Āditya, therefore one should despise it not. This self gives itself to that self, that self gives itself to this self.⁸ They thus gain each other. In this form⁹ he gains yonder world, in that form he experiences this world.

8. Here there are these verses:¹—

⁷ Ānandaśrītha has a wonderful explanation. This world and that world are both svastrirūpam of Bhagavānt. Sāyaṇa explains that there are six elements in the body; three, fat, bone, and marrow, are white and represent the man; three, skin, blood, and flesh, are red and represent the woman. ayam is used of the woman because she is connected with earth, asaṃ of the man because he is connected with the sun and the upper world.

⁸ The fact that Sāyaṇa does not comment on imasmai shows how little he can be relied on to note points in the text. The reading is quite certain, and cf. Whitney, l. c., § 502 b.

¹ The verses are probably older than the prose. They are earlier than the *triṣṭubh*s cited by Patañjali (cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 483 sq.) and show every sign of antiquity in their metrical form (cf. J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 1-10; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, xxxv; Hopkins, Great Epic of India, pp. 194 sq.) which is decidedly irregular. The third verses of 1, 2, 4 are *jagatī*s, the first verse of 1 has only ten syllables, the last verse of 4 only 9, and even if by resolutions they are altered into 11 syllable verses, then the characteristic triṣṭubh ending is missing. In no case are the four verses assimilated, and indeed in no case are even two verses assimilated. The last stanza, pāda 1, is in iambic-ended anuṣṭubh, a very early verse indeed. It is of course true, as Bloomfield (Atharvaveda, pp. 41, 42) points out, that the actual development of the anuṣṭubh (pādas 1 and 3) cannot possibly have been from $\times \times \times \times \times \times \times \times$ to $\cup - \cup - \cup - \cup - \cup$, and thence to the Epic Śloka with its differentiated pādas 1 and 3. But it is equally clear that the development of the iambic anuṣṭubh in the priestly circles was comparatively early and that the later verse-writers tended more and more to fall back (with sporadic cases of imitation such as in the Vināda hymns, see my criticisms^a of Arnold's Vedic Metre, in J. R. A. S., 1906,

^a I may note here a small point confirmatory of my criticism of Prof. Arnold's views. The term dakṣiṇa (pāda) occurs in RV., X, 61, 8, which is therefore naturally called one of the pp. 484 sq., 720) on the popular anuṣṭubh and its later development ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ ॐ — ॐ. That development is shown in the late Mantras found in the Gṛhya Sūtras, e.g. in thirty out of thirty-nine cases in the Śāṅkhāyana (Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXVII, 67 sq.; S. B. E., XXX, xxxv sq.); in the Ṛgveda Prātiśākhya of Śaunaka (S. B. E., I. c.); in the Bṛhaddevatā (J. R. A. S., I. c.); in the Epic (Hopkins, I. c.; Jacobi, Ind. Stud., XVII, 443 sq., Das Rāmāyaṇa (1893), and in Gurupūjākaumudī (1896)). It is quite possible and even probable that Oldenberg is right in thinking that the iambic hymns are in the Ṛgveda earlier than the bulk of those hymns where the endings of the first pāda of each hemistich is unrestricted in point of form, the period of the Kuru princes, Parikṣit and Janamejaya⁶ (Z. D. M. G., XXXVII, 65).

It is obvious that these verses are of the same type as the yajñagūthās of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra (I, 3, 10), i.e. they were composed to illustrate and sum up the doctrines which the Āranyaka supports, and here as used are older than the work in which they occur (cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, xxxv-xxxvii; Ind. Stud., XV, 11). These verses form an interesting parallel to the rise of the Ākhyāna, in which the verses perhaps denoted the chief movements in the narrative and were fixed before the prose (or verse later) connecting parts (Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXVII, 54 sq.; XXXIX, 52 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 89 sq.). For similar verses, see Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 6, 23; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, II, 8, &c. In Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 10, Śloka is mentioned after Vidyā, Upaniṣads, and before Sūtras in such a way as to suggest that such Śloka are as here occur are denoted. Aśvāḥ is also a pre-Brāhmaṇa and Ṛgvedic form, though occasionally found later, e.g. III, 2, 3.

² This is not very clear. Ānandatīrtha explains that the fivefold body is that composed of Nārāyaṇa, &c., and is male and female united, in which all the gods, Nārāyaṇa, &c., are united. Sāyaṇa explains that the breath enters the body, and the worshipper meditates on himself as identical with the breath and thus with all the gods. The five are presumably the five senses.

³ The metaphor is common, cf. Kāthaka Upaniṣad, III, 4; indriyāṇi hayān ākuḥ | The senses are meant. Cf. Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 12, and n. 14.

latest hymns by Rhys Davids, Buddhist India, p. 30. But Prof. Arnold (Vedic Metre, p. 286) assigns this hymn to the archaic (by which he means the oldest) period!

Brahman is called 'a' and the 'I' is there contained.¹² This is produced as a thousand byahās. Of this produced as a thousand byahās there are thirty-six thousand syllables. So many are the thousands of the days of man's life. By the syllable of life¹³ alone does he obtain the day of life, and by the day of life the syllable of life. There is a chariot of the gods which destroys desires.¹⁴ Its seat

¹² Sāyaṇa quotes Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, V, 10 (the late metre is noteworthy):—

naiva strī na pumān eṣa naiva cāyaṇa napuṃsakāḥ |

yadyac charīram ādatte tena tena sa codyate ||

For the nominative, cf. passages like Bṛhaddevatā, V, 39, where I would read Ṛṣaspatih with MSS. h. d.; Ṛgveda Prātiśākhya, XVII, 26; Taittirīya Saṃhitā, V, 7, 4, 4, &c.

¹⁴ Ānandatīrtha explains the akṣara as the female form of Viṣṇu, the ahas (sic) as the male. As a matter of fact the sentence merely asserts he obtains brahman or prāṇa by means of brahman or prāṇa, as both are revealed in the syllable and the ritual of the Mahāvratā day, as in I, 2, 2.

¹⁵ Sāyaṇa explains this as a chariot of Hiraṇyagarbha. Ānandatīrtha renders anahāma- is speech, its two sides the ears, the horses the eyes, the driver the mind. Breath mounts upon it. A Ṛṣi says (RV., X, 39, 12), 'Come hither on what is quicker than mind,' and (RV., VIII, 73, 2), 'On what is quicker than the winking of an eye.'¹⁰

ADHYĀYA 4.

In the beginning¹ the one self was this, there was nothing else blinking. He² thought, 'Shall I create worlds?' He created these worlds, water, lights, māraḥ as, 'Prāṇa has no desires and delights in Māyā,' i.e. Ramā. Really all that is meant is that there is a chariot, viz. the body, where prāṇa mounts, as contained above in the verses. Ānandatīrtha explains the uddhi as Ramā in snake form, tatre as Candra and his wife, pakṣas as Candra and his wife, cakṣuḥ as Sūrya and his wife, manuḥ as Rudra. The metaphor is not rare, e.g. n. 3; quotation in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 5, 3; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8; RV., III, 14, 7, as interpreted by Bergaigne (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 270) where the prayer is a chariot; Atharvaveda, VIII, 8, 22, where uddhi and pakṣas also occur, and are rendered as above by Whitney; Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, III, 4, 4; Kāthaka Saṃhitā, VIII, 8.

¹⁰ Sāyaṇa adds a long disquisition (cf. Max Müller, S. B. E., I, 235, 236) on the difference of this prāṇavidyā from that of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad and the Chāndogya Upaniṣad, in which prāṇa is not related to the Mahāvratā ceremony. Following as usual Śaṅkara he also discusses what is the result of this prāṇavidyā, and concludes that it leads after death and absorption in the paramātman to rebirth in the brahmaloka where after enjoyment of all the powers of a deity, he proceeds to obtain full knowledge and mukti. But Śaṅkara ignores the fact that mukti is not as yet known to this Āraṇyaka, which in its philosophic doctrine reaches only the unity of existence and the identity of the self and brahman, and which promises immortality, not liberation, to the devout. It is impossible even to say that this Āraṇyaka, II, 1-3, realizes clearly the doctrine that all is consciousness, though it approaches this standpoint. It does not assert that the self is unknowable as pure subject or the unreality of existence, as is done by the later Upaniṣads and the Vedānta. To the writer of this Upaniṣad immortality meant a continuance of conscious existence, because the identity of the self and the world did not involve in any way the destruction of self. All that it involved was the destruction of what is really self from its accidents. It is of course true that this position is not strictly consistent, but it is no more unsatisfactory than that of Vedāntism.

² This is an imitation of the Puruṣa Sūkta, RV., X, 90; cf. Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, III, 12, but, as Deussen points out, with the essential difference that the metaphysical prīus of the puruṣa is the ātman. The view of the relation of the ātman to the world is cosmogonic, mortal, and waters. This water is above the³ heaven, and heaven supports it. The lights are the sky. The mortal is the earth, those under the earth are the waters. He thought, 'There are these worlds. Shall I create guardians of the world?' He formed the person,⁴ taking him out from the waters.⁵ He brooded⁶ on him, and when he was brooded over, a mouth burst forth as an egg does. From the mouth came speech, from speech fire. Nostrils burst forth. From the nostrils came forth scent,⁷ from scent wind. Eyes burst forth. From the eyes came forth sight, from sight the sun. Ears burst forth. From the ears came forth hearing, from hearing the quarters.⁸ Skin burst forth. From the skin came forth hairs, from hairs plants and trees. The heart burst forth. From the heart came forth mind, from mind the moon. The navel burst forth. From the navel came forth down-breathing,⁹ from down-breathing death. The generative organ burst forth. From the organ came forth seed, from seed water.

not pantheistic. Of course the orthodox view of the commentators that the ātmā is the īśvara, not virāj, and the creation is adhyāropa, from II, 4, 1, to II, 4, 3. This is not, it is admitted by Śāyaṇa, clear from the text, but he appeals to Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad, IV, 10, māyām tu prakṛtiṃ vidyād, and Brahma Sūtra, I, 4, 23, prakṛtiś ca pratijñād dṛṣṭāntānu-rodhāt, besides other passages equally irrelevant. In Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 1, 1, aiśvata the regular form occurs. The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa often has unaugmented pasts, see p. 56; Böhtlingk, Sachs. Ber., 1900, p. 413. The next clause, here and II, 4, 3, may be interrogative or merely an expression of determination (so commentators and translators). For āpas, cf. Atharvaveda, VI, 23, 2; Ind. Stud., X, 440, n. 1; J. A. O. S., XXV, 110.

³ The translation of Max Müller, 'and it is heaven,' can hardly be right, and it is not supported by the commentators. It is true that heaven must come in somewhere, for it is sufficient if it comes in as a support, and so Böhtlingk and Deussen, with Colebrooke, Sītārāma, Rājārāma, and Röer take it. Ānandatīrtha explains ambhas as mahas and the other worlds beyond the heaven where the waters were originally placed; 'the blue firmament,' Rājārāma.

⁷ Prāṇa here means clearly the power of smell. Originally (1) it meant the breath in the widest sense, from which it came to denote (2) life or the principle of conscious life, as frequently in II, 1-3. On the other hand, (3) it was narrowed down to denote one of five prāṇas, II, 3, 3, and these prāṇas were contrasted with manas and the indriyas, though in death or sleep the fundamental character of the prāṇas came out. (4) The sense 'smell' is an independent and not very common development. (5) Another development applies it to all the organs of life, e.g. eyes, nose, tongue, see I, 3, 7, n. 6. Cf. Sāṅkhya Āraṇyaka, p. 21, n. 1.

2. These deities¹ being created fell into this great ocean.² He troubled him with hunger and thirst. The deities spake to him, 'Grant us a place, where we can rest and eat food.' He led a cow³ for them. They said, 'This is not enough for us.' He led a horse for them. They said, 'This is not enough.' He led man⁴ to them. They said, 'Well done!'⁵ Man is indeed well done. He said to them, 'Enter according to your places.'⁶ Then fire,⁷ having become speech, entered the mouth. Air, having become scent, entered the nostrils. The sun, having become sight, entered the eyes. The quarters, having become hearing, entered the ears. The plants and trees, having become hairs, entered the skin. The moon, having become mind, entered the heart. Death, having become down-breathing, entered the navel. The waters, having become seed, entered the generative organ. Hunger and thirst said to him, 'Grant us two a place.' He said to them, 'To these deities I assign you, I make you sharers or wind, in the lower part of the body. Cf. on II, 3, 3, and II, 4, 3. Rājārāma takes it as 'air inhaled by mouth, not through nostrils'. Colebrooke has 'the air drawn in by deglutition', explaining that swallowing was considered a parallel to inhaling. Cf. Z. D. M. G., LV, 261; LVI, 556; J. A. O. S., XXII, 249.

⁶ Cf. Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 18, 3, which may be borrowed.

in them.' Therefore to whatever deity an oblation is offered, hunger and thirst are partners in it.⁸

3. He thought, 'There are these worlds and the guardians of these worlds. Shall I create food for them?' He brooded over the waters.¹ From the waters brooded over form² was born. The form that was born was indeed food. The food when created sought to go away.³ He was fain to seize it. He sought to grasp it with speech. He could not grasp it with speech. Had he been able to grasp it with speech, man would have enjoyed food by uttering its name alone. He sought to grasp it by scent.⁴ He could not grasp it by scent. Had he been able to grasp it by scent, man would have enjoyed food by scenting it alone. He sought to grasp it by the eye. He could not grasp it by the eye. Had he been able to grasp it by the eye, man would have enjoyed food by seeing it alone. He sought to grasp it by the ear. He could not grasp it by the ear. Had he been able to grasp it by the ear, man would have enjoyed food by hearing it alone. He sought to grasp it by the skin. He could not grasp it by the skin. Had he been able to grasp it by the skin, man would have enjoyed food by touching it only. He sought to grasp it by the mind. He could not grasp it by the mind. Had he been able to grasp it by the mind, man would have enjoyed food by thinking of it alone. He sought to grasp it by the generative organ. He could not grasp it by that organ. Had he been able to grasp it

⁸ Sāyana, following Ānandatīrtha, explains that, as hunger is mitigated by the knowledge of its (i.e. food's) proximity, or by hearing of it, so the senses all appease hunger and thirst. Śaṅkara's view is that the sensations become eaters by sharing in the deities, i.e. fire, &c., in the body and in the world; so they share in every offering to a deity (i.e. the deity and the worshipper both eat).

² Form or organism, as Rājārāma translates it, is natural, not something imposed on matter, and it plays no such part in Indian thought as in Greek. Even the Buddhist rūpam is not a pregnant conception.

⁴ As above in II, 4, 1. For a rather similar list, cf. Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 60.

by that organ, man would have enjoyed food by sending it forth alone. He sought to grasp it by down-breathing. He obtained it.⁵ Thus it is Vāyu who lays hold of food, and Vāyu is he who lives by food.⁶ He thought, 'How can this be without me?'⁷ He thought, 'By which way⁸ shall I enter?' He thought, 'If speech distinguishes, if scent smells, if the eye sees, if the ear hears, if the skin feels, if the mind thinks, if down-breathing digests, if the organ sends forth, what then am I?' Having split open the top of the skull he entered by that door. That door is called vidyā, the place of happiness.⁹ There are three¹⁰ dwelling-places of him, three dreams, this dwelling-place, and this, and this. Born he looked through all beings, to see whether any one wished to proclaim

⁵ Vāyu is derived from āvayat. The use of this causal form is confined to this sense, but is found both in Saṃhitā and Brāhmaṇa. The sense is perhaps 'consumed' rather than 'seized'. Possibly ā vī is the source (Monier-Williams' Dict.), but this is less likely; cf. J. A. O. S., XVII, 53; Ind. Stud., XVIII, 24.

⁸ I. e. by the tip of the foot, as in II, 1, 4, or the skull. Sāyana connects the former with the karmendriyas, the latter with the jñānendriyas. Ānandatīrtha refers to a variant in Śaṅkara's commentary antar for ataḥ. It obviously must have been wrong, but it is worth noting that Śaṅkara's text was not very complete or certain. It is noteworthy that here we have no hint of karman (cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, III, 2, 13 sq.; IV, 4, 2-5).

another self.¹¹ He saw this person only as the most widely extended brahman.¹² I have seen it, so he said. Therefore he was Idamdra by name, he was indeed

¹¹ Śaṅkara does not explain this passage. Ānandatīrtha says that either he regarded it as clear or his copyists (cf. n. 8) omitted it. His own explanation gives us a choice. (1) He identified himself with creatures because he did not see the true self, itī being used in the sense of yasmāt, or simply, he identified himself with creatures: he did not see the true self, itī marking the close of the adhyāropa section. (2) The adhyāropa ends with āvasatḥa itī, and with sa jāta begins the apavāda. He examined the creatures separately, whether they had svatātḥa tattā or not, and concluded that 'there is nothing that I can call different from the true self'. Vadīyāmi is given for vāvadiṣat. Sāyaṇa follows this one of Ānandatīrtha's explanations, using some of the actual words. Colebrooke has, 'What else (but him) can I here affirm (to exist)?' S. Sītārāma reads, 'How should he speak of any other?' and Röer has, 'How could he desire to declare any other thing different from him?' Rājārāma, 'Can any (element) here call (the ruler) different?' Max Müller and Deussen render, 'whether anything wished to proclaim here another self.' This must be right, or perhaps the subject should be 'any person', the difference is, however, slight. This version is supported by Ānandatīrtha in his own commentary, ika bhūteṣu anyam matto 'nyam pravartakam vāvadiṣat kim vadet, says Viṣṇu. Vāvadiṣat cannot refer to the subject of abhiyayikhyat and anyam must refer to ātmanam. Vāvadiṣat may be an intensive aor. subj., or the injunctive of a desid. from the intensive, both rare forms (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 1019, 1025). Nīlakaṇṭha thinks this passage is referred to in the Mokṣadharma, Mbh., XII, 10060, no doubt wrongly, see Deussen's trans., p. 493. For abhiyayikhyat, abhiyayikṣat should certainly be read. The confusion between khy and kṣ is very frequent in all sorts of MSS, cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., IV, 273; Hillebrandt's notes on Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IV, 12, 10; 15, 1; Gobhila Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 3, 18 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 21); Knauer, Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra, p. xxxv; Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 174, 175, and at great length in his forthcoming work, Zur Stammbildung, &c., on kṛcchra; Z. D. M. G., I, 42; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 136; Epigr. Ind., IV, 122, prakhyālitam for prakṣālitam. The Nirukta, III, 20, already recognizes it and uses it in connecting √khyā with rkṣa. On the other hand T, a South Indian MS., has the correct √kṣat, though perhaps only by conjecture. Rājārāma gives the form as Vedic for abhiyayakhyat, and no doubt a confused remembrance of such a form may have helped to keep the absurdity in the text when once it had forced its way in. Vāvadiṣat he gives as let of √vad. For ātman he accepts the etymology from √at, the 'motor' or 'vital force'. Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 116, 117) adopts the etymology of Weber and Garbe (Die Sāṅkhya-Philosophie, p. 293) of ātman from √at and so denoting (1) the wandering wind, (2) the saṃsārīn soul, whence come the other meanings, person, self, body, nature. It is quite possible that the soul and the wind were deemed to be closely connected—there are plenty of parallels—but of course in this case we cannot take saṃsārīn in the technical sense. The more usual derivation is from √an (Roth), while Deussen (Allg. Gesch. der Phil., I, 1, 285 sq.) prefers to derive ātman from two pronominal stems. No explanation as yet offered is satisfactory, since none explains Vedic tmanā, &c. (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 61). Böhtlingk's conj. vāva dīṣet, 'to see if it referred to any one save himself,' is good, but not essential.

¹² The commentators all read brahma separately, and though the sense would be much the same this is better than to take brahmatatamam (with S text) as one word. The commentators and translators all agree it is for tatatamam, and Deussen compares durniṣṭrapataram in Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 10, 6. We may also compare navamam (= navatamam according to Max Müller in RV., V, 27, 3, see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 422) Varuṇavāyvitamam for citatamam in V, 3, 2, though there the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 10, 1, reads pari-

ADHYĀYA 5.

In man¹ he is from the first as a germ.² That seed is strength gathered from all the limbs and he thus bears a self in his self. When he connects the seed to the woman, then he causes it to be born. That is his first birth. The seed becomes the self of the woman like one of her own limbs. Therefore it hurts her not. She nourishes the self he has given her there. She, as nourisher, is to be nourished. The woman bears the germ. The man before the birth of the child and thereafter³ supports him. When he supports the child before its birth and

S.*, April, 1893, p. xxxv; A. J. P., XVII, 416-418. Otherwise it might be translated 'just that' in accordance with Pāṇini, V, 3, 93, for which use Bhāgavata Purāṇa, X, 36, 28 is also cited; so Böhtlingk, and in Chāndogya, I, c., "tana is now read.

¹³ For Indra as a designation of ātman cf. II, 3, 7, n. 1. For adarṣam, Lévi, p. 107.

³ The commentators here differ. Śaṅkara and Ānandatīrtha in his tikā take (1) janmano 'gre' as 'before birth'; (2) agra eva as jātamātram; (3) adhi as 'after birth'. This seems preferable, except that agra eva must be considered as explained by janmano 'gre'. Ānandatīrtha in his bhāṣya explains (1) as above; (2) as agryaḥ, tarvaguṇāgryaḥ; (3) adhi as thereafter, he supports in truth himself, for the continuation of these worlds.⁴ For thus are these worlds continued. This is his second birth. This self⁵ is appointed for holy deeds. The other self having done its duty and attained old age departs, and departing hence is born again. This is his third birth.⁶ A poet says (RV., IV, 27, 1), 'Within the womb, I learned all the races of these gods. A hundred brazen forts restrained me, but like a hawk I escaped swiftly downward.'⁷ Vāmadeva lying in the womb thus declared this. Knowing this, he adhikatvena. Sāyaṇa renders (1) agra eva as prasavāt prāg eva; (2) janmano 'gre as prasavād ūrdhvam; (3) adhi as adhikatvena, apparently borrowing this from Anandatīrtha's bhāṣya. The services before and after birth which Rājārāma Rāmakaṣṣa Bhāgavata alone recognizes, as apparently also Colebrooke, are explained as the nourishing the mother and performing the usual ceremonies before and after birth. It is just possible, however, that adhikhādayati is the verb, and the reference is only to what is done before birth. Böhtlingk omits agra eva.

⁶ Śaṅkara explains that as father and son are one ātman (cf. V, 3, 3), the three births are correct. Sāyaṇa says either (1) the ātman being one, it has three births, two as son, one as father; or (2) the two births of the son have analogies in the case of the father and that of the father in the case of the son, so that each has three births. The third birth is taken by the commentators as rebirth in heaven, hell, or in the world of men. Probably, as there is no proof that the Upaniṣad knows the doctrine of transmigration, it refers to being born in the next world, an idea familiar in the Brāhmaṇas (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, pp. 168, 169; Sanskrit Literature, pp. 223, 224) which differs essentially from transmigration, i.e. birth into this world again, see Deussen, Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 294, 295; E. T., pp. 325 sq.; Lévi, pp. 96, n. 1, 97, n. 1; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., II, 8; contra Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 288; Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1893, p. 92. For vayo-gata, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 190.

⁷ This verse is very obscure in this connexion. Śaṅkara, Anandatīrtha, and Sāyaṇa all explain it as referring to the innumerable bodies through which Vāmadeva had passed until he obtained mukti through knowledge. This meaning cannot be got from the passage. The context seems to show that it only means that Vāmadeva knew the three births of ātman, and so escaped and became immortal. The doctrine of mukti is not apparently known to the writer of the Upaniṣad. If it were, it would be made clear. For the meaning of the verse in the original cf. Bergaigne, Rel. Véd., III, 322; Eggeling, S.B.E., XXVI, xx, n. 1; Roth, Z.D.M.G., XXXVI, 353; Hillebrandt, Ved. Myth., I, 282; and especially Bloomfield, J.A.O.S., XVI, 1-24, who explains the myth as referring to Agni. When the cloud is rent in the storm, the lightning (= īyena) breaks from the cloud and simultaneously the Soma flows upon the earth. Sāyaṇa in his Rgvedic commentary follows this passage. On RV., IV, 26, 1, Sāyaṇa says that Vāmadeva, who had in his mother's womb the knowledge of Brahman, sets forth that knowledge of the identity of himself and Brahman, in the verses aham Manur, &c. (so Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IV, 4, 2, 21 and 22). So [Sāyaṇa] on Atharvaveda, XVIII, 3, 15: sa khalu garbhāvastha eva sann utpannatattvajñānaḥ svaya sārvaśrīṇāṃ anusandadhau. Sieg (Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 76 sq.) holds, no doubt, rightly that the idea is not found in the RV. passage, but no conclusion as to the priority of the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, i.e., can of course be drawn from the fact that no mention is there made of the legend, which may quite well have been known to the Śatapatha, though not referred to. His version stepped forth after the destruction⁸ of the body, and having enjoyed all delights in the world of heaven he became immortal.⁹

Who is he¹ whom we meditate on as the self?² Which is that self? That by which one sees, by which one hears, by which one smells scents, by which one forms speech, by which one discriminates sweet and sour? That which is the heart and the mind,³ perception, injunction, understanding, knowledge, wisdom, vision, firmness, thinking, considering, helping, memory, resolution, will, breath, love, and desire?⁴ All these are only names of knowledge.⁵ That (self) is

(pp. 88 sq., cf. Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 211 sq.) of this verse takes the last part as meaning, 'Then came the eagle; through the swift one (jāvasā as an adj.) I escaped,' the speaker being (as in IV, 18) Indra himself. Sieg reconstructs the myth as one in which Indra even before birth desires lordship over the gods, who therefore try first to prevent his birth and then seek to restrain him, until he escapes by the eagle's aid. This is very ingenious but not proved.

³ This Adhyāya is the final answer to the questions proposed; upāsmahe may also be translated 'worship' or 'service'. Colebrooke takes it: 'What is this soul? that we may worship him.'

brahman,⁶ Indra, Prājapati, all the gods, the five great elements,⁷ earth, air, ether, water, lights, all these and those which are mixed with small as it were,⁸ seeds of various kinds, born of eggs, born from the womb, born from heat,⁹ born from germs,¹⁰ horses, cows, men, elephants, and all that breathes, whether it walks or ātatajñāna, vivīdhaññāna, prakṛstajñāna, avipṛstajñāna, darśana, dhāraṇa, mānu pramāṇesu tatatvān matiḥ, brahmāññānam itatvam, sarvapreraṇa, sarveṣu deśakāleṣu svarūpeṣu ca samam ramate, sarvakṛpti, sarvakatyavam asana, amṛtānandā, svalantrava. Sāyaṇa borrows from both; he refers samjñānam to samyak, medhā to granthatadārtadhāraṇam, jātiḥ to javar or as in Śaṅkara, samkalpaḥ to asamīcine 'pi vastuni samyaktvena kalpanam; for the rest he follows faithfully Śaṅkara. Rājārāma renders: 'consciousness, direction, sagacity, intelligence, retentive power, understanding, courage, power of thinking, freedom of thought, intrepidity, memory, will, capacity, vitality, ambition, obedience.' Böhtlingk makes these subjects and prajñāmetram predicate.

flies, and what is immovable. All that is guided by knowledge, it rests on knowledge. The world is guided by knowledge. Knowledge is its foundation.¹¹ Knowledge is brahman. He¹² by his knowing self having left this world and having obtained all delights in the world of heaven became immortal.

ADHYĀYA 7.

My speech rests on mind, my mind on speech. Be thou revealed to me.¹

of iy=dy for udbhīdyā (cf. Scheftelowitz, Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, § 10).

¹¹ The question is whether this justifies an attribution to the author of the doctrine that knowledge alone exists. It is quite open to argue that we only are given the doctrine that the world is guided by knowledge, which leaves us with a final dualism. I think probably the author went further and intended to assert the origin of all from knowledge, cf. II, 4. If so, he represents exactly the later Bhāgavata view,^a perhaps that of Bādarāyaṇa, of the nature of reality. The self, or god, is conceived as creating the material world as a reality,^b but the exact nature of the creation is left vague. The relation of brahman and ātman is likewise left vague, a mere identification such as may have been meant being of little value. But of course none of the questions had yet clearly presented themselves. Cf. Thibaut, S.B.E., XXXIV, xcvi sq.; XLVIII, Introd., for Rāmānuja's view, and my reviews of Deussen's Philosophie der Upanishads, J.R.A.S., 1906, pp. 590 sq., and of his Vier philosophische Texte, J.R.A.S., 1907, pp. 462 sq.; Grierson, J.R.A.S., 1908, p. 361. Rājārāma renders prajñāna 'source of intelligence'.

¹² According to Śaṅkara, this refers to Vāmadeva, see II, 5.

^a Cf. Rājārāma Rāmākṛṣṇa Bhāgavata's ed., p. 7, where he finds in II, 6 the doctrine that all has its source in the highest spirit.

^b Cf. Windelband, History of Philosophy, pp. 252 sq.

You are the two pins² of the Veda. May my lore forsake³ me not. I join day and night with what I have learned. I will proclaim the real, I will proclaim the true.⁴ May this protect me, may this protect the teacher. May it protect me, may it protect the teacher.

vāṇīḥ is a conjecture of his: the text MSS. in I, 4, 4 have either vāṇīm or vāṇī, while, ibid. 8, all save one (vāṇīm) have vāṇī. Only one Paddhati (cf. p. iv) has vāṇīm, obviously an error for vāṇīm (which of course (cf. V, 1, 6, n. 4) is the Sandhi of vāṇī om), if it is not a mere misreading of the MS. There is thus no real support for vāṇīḥ (how exactly Dr. Knauer would take it, I am not sure), and in the Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra the simple Sandhi mātmā for me + ātmā is actually found in I, 3, 2 (so also I, 9, 11: *viṣṭarāsi*⁵; I, 11, 16: viṣvādi, &c., see Knauer, p. xxxix). Probably māni lead to the more intelligible (to the scribe) vāṇī.

For vāḥ, &c., Knauer, who does not notice the Aitareya passage, quotes Pāraskara Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 3, 25; Taittirīya Samhitā, V, 5, 9, 2; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka (Āndhra text), X, 72; Atharvaveda, XIX, 60, 1. There is also the parallel version in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 1, where vedasāmāsiṛiṇīḥ takes the place of vedasya, &c. This may perhaps mean 'hidden in', but probably we have a mere corruption; see my translation. The Mantras are no doubt old enough. Colebrooke, who comments on the use of Mantra as applicable to part of an Upaniṣad, renders,

'May my speech be founded on understanding, and my mind be attentive to my utterance.'² Ānanayasamarthe, Sāyaṇa. Colebrooke renders, 'For my sake (O speech and mind!) approach this Veda;' perhaps reading mānu. Dr. Schefstelowitz takes it as 'navel'. The word in the Rgveda, I, 35, 6, &c. (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 39), seems to refer to the pin of the axle of a cart, and the metaphor is natural enough; cf. Leumann, Et. Wört., p. 31.

³ prahāsīḥ may be a second person, or a problematic third person based on a false analogy (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 889; Weber, Berl. Sitz., 1895, p. 830), or an error for prahāsīt. Precisely the same difference of reading occurs in Khila, IV, 8, 5, brūtaṃ me mā prā hāsīḥ, where Peterson's MS. has hāsīt, and cf. Mānava Śrauta Sūtra, II, 1, 2, 36 (hāsīt) with Taittirīya Samhitā, III, 1, 1, 2 (hāsīḥ), in the same phrase, dikṣe mā mā hāsī(h), and in Hiranyakeśi Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 6, 20, 1, yathāsat for yethāsaḥ (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 189). Schefstelowitz renders: 'das von mir Gehörte möge man nicht verspotten vermittle des Erlernten,' taking hāsīḥ from √has. The long ā would be unusual,^a but in any case a derivation from √hā seems preferable in point of sense and is supported by Atharvaveda, VI, 41, 3; Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, IV, 42 (Ānandāśrama ed., pp. 352, 355). The translation will be literally: 'O lore, forsake me not,' reading brūta, perhaps, as the nom. is unusual, and the neuter voc. is perfectly well supported (cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, § 66), and the reading brūta me is easily corrupted into brūtaṃ me, cf. Lanman's note on Whitney, Atharva Veda, XVIII, 2, 3; Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1887, p. xxv, and my note in J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 225, although the nominative can stand, cf. Winternitz, Mantrapāṭha, I, p. xviii.^b For the sense cf. Atharvaveda, I, 1, 4; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, I, 4, 1.

^a Compare, however, sākye which Whitney, no doubt rightly, reads in Atharvaveda, II, 27, although the form elsewhere is always sākye, and III, 1, 6, n. 5. Ahasīt, given as only grammatical by Whitney (Roots, &c., p. 203), is found in the Daśakumāracarita (Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 147).

ĀRANYAKA III

ADHYĀYA 1.

NEXT comes the Upaniṣad of the Saṃhitā text. The former half¹ is the earth, the latter half the heaven, their union the air, says Māṇḍūkeya. The union is the ether,² so proclaimed Mākṣavya. 'For it is not considered independent,³ and so I do not agree with his (Māṇḍūka's) son,' he said. 'They are alike⁴ and it is considered independent,' said Āgastya; for the air and the ether are both alike. So far as regards the deities. Now as regards the self. 'The former half is speech, the latter half the mind, their union is the breath,' so said Śūravīra Māṇḍūkeya. Then said his eldest son, 'The former half is mind, the latter half is speech. For by mind one first resolves and then utters speech. Therefore is mind the first half, speech the second half, and truth their union.' It is indeed alike⁵ with both, father and son. This compact of mind, speech, breath, is like a chariot⁶ with three horses. He who knows thus this union, obtains children,⁷ cattle, fame,

² Ākāśa is rendered 'void' by Böhtlingk in his translations of Chāndogya and Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣads; see II, 6, n. 7, contra, Whitney, P. A. O. S., Oct., 1890, p. liii.

⁷ Ānandatīrtha renders the children as prajānā, and the cattle as Vedas. Sāyaṇa with glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. So teach the Māṇḍūkeyas.⁸

2. Then comes (the teaching) of Śākalya.¹ The first half is the earth, the second half the sky, their union is rain, Parjanya is the uniter. Thus it is when he rains strongly and continuously for day and night, then people say, 'Earth and heaven have united.' So far as regards the deities. Now as regards the self.

Śaṅkara regards this Upaniṣad as intended for persons who are neither fit for mukti (II, 4-6) nor even for union with Hiraṇyagarbha (II, 1-3).

⁸ This section gives us the views of certain Māṇḍūkeyas. The Māṇḍūkeyas occur in Rgveda Prātiśākhya, § 200, and in the Purāṇa tradition (Weber, Ind. Stud., II, 100 sq.; III, 253). Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, p. 12, has revived the theory that certain of the Khilas represent parts of their Saṃhitā, but cf. Oldenberg's review, Gött. gel. Anz., 1907, pp. 218 sq., and my review, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 226 sq. The word Upaniṣad in this section clearly means 'secret doctrine'. This is certainly the earliest sense of the word (derived, no doubt, from teaching in the forest, which was done for the sake of secrecy, cf. Introd., p. 15). I cannot accept Deussen's view (Philosophie der Upanishads, pp. 13 sq.) that the earliest sense was 'secret word' (a case like tajjalāu, &c.), then 'secret text', then 'secret sense' of a ritual action. The earliest sense may well have been 'secret meaning' of a ritual action, whence it seems to me the other meanings are very easily derived. Deussen's theory is bound up with his view of the Kṣatriyas as propounders of a secret lore, as to which cf. Introd., pp. 50 sq.; III, 2, 6, n. 11. I agree with Deussen, however, and with Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 208, n.) in rejecting Oldenberg's view (Z. D. M. G., L, 458 sq.) of Upaniṣad as upāsana. See, however, also Z. D. M. G., L1V, 70 sq., and Max Müller's view in 1869, Rgveda Prātiśākhya, p. iv; Hopkins, Rel. of India, p. 218.

A muddled version of this section occurs in the Rgveda Prātiśākhya, I, 2; 3: Māṇḍūkeyaḥ saṃhitāṇi vāyuna āha tatkhāṇaṇi cāsyā Māṇḍūkeya eva | samānatām anile cāmbare ca matvā-gastyo 'viparihāraṇi tad eva || 2 || adhyūtmakṛtān Śūravīrah sūtās⁸ ca vāhmanasor vivadanty ānupūrye | sander vīvarāṇaṇi nirbhujāṇi vadanti śaundhāḥkāraccāraṇaṇi ca pratrṇṇam || 3 || See Max Müller, pp. iii-vi. The Śāṅkhāyana has, VII, 2, an attempt at an improved version, reading in one MS. parihvṛtaḥ in both cases. Böhtlingk, in the smaller Dict., I, 130, renders aviparihṛta as 'identical', but this makes no sense. The reference in the Prātiśākhya is of course valuable as giving Śaunaka's date as a terminus ad quem for the lowest date of the Āraṇyaka.

Every man is egg-like,² there are two halves, they say;³ this is the earth, this is the heaven, and between them is the ether, just as there is the ether between earth and heaven. In this ether⁴ the breath is fixed, as is the air in that ether.

reference is too far-fetched to be worth consideration—indeed such comparisons hinder rather than aid progress. The evidence of the Vāyu Purāṇa is worthless. Identifications are easy and obvious, and we cannot tell that we have a piece of tradition at all. The fact that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa does follow the rule of Śākalya (Pāṇini, VI, 1, 128), that ā before r becomes a and that a may remain, cannot prove that Śākalya is prior to it: the reverse may be the case. As Geldner admits, the RV.—and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is in the same position—do not follow his rule (VI, 1, 127) as to ī ā before dissimilar vowels, and we are left with grave doubts whether Geldner's view that Śākalya was merely to Pāṇini the author of the padapāṭha and author of the Prātisākhya is sound. The fact therefore remains that when Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 46, recognizes bhavāsi ūtibhiḥ as the pronunciation, it cannot have before it Śākalya's text, unless we admit (which is too bold) that the Samhitā is later than Śākalya. I prefer, therefore, Oldenberg's date of Śākalya, and I would lay stress on the fact that in the Āranyaka he is Sthavira Śākalya,⁵ in the Brāhmaṇa Vidagdha. These names are too distinct to permit of identification. The Śākalya of the Prātisākhya is likewise Sthavira and must be the same as the man here.⁶

³ 'They say' can hardly refer to the following words, as Max Müller takes it, though this is partly supported by the last words of the section.

⁴ Tasmin hasmin is certainly curious. The Śāṅkhāyana parallel, VII, 3, is a correction and throws no light. The MS. evidence is strong and Ānandatīrtha renders it as tasmin ha asmin. Perhaps smīn stands for asmin (cf. Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 24) and ha is the particle. No root or base ha exists from which hasmin could naturally be formed. Sāyaṇa ignores the point, and may possibly have read tasminn asmin as does Rājendralāla, but this is unlikely. The correction hāsmīn leaves the error unexplained. It is to be noted that in the Śunaḥśepa legend, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 13, the MSS. read: iti ha smā ākhyōya, which Aufrecht keeps in the text and gives (p. 431) as one of the grammatical errors of the Brāhmaṇa. The parallel Śāṅkhāyana text has merely iti. Böhlingk in his *Chrestomathie*², p. 351, and Sächs. Ber., 1900, p. 418, amends to hāsmā and claims that Sāyaṇa bears this out. But Sāyaṇa's note while showing that he took smā as equivalent to asmāi is not conclusive, though it tends to show that he had āsmā(i) before him, just as he seems to have read tasminn asmin here, but arguments from his silence are dangerous. He ignores imasmāi in II, 3, 7. I do not think it impossible that this smīn and the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa's smā are parallel phenomena of an attempted simplification of ⁵ It is true Sthavira does not occur in III, 1, 2, but I do not think it is reasonable to take the Śākalya of that passage as different from him of III, 2, 1; 6, as does e.g. Weber, Indian Literature, p. 50.

⁶ On him see Max Müller, Rigveda Prātisākhya, pp. 7 sq.

Just as there are those three lights in heaven, so there are these three lights in man. As there is in heaven the sun, so there is the eye in the head. As there is in the sky the lightning, so there is the heart in the body. As there is the fire in earth, so there is the seed in the member. Having thus represented the whole world as the self, he said, 'This is the symbol of the earth, this of the heaven.' He who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days.¹

3. Then come the reciters¹ of the Nirbhujā. The Nirbhujā dwells on earth, the Pratr̥ṇṇa in heaven, the Ubhayamantareṇa in the sky. Then if one should rebuke him who recites the Nirbhujā, he should reply, 'Thou hast fallen from the two lower places.'² If one should rebuke him who recites the Pratr̥ṇṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast fallen from the two upper places.' But there is no rebuking him who repeats the Ubhayamantareṇa.³ For when he unites the words, that is the Nirbhujā form;⁴ when he pronounces the two syllables pure, that is the Pratr̥ṇṇa form. This is the first. By the Ubhayamantareṇa both are fulfilled.

the forms of the base a. Possibly the production of such forms may be due to the analogy of sāmin (RV.), and cf. sasmāt (Chāndogya Upaniṣad); Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 495 fin. See, however, also Böhtlingk's remarks in his Grammat. Absonderlichkeiten im Aitareya-brāhmaṇa, Leipzig, 1900, where he regards the irregularities noted by Aufrecht, I. c., as due to misreadings of the text, and I fully recognize that undue reverence to such texts is absurd. On the other hand old forms do disappear, and cf. perhaps the use of tmā and tmānam, Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, VI, 7; II, 6, and the Vedic imanā (Pāṇini, VI, 4, 141; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 61). There is also the elision of a in nasi, Mantrapāṭha, I, 13, 9 (= Hiranyakeśi Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 16, 3), see Winternitz's edition, I, xxvii; Wackernagel, I, 318.

² Or recitations of. The Nirbhujā is the Samhitā, the Pratr̥ṇṇa the Pada, and Ubhayamantareṇa the Krama Pāṭha. Max Müller (see his R̥gveda Prātīkhyā, p. iii, and Nachträge, p. ii) first pointed out the importance of this passage. Cf. also Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 146 sq.; Prolegomena, p. 380; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, p. 51. It is summarized in Prātīkhyā, I, 4; see my Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 45, n. 3; III, 1, 2, n. 8.

³ Acyoṣṭhāntarābhyaṃ is clearly a case of irregular Sandhi, cf. Atharvaveda, IX, 1, 1: pr̥thivyāntarīkṣāt; III, 2, 4, n. 11; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 316, 317; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, pp. 64, 65; J. A. O. S., XXV, 99-102.

⁵ Sāyaṇa explains nirdiṣṭau bhujasadyau pūrvottaratadca yasmin. Max Müller thinks it may refer to the arms of the words being cut off, as it were, or with two arms stretched out, the two words forming, as it were, two arms to one body. In the following acyoṣṭhāḥ is clearly the reading, though S and R in the commentary vary, reading acyoṣṭhā and acyoṣṭha. The Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 8, has the correct form.

He who desires proper food should recite the Nirbhujā, he who desires heaven should recite the Pratr̥ṇṇa, and he who desires both should recite the Ubhaya-mantareṇa. Then if another should rebuke him who recites the Nirbhujā, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended the earth, the deity. The earth, the deity, will strike thee.' If another should rebuke him who recites the Pratr̥ṇṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended heaven, the deity. The heaven, the deity, will strike thee.' If another should rebuke him who recites the Ubhaya-mantareṇa, he should reply, 'Thou hast offended the sky, the deity. The sky, the deity, will strike thee.' Whatever he says to him¹ or says in reply to him, that shall assuredly be fulfilled. But to a Brahmin one must not say anything save what is auspicious. Only in exceeding² prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin. 'Not even in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin, let Brahmins be honoured,' so says Śūravira Māṇḍūkeya.

4. Then come the imprecations.³ Let him know that breath⁴ is the beam. If any one rebuke him who has become breath as the beam, then if he thinks himself strong,⁵ he says, 'I have grasped the beam, breath; thou canst not overcome me who grasp the beam, breath.' Let him then say, 'The beam, breath,

² Sāyaṇa takes this as permitting a curse on a Brahmin in the case of great wealth (such wealth being sinful). Ānandatīrtha denies this, and carries on the negative. Thus Śūravira's dictum confirms this. This is less probable. Max Müller accepts Sāyaṇa's view that the man is to say, 'Let them be known to Brahmins.' It is simpler to take it as in the text. For na-cana, cf. V, 3, 3; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 544 sq.; Channing, J. A. O. S., XIII, xviii; Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa, II, 77 (J. A. O. S., XV, 240): na te śarīrāṇi cana gṛhaṃ prāpsyanti, and Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, IV, 14, 5. The rule that na precedes seems true for the Brāhmaṇa prose.

The two accns. with √brū (for brū, cf. Bloomfield, A. J. P., V, 180; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 182; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 36) are said by Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 174; cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, p. 8; Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, p. 265) not to be found in the Brāhmaṇa language, which this passage disproves. Brū is expressly mentioned as governing two accusatives in the Kārikā cited by the Kāśikā Vṛtti on Pāṇini, I, 4, 51, where a much more marked case than that here (where the second acc. is merely a pronoun) is adduced, viz. mānavakaṃ dharmam brūte.

will forsake thee.' But if he thinks himself weak, he should say to him, 'Thou hast not been able to overcome he who have been fain⁴ to grasp the beam, breath. Breath, the beam, will forsake thee.' Whatever he says to him or says in reply to him, that shall assuredly be fulfilled. But to a Brahmin one must not say anything except what is auspicious. Only in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin. 'Not even in exceeding prosperity may one say ill to a Brahmin, let Brahmins be honoured,' so says Śūravira Māṇḍūkeya.⁵

5. Now the reciters of the Nirbhujā say, 'The former syllable is the former half, the latter the latter half. The space between the former half and the latter half is the union.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. Now Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya says, 'We that recite the Nirbhujā say that the former syllable is the former half and the latter syllable the latter half, but that the union¹ is the space between the former and latter halves in so far as thereby one produces the union and distinguishes accented and unaccented and separates the mora and what is not.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days. Now his son, however, quite regular, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 268; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 208 and 99. Cf. also the idiom kr̥ṣṇo (&c.) rūpaṃ kr̥ (Taittirīya Saṃhitā, V, 2, 6, 5; VI, 1, 3, 1; 6, 5; 2, 4, 1; 4; 7, 1; VII, 1, 6, 2; 3; 4; Brāhmaṇa, I, 1, 3, 3; Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 35, see Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 111). The construction with the nom. (cf. Delbrück, Vedische Syntax, pp. 104 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 33) is no doubt rare in later Sanskrit, but I have found it in an independent passage in Ānandatīrtha, and the analogous use of the gerund is found in the Rāmāyaṇa, &c. Cf. the curious phrase, Manu, VIII, 91: eko 'ham asmīty ātmānam-manyase. Chaknuvaṃ in Rājendralāla is merely an assimilated n altered into anuvāra. The error of B in reading chaknuvantam shows how little dependence can be put on this MS. As to āha, cf. III, 2, 4, n. 10. Enam is here in apposition to prāṇam, but I agree with Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 136, that the strict rule (Böhtlingk, Z. D. M. G., XLI, 182) cannot be proved for Vedic or Sanskrit.

⁴ Samadhīṣṭam is of course the aorist indic. of the desiderative of the root dā. Max Müller translates samadhīṣṭantam as a participle, but this is impossible. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1035 a, Roots, &c., p. 249, J. A. O. S., XIII, lxx.

⁵ These curses are just intelligible, but the curses in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VII, 8 and 9 offer serious difficulties. As the text stands the first case is that of rebuking another, when if strong the rebuker (this must be the subject) says to the other, 'Thou hast grasped the breath or beam but canst not overcome me who am fain;' if weak, he says, 'Thou hast sought to grasp, but couldst not.' In the second case the sense must be (reading paraṇ or making param mean the subject of the main clause) the man who holds that prāṇa is vaṃśa says to his rebuker, 'I have been fain to grasp the beam, breath, thou canst not overcome one who is fain,' if the rebuker is strong. If not, he says, 'Thou hast sought to grasp, but couldst not.' Other renderings are quite possible and the text can be altered (e.g. read samadhāṃ in VII, 8), but it is not possible to be certain of the sense; see my trans., pp. 44-46.

Madhyama, his son by his wife Prātibodhī,² says, 'One pronounces these syllables by their letters, neither separating entirely nor uniting absolutely,' and the mora which is between the former and latter halves and indicates the union is the sliding. I consider therefore the sliding to be the union.' A Ṛṣi says this also (RV., II, 23, 16), 'O Brhaspati, they know nought higher than the sliding.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives all his days.

6. Tārūkṣya¹ says, 'The union is formed by the Brhat and Rathantara Sāmans. The Rathantara is speech, the Brhat breath.' By these two, speech and breath, the ² Metronymics like this were inevitable where polygamy was possible. They do not prove matriarchy or anything similar. A similar instance is the famous Kṛṣṇa Devakīputra of Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 17 (not 7 as in Max Müller), 6, who is the subject of an interesting discussion in Garbe's translation of the Bhagavadgītā, and cf. J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 976 sq.; 1908, p. 173, n. See also Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 169. A child sometimes, if illegitimate, was named after its mother, e. g. Satyakāma Jābāla, Chāndogya Upaniṣad, IV, 4. For a long list of metronymics of a curious character see Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, VI, 4, 30-32. The reading of B is a mere error in an inaccurate MS. Max Müller suggests Prātibodhī as the correct form, and this seems the form in the Śāṅkhāyana. For the i, cf. however Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 75. Prātibodha is a recognized name in the Gaṇa vidādī. For other metronymics, cf. Fleet, J. R. A. S., 1905, pp. 637, 638; Hopkins, J. A. O. S., XIII, 105, 370, n.; for a discussion of matriarchy as affecting the Aryan Hellenes, see Farnell, Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 70 sq., and reff.

³ The reading is clearly anekikurvan. Eki kurvan is an easy but bad blunder. Sāyana explains that you must not (1) pronounce tava it as tava + it, nor (2) as tavat, but (3) as tavat. This cannot be meant. It is really intended that you should pronounce so as to give a sound of ai together. Compare the fact that in the so-called elision of Latin both elements were distinctly preserved in pronunciation (cf. Lindsay, Latin Language, p. 144), as in modern Spanish. Cf. also Deussen, Sechzig Upanishads, p. 215. This passage is of particular interest as confirming the notice in the Ṛgveda Prātiśākhya, III, 8 (200) (Max Müller's edit., p. lxx) that Māṇḍukeya laid down the use of the circumflex in the Praśiṣṭa Sandhi (e. g. a + i, &c.) as well as in the Abhinibhita Sandhi (e or o + a), and the exceptional cases of i + i, in which the circumflex is regularly laid down, and the fact that the a is not merely elided generally recognized by the Prātiśākhya (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 324; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 104). So Pāṇini, VIII, 2, 6, has svarito vānūdātte padādau, and see Wackernagel, I, 292, 293; Macdonell, p. 104. The requirement of the circumflex is only intelligible on the anekikurvan theory.

The form anekikurvan is interesting. Eki + √kr is found in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1093, and contrast III, 2, 3: aikyā bhāvayan; ekibhū occurs in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, IV, 4, 2 in the sense of dying, and cf. Maitreya Upaniṣad (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xlvi) tama ekibhāvati parasmīn; cf. also Jacob, Concordance, p. 268. For RV., II, 23, 16, cf. Geldner, Vedische Studien, III, 68.

union is made.' Tāruṣya guards³ (his teacher's) cows for a year for the sake of this Upaniṣad. For it alone does Tāruṣya guard the cows for a year. A Rṣi says (RV., X, 181, 1; 2), 'Vasiṣṭha bore hither the Rathantara, Bharadvāja carried hither the Bṛhat of Agni.'⁴ He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days. Kauṇṭharavya says, 'Speech is united with breath, breath with the blowing air, the air with the All-gods, the All-gods with the world of heaven, the world of heaven with brahman. This is the gradual union.' He, who knows this gradual union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven, just as does this union. If he for the sake of another or for his own sake recites (the union) let him know as he is about to recite,⁵ that this union has gone up to heaven, ³ This is a quaint piece of human nature. There are plenty of parallels, cf. Chāndogya Upaniṣad, IV, 4. The omission of the second sentence in B is clearly a slip, showing how untrustworthy is the MS. when uncorroborated. For the nimittasaptamī, cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 3, 2; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 77, 4; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 92; Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 33, n.) finds such a loc. in RV., I, 6, 9: sām asminn ṛjāte girāḥ. Raksayate is a hist. pres. The middle here gives clearly the idea of personal interest (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 166 b; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 236 sq.). For the hist. pres. cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 302; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 172; Sanskrit Syntax, § 327; Brugmann, Griech. Gramm., § 156, and especially his paper, Berichte der Königl. sächs. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften, 1883, pp. 169 sq.; Giles, Comp. Phil., § 547. The present tense essentially denotes what is continuous or progressive (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammar, pp. 62, 63) as opposed to the momentary, and that whether the verb has the sense of an action or a state. The historic use with a particle of time is Homeric, but not the simple historic present, though it is found in the earliest Latin (e.g. the epitaph of Lucius Cornelius Scipio (B.C. 298), cepit, subigit omne(m) Loucanam opsidesque abducit) and must be Indo-European.

The acc. of time is common, see Introd., p. 56; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 170, 171; Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, pp. 175 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 28; Hopkins, A. J. P., XXIV, 7.

⁴ These Sāmāns are required to accompany the important Pravargya. Cf. my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 48, n. 6.

and that so it will be with those who know it (and become) gods. So will it come to pass. He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days. Pañcālacaṇḍa * says, 'The union is speech.' 'By speech are the Vedas composed, by speech the metres. By speech friends are united, by speech all beings, therefore is speech all this.' Now⁷ when one repeats or speaks, breath is in speech, speech then swallows breath. When one is silent or in sleep, speech is in breath, breath then swallows speech. They swallow each other. Speech indeed is the mother, breath the son. A Ṛṣi says (RV., X, 119, 4), 'There is one bird,⁸ he enters the sky; he sees this whole world; with ripe mind I beheld him nigh at hand; the mother absorbs him, and he the mother.' He, who thus knows this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven. He lives out all his days.

rare. The form abhihāryate in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (= abhihāryati) may be explained perhaps by the cases of irregular lengthening above, and by the (Epic) use of middle terminations for active (J. A. O. S., XXV, 132), rather than as a causative passive as in the Diett. In Atharvaveda, XVIII, 2, 58 the editions both read vidhakṣān and the pseudo-Sāyaṇa apparently so read, though he renders by ichan, but the parallel passages, RV., X, 16, 7 and Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, VI, 1, 4, have both the correct vidhakṣyān (Whitney, Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 846), and the accent proves clearly that vidhakṣān is incorrect. Macdonell (Vedic Grammar, p. 57, n. 1) suggests that in the case of yokṣe, vidhakṣān, sākṣe, mekṣāmi, the y has dropped phonetically; cf. J. A. O. S., XXV, 142.

śaśvat tathā syāt might of course mean, 'may it ever endure' (as taken by Max Müller), but the usual use of the phrase in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa supports the rendering above adopted, e. g. II, 21, 2: ya enaṃ tatra brūyād vācā vajreṇa yajamānasya prāṇān vyagāt prāṇa enaṃ hāryati śaśvat tathā syāt; 22, 3; 28, 3; 5; 29, 7; IV, 7, 7; VI, 13, 13; 26, 6; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 342, n. 1 (for the construction with īvara there mentioned, cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8). Eggeling on Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 3, 2 (S. B. E., XLI, 98, n. 2), now adopts 'wohl' as the regular equivalent of śaśvat at any rate in the Brāhmaṇas, and see also Oertel's note on Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 54, 3. Sāyaṇa takes vidyāt as a part of the protasis. In any case the sense is very much the same.

sa or sa yadi is of course not a particle but the demonstrative. The cases in which Max Müller (S. B. E., XV, 110, n. 7, on Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 7) and Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 215, 216), following the St. Petersburg Dict., find sa as a particle are merely instances of an ordinary anacoluthon, and do not prove that sa was ever felt as a particle. Precisely the same idiom is common in early English, and no one there thinks of 'he' as a particle, see Kellner, English Syntax, pp. 68 sq. Correct Caland, Ueber des Rīt. Sūtra des Bandhāyana, p. 46.

* Pañcālacaṇḍa must mean Caṇḍa (no doubt Prākṛit for Candra, cf. Atharvaveda, II, 14, 1 (Cāṇḍa)) of the Pañcālas, as Sāyaṇa takes it. The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 23, knows a king, Dūrmukha Pāncāla.

Then comes the Prajāpati union.⁹ The first half is the wife, the latter half is the husband. The union is the son. The act of union is the begetting. This union is Aditi. For Aditi is all whatever there is, father, mother, child, and begetting. A R̥ṣi¹⁰ says this also (RV., I, 89, 10), 'Aditi is mother, is father, is son.' He, who knows thus this union, obtains children, cattle, fame, glory, and the world of heaven.¹¹ He lives out all his days.

Sthavira Śākalya says that breath is a beam,¹ and that as the other beams rest on the main beam of the house, the eye, the ear, the mind, the speech, the senses,

The use of the pass. part. with or without copula (Introd., pp. 64, 65) is significant. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 394, 395), followed by Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 176), regards the use as corresponding both to imperf. and aor., but while of course it is dangerous to dogmatize on matters which ultimately depend on a delicate analysis of a language so remote as Vedic Sanskrit, it seems to me that there is a very clear distinction between (1) the aor., the tense of which has just happened; (2) the imperf., the tense of narration; the body, the whole self, rests on this breath. 'Of this self the truth is like the sibilants, the bones the mutes, the marrow the vowels, and flesh and blood, the fourth part,¹ the semi-vowels,' so says Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya. We have,² however, learned that the number was three. Of those three, bones, marrow, and joints, there are three hundred and sixty (parts) on this side and on that side. These make up seven hundred and twenty. Seven hundred and twenty are the days and nights of the year. This self³ then, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, is like the days in number.⁴ He, who knows thus this self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, as like the days, obtains union, likeness, and nearness to the days,⁵ becomes rich in sons and cattle, and lives out all his days.

2. Then comes Kauṇṭharavya. There are three hundred and sixty syllables,¹ three hundred and sixty sibilants, three hundred and sixty unions. What we have called syllables are the days; what we have called sibilants are the nights; what we have called unions are the junctions of the nights and days. So far as regards and (3) these forms with participles which express a completed action whose results persist into the present. Of course many actions can be regarded from either point of view and be differently described, but that is not to say that the effect is not different when different forms are used. To take some of Delbrück's instances, RV., I, 81, 5: ná tvāṁśā Indra kśá cand ná jātá ná janisyate, the sense is not either 'was born' (imperf.) or 'has just been born' (aor.), but 'exists, having been born', in Taittirīya Samhitā, II, 6, 9, 3: té devā aviduḥ prācyuto vai páratāt sómá 'tha ná gachati gandharvā vai páry amogīsur iti, which Delbrück gives as a case of the part. corresponding to an aor., the sense is clearly different between the continuing absence of the Soma and the one definite past act of the Gandharvas in stealing it. The real tendency of the Mantra and Brāhmaṇa is to assimilate the part. to a present, though, as is the case with all the expressions of past time in the Mantras, occasionally it may have a narrative sense (e.g. RV., III, 48, 22: Pśinyā dugdhām sakṣi páyāḥ). The present sense—yet with the past action—is very clearly seen in cases like Bṛhaddevatā, VIII, 47: prathamāyām ŗci stutāḥ ŗrdharce dyauḥ ca bhūmī ca Atvinau cottare tataḥ || It is not stūyante, for the actual praising is over (astant is regularly used of the Ṛṣi), and yet it does not mean 'were praised'.

² This view is apparently Śākalya's (Sāyana), the first three being his, to which Māṇḍūkeya adds a fourth. The threefold view, with ghoṣa for svara, vyañjana for sparsa, is found in II, 2, 4, where the difference of terms denotes a difference in dates.

⁴ The symbolism of the year is common in all religions, cf., e.g., Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, IV, 284, 285.

the gods. Now as regards the self. The syllables which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self bones; the sibilants which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self marrow; the marrow is indeed the real breath, for it is seed, and without breath seed is not effused. Or if it is effused without breath, it will decay and will not produce. The unions which we have explained with reference to the gods are with reference to the self joints. Of these three,² bones, marrow, and joints, there are five hundred and forty parts on this side and on that. They make one thousand and eighty, and one thousand and eighty³ are the rays of the sun. They make the byhafi verses and this day. Thus the self⁴ which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech is like the syllables in number. He, who knows thus this self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, as like the syllables, obtains union, likeness, and nearness to the syllables, becomes rich in sons and cattle, and lives out all his days.

3. Bādhva¹ says, 'There are four persons, the person of the body, the person of the metres, the person of the Veda, and the great person. That which we have called the person of the body is the corporeal self. Its essence is the incorporeal conscious self. That which we have called the person of the metres is the collection of letters. Its essence is the letter 'a'.² That which we have called the person of the Veda is that by which one knows the Vedas, Ṛgveda, Yajurveda, and Sāmaveda. Its essence is the Brahman priest. Therefore should one choose a Brahman³ priest who is full of brahman and can discern flaws

It is curious, as S points out, that no comment is made on the similar passage in III, 2, 1. For *Kaunṭha*⁵, cf. the Dhātupāṭha root kuṇṭh which Franke (Vienna Orient. Journ., VIII, 323) compares with Greek κυνός, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 170. The name seems not to occur elsewhere, except in the parallel passage in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VIII, 2.

² The words inserted by B are quite out of place here, and show how little that MS. can be relied upon. For majjhāni, cf. Atharvaveda, II, 12, 7; Roth, Z. D. M. G., XLVIII, 102. For the construction, cf. Baudhāyana Dharma Sūtra, II, 17, 11, 37; J. R. A. S., 1909: contra Böhtlingk, Sächs. Ber., 1892, p. 197.

⁴ Viṣṇu according to Ānandatīrtha, who has considerable difficulty in working out the details of his interpretation here.

² Cf. II, 3, 6. The precision in the use of the aorist is to be noted, cf. Introd., p. 60.

in the sacrifice. That which we have called the great person is the year which causes some things to fall together⁴ and others to grow up. Its essence is the sun. Let one know⁵ that the incorporeal conscious self and the sun are the same. Therefore the sun appears to each and every man. A Ṛṣi says (RV., I, 115, 1), 'The bright face of the gods hath arisen, the eye of Mitra, Varuṇa, and Agni.

the Atharvaveda) as the Atharvan texts always try to make out (see Bloomfield, S. B. E., XLVI, lviii sq.; Atharvaveda, pp. 32 sq.; Macdonell, Sanskrit Literature, pp. 193 sq.). Kurvīta yo-polyet is quite a clear instance of a clause of characteristic, 'such a priest as can see.' In these cases the force is slightly different from two other senses of the same origin, purpose, and result. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, p. 339) states that clauses of purpose cannot be found in prose, but quotes Atharvaveda, VIII, 10, 9: iyām evā tād veda yād ubhāya upajivema; Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 1, 13: nā vāi sā manusyēṣu Agnē yajānyā tanūr asti yajeyīvā-smākam ekah ryād iti, which resemble in essentials this passage. The usage is perhaps more clearly developed in Latin⁶, but it is wrong to say (as do Allen and Greenough, Latin Grammar, p. 343) that the clause of characteristic is a development peculiar to Latin, and it is doubtful whether the use is to be traced to a definitely conditional origin and not rather derived directly from the opt. meaning as a weak future (Goodwin, Greek Moods and Tenses, pp. 376 sq.) or as expressing supposition (cf. Monro, Homeric Grammar, pp. 290 sq., and p. 276, 'The opt. with κεν is especially common after a principal Clause of negative meaning (in which case the consequence is necessarily matter of mere supposition): as—Il. 5, 192 ἔπειτα δ' οὐ παύσασι καὶ ἄρματα τῶν κ' ἐπιβαίην, &c. The pure opt. occurs in Il. 22, 348: οὐκ ἔσθ' ὅς . . ἀπαλάλκοι.' To derive such a sense from an opt. of wish (Delbrück's old theory, Synt. Forsch., I, 13, modified in Synt. Forsch., IV, 115, Altindische Syntax, p. 302) seems quite impossible. The use as a mild imperative is easily derived from a weak future or supposition, and the use as an interrogative follows naturally (cf. Intro., pp. 62, 63). For the indefinite use, cf. III, 2, 1, n. 1, and Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 17; IV, 3, 32, &c.

For brahmisthāni (which as brāhmisthā occurs already in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā), cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 468 c. The formation is of course obviously secondary.

It hath filled heaven and earth and the sky. The sun is the self of all that stands and moves.' This I regard as the regular⁶ Samhitā as composed, thus says Bādhva. For the Bahvṛcas consider him in the great hymn, the Adhvaryus in the fire, the Chandogas in the Mahāvratā rite. They see him in this earth, in heaven, in the air, in the ether, in the waters, in plants, in trees, in the moon, in the constellations, in all beings. Him they call brahman. The self which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, is like the year in number. He,⁷ who recites to another the self, which consists of sight, hearing, metre, mind, and speech, and is like the year,

4. To him the Vedas yield no milk; he has no part in what his teacher has taught him. He knows not the path of virtue. A Ṛṣi says this also (RV., X, 71, 6), 'He who forsakes the friend who knows his friends,' in speech he has no part. What he hears, he hears in vain, he knows not the path of virtue.' This means that he has no part in what he has studied and that he does not know the path of virtue. So a man who knows this should not² lay the fire for another, nor sing the Sāmāns of the Mahāvratā for another, nor recite the Śāstras of that day for another. Only³ may he recite for a father or a teacher, for that is done for oneself. We have said⁴ that this incorporeal conscious self and that sun are one and the same. Where these two are separated,⁵ the sun is seen like the moon,⁶ its rays do not manifest themselves,

² i.e. act as Adhvaryu, Udgātṛ or Hotṛ priest. It is impossible to square the total prohibition here with V, 1, 5, which (see n. 5) contemplates a breach of the rule, but it agrees with the opinion of 'some' (eke) in V, 3, 3, see n. 1 on that passage.

the sky is red like madder, the wind is not retained, his head smells like a raven's nest, and a man should know that his self⁷ is gone and that he will not have long to live. Let him do then whatever he considers must be done, and recite seven verses beginning, 'What is near, what is far' (RV., IX, 67, 21-27), the single verse, 'Of the ancient seed' (RV., VIII, 6, 30), six verses beginning, 'Where purifying Brahman' (RV., IX, 113, 6-11), and the single verse, 'We from the darkness' (RV., I, 50, 10). Next when the sun is seen pierced, and looks like the nave of a cart-wheel, or he sees his shadow pierced, let him know that this is so. Next when he sees himself in a mirror or in the water with a crooked head⁸ or without a head, or when his pupils are seen inverted⁹ or crooked, let him know that this is so. Next let him cover his eyes and look; then threads¹⁰ are seen as if falling together. If he sees them not, let him

Atharvaveda, pp. 82 sq.; Kauśika Sūtra, XIII, and Adbhuta Brāhmaṇa; Aufrecht's idea (Z. D. M. G., XXXIII, 573) that the passage is not in place is disproved by the parallel in the Śāṅkhāyana, VIII, 6 and 7; XI, 3 and 4.

Cases of conditional sentences without particles are of course very frequent in Vedic as know that this is so. Next let him cover his ears and listen, then there is a sound as of a burning fire or of a chariot. If he does not hear that sound, let him know that this is so. Next when the fire appears blue like the neck of a peacock,¹¹ or when he sees lightning in a cloudless sky, or no lightning in a cloudy sky, or in a great cloud sees bright rays as it were, let him know that it is so. Next when he sees the ground as though burning, let him know that this is so. So far as regards the visible signs. Then come the dreams,¹² He sees a black man with black teeth, he kills him; a boar kills him; a monkey jumps on him; the wind carries him swiftly along; having swallowed gold he spits it out; he eats honey; he chews stalks; he carries a single¹³ lotus; in other languages. Cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 284; Sanskrit Syntax, § 487; Aufrecht, Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 431; my note, J. R. A. S., 1909.

The Maitreya Upaniṣad (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, xlv) has a passage which may be reminiscent of this text: agnir vaiśvānaro . . . tasyaiṣa ghoṣo bhavati yam (wrong reading ? yad) etat karnāv apidhāya śṛṇoti so yadotkramisyam bhavati nainam ghoṣam śṛṇoti.

For upabaddi, infra, which denotes literally the noise of going and is particularly in place here, cf. Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 9, 3; Jaiminiya Brāhmaṇa, I, 253; Jaiminiya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 37, 3, with Oertel's note; RV., I, 74, 7, with Oldenberg's note (S. B. E., XLVI, 94); Schmidt, K. Z., XXV, 55. Scheftelowitz (Zur Stammbildung in den indo-germanischen Sprachen, § 9) compares RV., IX, 77, 4: urubhā, which he considers as going back to IG. pagō, cf. Greek πηγή. The construction above dṛṣyate and abhihīyeta in parallel uses, and below dṛṣyate-pātyen-na pātyen-pātyeta, are decidedly curious (cf. Introd., p. 63). The temptation to amend to dṛṣyeta is very strong, and on the whole I incline to think that it would be dangerous to insist on these examples. The case of upekṣeta—dṛṣyante differs, for the two verbs are not parallel. The first is an instruction, the second expresses categorically the result (and dṛṣyante may have helped to bring about the incorrect dṛṣyate). In III, 1, 4, where upavadei and āha occur, the āha is very strange, and one would like to take lakṣaṇīyā āha—hāsyati as two sentences both dependent on brūyāt. There is, however, the real difficulty that ā—hā would be a strange combination, and the division of the sentences is also curious, though no more curious than the āha. I suspect some corruption of the text. Sāyaṇa renders differently. He takes the whole as one Mantra and supplies bhavān as a subject for āha, and so in the next sentence he interpolates bhavān āha in sense. In the numerous passages in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa which are more or less parallel (see the ref. cited in III, 1, 6, n. 5), no such āha occurs, and hāsyati has no prefix. But probably ā—hāsyati must go together. Āha might, of course, be taken as a first person and made part of the quotation (cf. Speijer, § 178), but this is not likely, and for the indef. opt., cf. III, 2, 1, n. 1.

he drives with a team of asses and¹⁴ boars; wearing a wreath of red flowers, he drives a black cow with a black calf towards the south.¹⁵ If he sees any of these, he should fast and cook a pot of milk, and offer it, reciting a verse of the Rātri hymn (RV., X, 127, 16) to each oblation, and having fed the Brahmins with other food,¹⁶ himself eat the oblation. Let him know that the person within all beings who is not heard,¹⁷ not reached, not thought, not subdued, not seen, not understood, not classified, but who hears, thinks, sees, classifies, sounds, understands, and knows is his own self.¹⁸

5. Now comes this Upaniṣad of the whole speech. All these indeed are Upaniṣads of the whole speech, but this they so call. The mutes are the earth, the sibilants the sky, the vowels heaven. The mutes are fire, the sibilants air, the vowels the sun. The mutes are the Ṛgveda, the sibilants the Yajurveda, the vowels the Sāmaveda. The mutes are the eye, the sibilants the ear, the vowels the mind. The mutes are the up-breathing, the sibilants the down-breathing, the vowels the back-breathing. Then comes this divine lute.¹ The

human lute is an imitation of it. As there is a head of this, so there is a head of that; as there is a stomach of this, so there is a cavity of that; as this has a tongue, so that has a tongue; as this has fingers,² so that has strings; as this has vowels, so that has tones; as this has consonants, so that has touches; as this is endowed with sounds and firmly strung, so that is endowed with sounds and firmly strung; as this is covered with a hairy skin, so that is covered with a hairy skin. For in former times they covered lutes with a hairy skin. He, who knows this divine lute, is heard when he speaks, his fame fills the earth, and wherever they³ speak Aryan tongues, there is he known. Then comes the essence of speech. When a man reciting⁴ or speaking at an assembly gives not pleasure, let him recite this verse, 'May the she-ichneumon, that rules all speech, who is covered as it were⁵ by the lips, surrounded by teeth, the thunderbolt, cause me to speak well here.' This is the essence of speech.

² The words anṅulayāḥ and tantrayaḥ seem to have been transposed in the original; they are in correct order in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VIII, 7. Somewhat analogous is the transposition of jaṇā jarāyu in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VI, 6, 2, 15, on which see Eggeling's note (S. B. E., XLVI, 255). Cf. also Brhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, III, 1, 4 with Max Müller's note (S. B. E., XV, 122), and my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 55, n. 3.

³ The expression āryā vācaḥ was not understood by the commentators (and in the Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VIII, 9, we find that it has become āryā vāg vadati), who take āryāḥ as nominative and render it vedalāstrapāram gatāḥ. This is a clear sign of considerable antiquity, and the expression may also be cited as an early piece of evidence for the existence of several dialects of the early Indian language, which we know must have existed; see I, 5, 2, n. 19; Oertel, A. J. P., XX, 447 on daivī, and Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, XIV, 5. For the word ārya, cf. Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 214; Pischel, Z. D. M. G., XL, 125; Geldner (Vedische Studien, III, 96, 97) insists that ārya cannot mean 'the Aryan' which is represented by ārya. Oldenberg (see index to S. B. E., XLVI) still adopts the equation Ārya = Aryan.

6. Now Kṛṣṇahārta¹ proclaims this Brāhmaṇa² as it were regarding speech to him.³ Prajāpati, the year,⁴ after creating creatures, burst. He put himself together by the metres. Because he put himself together by means of the metres, therefore is it the Saṃhitā. Of that Saṃhitā the letter ṛ is the strength, the letter ṣ the breath, the self. He who knows the verses in the Saṃhitā and⁵ the letters ṛ and ṣ, he knows the Saṃhitā with its breath and its strength. Let him know that this is lifegiving.⁶ If he is in doubt⁷ whether to say it with an ṛ or without an ṛ, let him say it with an ṛ. If he is in doubt whether to say it with an ṣ or without an ṣ, let him say it with an ṣ. Hrasva Māṇḍūkeya says, 'If we repeat the verses according to the Saṃhitā, and if we say the teaching⁸ of must be taken that the she-ichneumon is a synonym for what is very piercing: the nearest approximation to this idea is the passage in Atharvaveda, VI, 139, 5 (cited in Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, p. 86), which refers to the ichneumon's (m.) skill in chopping up and then restoring his work.

² Brāhmaṇa here means secret doctrine like Upaniṣad. Iva seems to be used to indicate the somewhat unusual sense; the Śāṅkhāyana version has eva; cf. I, 1, 2, n. 3; J. R. A. S., 1908, p. 1193, n. 1. Sāyana in his commentary repeatedly has phrases like antaryāmībrāhmaṇa, the secret doctrine of the antaryāmin, see III, 2, 4, n. 18, and cf. the name of Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4 (puruṣavidhābrāhmaṇa), Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 25, and the common tas्योक्तं brāhmaṇam.

³ To his pupil or son (Ānandatīrtha and Sāyana).

⁸ Sāyana refers this to Śrāvira's doctrine, III, 1, 1. For upāptan, cf. Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XIV, 5; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 6, where Dr. Friedländer renders 'hinreichend, genügend'.

Māṇḍūkeya, then the letters ṇ and ṣ are obtained for us.' Sthavira Śākalya⁹ says, 'If we repeat the verses according to the Saṃhitā, and if we say the teaching of Māṇḍūkeya, then the letters ṇ and ṣ are obtained for us.' Then the seers, the Kāvaṣeyas, knowing this,¹⁰ say, 'To what end shall we repeat the Veda, to what end shall we sacrifice? For we sacrifice breath in speech,¹¹ or in breath speech. For what is the beginning, that is the end.' These Saṃhitās let no one¹² tell to one who is not a resident pupil, who has not been with the teacher for one year, and who is not himself to become a teacher. Thus say the teachers.¹³

¹⁰ This is a clear proof that the holders of the Āraṇyaka doctrine rejected sacrifices or recitations as means of knowledge, cf. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 5, 23; Kauṣītaki Upaniṣad, II, 5; Chāndogya Upaniṣad, V, 11-24; Taittirīya Upaniṣad, II, 5; Deussen, Phil. d. Upanishads, p. 63. A Tura Kāvaṣeya purohita of Janamejaya occurs in Khila, I, 9, 6, and in—as already noted by Colebrooke, Essays, I, 72; see Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XLII, 239 sq.—the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 27; VII, 39; VIII, 21. For the spelling cf. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des R̥gveda, Addenda, p. 190; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 239. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 199) uses the story of Kavaṣa as the son of a non-Brahmin (Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, II, 19) as a piece of evidence in favour of the theory of the attribution to the Kṣatriyas of philosophic speculation over the origin of the doctrine of transmigration (cf. Introd., pp. 50, 51; Garbe, Beiträge zur indischen Kulturgeschichte, pp. 1 sq.). He argues that the Brahmins merely accepted and made these doctrines their own by adopting them along with the doctrine of the four Āśramas. This all seems very doubtful. That among the priests none should rise superior to the sacrificial cultus is contrary to all religious history. That hermits, &c., were originally not of the priestly caste is a mere theory and not a probable one. Winternitz' view leads him (p. 202, n. 1) to adopt the improbable theory of Āraṇyaka as a text to be studied by Vānaprasthas, for which he quotes the (late) Āruṇeya Upaniṣad (Deussen, Sechzig Upanishads, p. 693) and Rāmānuja (Thibaut, S. B. E., XLVIII, 645). Cf. Introd., p. 16. It must always be remembered that the Brāhmaṇas contain already in germ all the ideas which make up the fundamental doctrine of the Upaniṣads; even the doctrine of transmigration is presaged in the doctrine of repeated deaths in the other world. It is impossible to explain why the Brahmins became so completely the bearers of the ātman doctrine if it was not theirs ex initio. Professor Macdonell has told me that he concurs in this view, which thus gains great weight, and see my notes, J. R. A. S., 1908, pp. 838, 868, 1142. The Kāvaṣeyas are cited by Śaṅkara on Śvetāśvatara Upaniṣad (ed. Röer, p. 257) as opposed to works, Weber, Ind. Stud., II, 418.

ĀRANYAKA IV

ĀśVALĀYANA (Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 12, 10) gives the following account of the purpose of the Mahānāmni verses. On the fifth day of the prīṣṭhya six day ceremony, at the midday pressing of the Soma, corresponding to the Niṣkevalya Śastra, the Udgātr̥s sing sometimes the Śākvara Sāman as one of the Prīṣṭha Stotras,¹ and then² use the Mahānāmni verses as the basis of the Sāman. These number nine, but for the purposes of the Sāman they are made into three, each consisting of three verses. These verses are recited adhyardhakāram, that is, first one and a half verses are recited, then comes a pause, then the remaining one and a half, followed by the syllable om. Then are recited the nine purīṣa-padāni, additional verses. These may either be recited simply straight on as they stand in the text, or the first five may be made into two sets of five syllables each, thus:

Evā hi eva | evā hi Agnā 3u | the hi being taken without Sandhi, the last four purīṣapadāni being repeated without a pause in the middle. See also Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 10, and comm.

The Mahānāmni verses occur in the Āraṇya Saṃhitā, and in the Naigeya Śākhā at the end of the Pūrvārcika of the Sāmaveda, and as one of the Khilas of the R̥gveda, see Peterson, Second Report, p. 97, Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des R̥gveda, pp. 134-136. They are referred to in the Bṛhaddevatā, VIII, 100, Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 10, R̥gvidhāna, IV, 25, and Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, II, 11, 12, &c. From these sources, and from Baudhāyana, cited in Oldenberg, Prolegomena, p. 509, n., it appears that they followed directly upon the verse tac cham yor, which, according to the Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 5, 9, is the end of the R̥gveda Saṃhitā (in the Bāṣkala recension), and, according to Nārāyaṇa on Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 5, 9, is the end of the Bāṣkala recension.³ It is not, however, quite clear what this means, since tac cham yor occurs as the last verse of two Khilas, V, 1 and 3, in Scheftelowitz's edition, viz. the saṃjñānam and prādhvarāṇām Khilas, and the three Khilas, V, 1-3, the second being the nairhastyam, have 5+3+7=15 verses. The view of

Oldenberg, who had not⁴ the evidence of the MS. of the Khilas before him, was (Prolegomena, p. 502) that the Saṃhitā ended with the first lac cham yor, i. e. with Khila, V, 1, and Scheftelowitz (pp. 11, 132) holds that this is correct. Oldenberg, however, held (p. 509) that the Mahānāmni verses followed directly after lac cham yor, and (p. 501) expressed the view that the following ten verses were some of them modern. But of the direct evidence for the immediate sequence of the Mahānāmni verses, cited by Oldenberg, the Ṛgvidhāna alone fully bears him out, for the Khila MS. has the Mahānāmni verses after the prūdhvarāṇām Khila, and this is probably the meaning of Bṛhaddevatā, VIII, 94, as interpreted by Prof. Macdonell. It is an easy conjecture that the Ṛgvidhāna, which has other coincidences with the Bṛhaddevatā⁵, followed that work, but misunderstood the word caturtham, which most probably must mean 'the fourth of the hymns after X, 190'. This fact weakens greatly the force of Oldenberg's argument from the modern character of the last ten verses, and in point of fact it is difficult to deny that the verse lac cham yor is modern in appearance, and that it need not be separated in time from the last seven verses. For the second lac cham yor being the end of the Saṃhitā in the Bāṣkala recension, we have the clear evidence of the commentator on the Caranavyūha,⁶ who actually cites the verses. Dr. Scheftelowitz considers that the commentator is untrustworthy, and later than Sāyaṇa, but this appears very doubtful. We know, he argues, that the commentator explains the eight extra hymns attributed to the Bāṣkala Śākhā by the Anuvākānukramaṇī as being seven of the Vālakhilyas and the saṃjñānam hymn of fifteen verses, but the number should be ten, as the saṃjñānam hymn is really composed of three hymns. But it is difficult to maintain that it is impossible that the fifteen verses, despite their difference of contents, were not regarded in early days as one hymn, for several of the Ṛgvedic hymns are notoriously patchwork, and this applies more strongly still to later Saṃhitās.

Much more important is the question of their antiquity. Oldenberg makes the Mahānāmni verses an exception to his general view, that the Khilas are on the whole of later origin, and holds that they are coeval with the Ṛgveda, and were merely omitted because of some reason of ritual teaching from the ten Maṇḍalas. Dr. Scheftelowitz, who disputes Oldenberg's general position, and accepts Hillebrandt's theory of the purer ritual tradition, assigns the verses (p. 3) to the end of the Ṛgvedic period. Further, Oldenberg⁷ has suggested that the verses are alluded to as the Śakvari verses in Ṛgveda, VII, 33, 4; X, 71, 11, and this suggestion is at least plausible. They are apparently referred to as Mahānāmnis in the Atharvaveda and Yajurveda (see below). It is borne out to some extent at least by the character of the language, which shows the rare forms ānuśamṣiṣaḥ, stuṣe, vide, iṣe, ṛñjāse, and saṁnyase. The metre is also of an archaic type in so far as resolutions are frequently necessary to restore it. The Khila Anukramaṇī gives the following note: vidā daśa pādāś ca pañca Viśvāmītra Indro vā Prajāpatir Aindram pāvanam ānuṣṭubham puriṣapadāny Āgneyavaiṣṇavaindrapauṣṇadaivāni vairājāni dvilīyāpañcamyāv usṇihau caturthī nyaṅkusārīṇi saptaṁ purastādbyhasti navamyantye pañkṣi. As a matter of fact, as both Weber^a and Oldenberg recognize, the verses are not preserved in their primitive form, but only as modified to suit their supposed sacred character. In verses 2, 5, and 8, which were apparently originally *anuṣṭubh*s, the fourth pāda has been omitted for the insertion of a sort of refrain. Verses 1, 3, and 6 are in anuṣṭubh. Verse 4 appears to be 8 + 12 + 8 + 8; verse 7, 12 + 8 + 8 + 8; verse 9, 8 + 8 + 8 + 8 + 8. The rest is in no regular metre. Oldenberg (p. 33) considers that originally the metre consisted of seven and five sets of eight syllables respectively, but this seems hardly borne out by the facts. It should be noted that the Khila text manufactures the last four of the nine puriṣapadāni into one verse (!), and in this respect is certainly not old, for the puriṣapadāni cannot reasonably be held to have ever made up a verse. They are referred to, however, as five in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXIII, 2, and connected with Prajāpati, Agni, Indra, Pūṣan, and Devāḥ, and in the Bṛhaddevatā, VIII, 102, they are connected with the same deities, save that Viṣṇu is substituted for the Devāḥ (so the A version; the B version omits Prajāpati, while Mītra's text includes both Prajāpati and the Devāḥ, see Macdonell's note). They are also mentioned in the Pañcaviṁśa Brāhmaṇa, XIII, 4, 12, where elaborate directions are given as to their selection to make up the śakvara sāman, Lāṭyāyana Sūtra, IV, 10, 18, Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, X, 6, 13, &c., and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 4; V, 7; VI, 24; Atharvaveda, XI, 7, 6; Vājasaneyi Saṁhitā, XXIII, 35; Kāthaka Saṁhitā, X, 10; Taittirīya Saṁhitā, V, 2, 11, 1.^b

The verses contain several phrases reminiscent of the Ṛgveda, perhaps borrowed from earlier hymns; at least they tend to convey an impression of second-hand use: jētāram āparājitam = RV., I, 11, 2; sā naḥ parṣad āti = RV., X, 187, 1; Indram dhānasya sātāye is the last pāda of RV., VIII, 3, 5^d (this I owe to Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 210^b); sām anyéṣu bravāvahai = RV., I, 30, 6; sákhā susévo ádvayāḥ = RV., I, 187, 3^d; śaviṣṭha vajrinn rñjāse = RV., I, 80, 1^o (with ojāsā). These last two cases seem to me strongly in favour of the later date of these verses, for bravāvahai is not unnatural in RV., I, 30, 6, where it seems to refer to Indra and the speaker who are to agree in other battles, the previous half verse referring to a conflict, but it is distinctly awkward here where the first half verse has no reference to a fight or other occasion of association. This only, however, proves that the Mahānāmni verses are not among the earliest parts of the Ṛgveda.

^a Ind. Stud., VIII, 68.

^b For the last four reff. I am indebted to Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 696^a, who gives other passages; cf. also Weber, Ind. Stud., XVII, 358; Eggeling, S. B. E., XLI, xx; XLIV, 380, n. 2.

The last four purīṣapādāni are made out of the preceding verses, evā hi śakrō, from v. 2; vaśī hi śakrō, from v. 5; vásūñ ānu, from v. 4. The Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 9, shows that other pādas of the verses were used independently in the ritual: pracetana pracelayāyāhi pīḍa matsva | kratuś chanda ṛtaṃ brhat sumna ā dhehi no vasav ity anusṣup | Ibid., 12, has: ud yad bradhnyasya viṣṭapam iti paridhāniyā | evā hy evaiṣā hindra 3 | evā hi śakro vaśī hi śakra iti japitvā | apāḥ pūrveṣāṃ harivaḥ sulānām iti yajati | and again the purīṣapādāni in VI, 3, 26.

For the question of the 'authorship' of this Āraṇyaka by Āśvalāyana, cf. Introd., pp. 18 sq. For the view that this forms a sort of Āśvalāyana Samhitā may be compared the fact that there is an Āpastambīya Mantrapāṭha, a collection of Gṛhya verses and formulae, to accompany the Āpastamba Gṛhya Sūtra. So too, as Oldenberg (S. B. E., XXX, 3-11) has conclusively¹⁰ shown, the Mantra Brāhmaṇa was prepared to accompany Gobhila's Gṛhya Sūtra, though it is not apparently ascribed to Gobhila, just as IV is not attributed to Āśvalāyana in the Āraṇyaka itself. Winternitz (Gesch. der indisch. Lit., I, 232) merely repeats Max Müller (Ancient Sanskrit Literature, pp. 314 sq., 339).

¹⁰ I do not consider Winternitz (Mantrapāṭha, I, xxxi sq.) to have refuted Oldenberg.

movest.² Thou movest, most generous, bearer of the bolt. Come hither, drink, and be glad || 3 ||

Grant us wealth with good heroes. Thou art³ the lord of might according to thy will. Thou movest, most generous, bearer of the bolt, who art the most powerful of heroes || 4 ||

Most generous of givers, wise one, guide us aright. Indra finds⁴ all. Him I praise. For he has will and strength || 5 ||

Him we summon to our aid, the conqueror, unconquered. May he convoy us⁵ beyond our foes. He is strength, resolve, and mighty order || 6 ||

Indra we summon for the winning of wealth, the conqueror, unconquered. May he convoy us beyond our foes. May he convoy us beyond our enemies⁶ || 7 ||

² rājase may be regarded as the second singular pres. indic. of a sixth class root rāj, as Whitney (Sanskrit Grammar, § 758 a) takes it here. The exact sense is doubtful. It may conceivably = 'thou art praised', but the sense 'move' is possible, if the root is akin to the Greek ῥάγω. Cf. Delbrück, Altindisches Verbum, p. 181; Bartholomae, Indog. Forsch., II, 281; Neisser, Bezz. Beitr., XX, 59; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 396, 436 ('press on, strive forward'); Fischel (Vedische Studien, I, 109), however, compares saraj with ῥάγω, and Geldner (ibid., III, 29 sq.) postulates a √rj = tubh: diptau, either transitive or intransitive. He does not, unhappily, quote or explain this passage. In RV., VIII, 9, 17 he renders vēmi tvā Pāṇan rājase as 'I desire to adorn thee', and possibly the form rājase might be an infin. = an imperative (cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 412; Neisser, Bezz. Beitr., XX, 59; Hopkins, A. J. P., XIII, 21 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 216 d). The accentuation pīṣa mīṣva seems most probable, cf. tardānir iḥ jagatī kṣēti putyati in RV., VII, 32, 9, and other examples given in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 36 sq.; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 594 b; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, p. 80; Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 105. mīṣva is irregularly accented, but there are many parallels, Whitney, § 628; Macdonell, p. 99 (foot).

Place us in thy favour, ancient one, lord of the thunder, bright one. Most powerful, thy rewards are extolled. For the strong god bears rule || 8 ||

Lord of man, slayer of Vṛtra, this new hymn[†] I offer now to thee. Among others let us two converse together. The hero who fares for the cows is a kind and guileless friend || 9 ||

Thus,^a thus, O Agni. Thus, thus, O Indra. Thus, thus, O Viṣṇu. Thus, thus, O Pūṣan. Thus, thus, O Gods. For he is strong. For he has strength and will, according to his will. On all sides^b come hither. Show, generous one, show.

[†] This is doubtful. mḍnyase, the variant of the other texts save SV., is remarkable as being accented, and does not help. It looks like an obvious error or correction for śmṇnyase, which becomes śmṇnyase, SV., Nāigeya Śākhā, and then by haplography śmnyase, SV., Āraṇya Saṃhitā, and then mḍnyase through the frequent mistake of s for m in Śāradā MSS. mḍnyase makes no good sense, but saṇnyase also is very difficult (even if taken as Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 404) would take it in RV., V, 17, 2, as a first person). It comes apparently from √as. Dr. Scheffelowitz now agrees with this view (cf. my remark in J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 224). For saṇ tan (i. e. tañ) can be read (supply sūktam or, with tan, mantram) but noṇyam may be from √nu, meaning praiseworthy. The dual braśvivakāi in the original context refers to the singer and Indra who are in other (contests) to be united. Here it must (cf. n. 7 on I, 1, 2) mean something of the same sort, but anyeṣu has no longer any direct antecedent. SV. aryeṣu is merely a facile correction like so many SV. readings. For the loc., gōṇu, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 122; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 81 b; Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 301, 304; A. J. P., XIII, 284. śmnyase as a dat. hardly makes sense.

^a Sāyaṇa takes evā as from √i and ā. The sentence is practically a mere exclamation and cannot be translated. The words ā yō, &c., yield no sense as they stand. Sāyaṇa renders, 'He who comes to think what is to be thought of for our weal, let him come to think what is to be thought of.' The variant āyo is no help, though it might mean 'Come to the man who deserves favour', cf. Taittirīya Saṃhitā, II, 1, 3, 2. For the plutī, ā 3 ī, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 298.

^b Cf. Śāukhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 12, where the sentence runs: thy evā hīndrapakāi vīśvathā vidā maghavan vidā iti, from which it may be legitimate to assume that chi should be supplied in the purīṣapadāni. The last vidā may point to vidāḥ being the form. vīśvathā in RV. means either (1) everywhere, I, 141, 6; (2) always, V, 8, 4.

The Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, I, 20, has: evā hy eva | evā hy Agne | evā hi Vāyo | evā hīndra | evā hi Pūṣan | evā hi devāḥ | when Sāyaṇa renders eva as ayanaśilāditya and evā as etavyāḥ prīṣṭavyāḥ kāmāḥ, and supplies asi, 'Thou art desires': kīlaldenūlītyaya sarvakāmahetutva-prasiddhir ucyate. Ibid., 23, has: evā hy evā | ... evā hy Agne | ... evā hi Vāyo | ... evā hīndra | ... evā hi Pūṣan | ... evā hi devāḥ | The accents are those of the Ānandāśrama text (I, 88, 89), and may be wrong. In the Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, II, 3, 18 (a reference which I owe to Bloomfield's Vedic Concordance, p. 305^b) all the MSS. have evā (or evā) hy Agne. The Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXIII, 2, gives two accounts of the Mahānūktis or Śakvaris, and gives as the five purīṣapadāni: evā hy eva | evā hy Agne | evā hīndra | evā hi Pūṣan | evā hi devāḥ |

It is by no means obvious how these verses came to be considered as an especially fruitful rain-spell. As such they are clearly recognized in the Gobhila Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 2, and the Khādira Gṛhya Sūtra, II, 5, 22 so., where the Śakvarivrata is clearly a rite of sympathetic magic to produce plentiful rain (see Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 420-422, with whose remarks I fully concur).

ĀRANYAKA V

In the Mahāvratā ceremony there are twenty-five verses to accompany the kindling of the fire.¹ In the twenty-one² verses (used in the Viśuvant) four are inserted before the second last, beginning, 'With fuel Agni' (RV., VIII, 44, 1). A bull is to be offered to Viśvakarman³ accompanied by muttering the verses. The Ājya and Praṭiga Śāstras are taken from the Viśvajit.⁴ The Śāstras of

² There are in the Darśapūrnāmāseṣṭi, see Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, pp. 74 sq., fifteen verses beginning with RV., III, 27, 1 (cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 299; Bergaigne, Recherches sur l'histoire de la liturgie védique, p. 19); see Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, III, 5, 2, 1. There are only eleven separate verses, but the first and last are each thrice repeated. In the Viśuvant the fifteen are extended into twenty-one by the interpolation of six verses beginning with RV., III, 27, 5. These are inserted before the second last verse, RV., V, 28, 5. Then four more verses, beginning with RV., VIII, 44, 1, are added before this verse to make up the twenty-five. The Śāṅkhāyana here ignores these verses. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, I, 1, 14, gives the number as 17. See a list in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 2, 7. The construction acc. for nom. is remarkable and is not a mark of late or careless style, for these irregularities and the use of numerals are found in the Mantras (e.g. saptā r̥ṣiṇām, satām pūrbbh̥, cited by Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 486 c) and in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, III, 48, 9: catuḥṣaṣṭim kavacina ānuh̥, while in VII, 2, 7, parṇasaraḥ ṣaṣṭis tr̥ṇi ca satāny āh̥tya occurs (see Aufrecht, p. 428). Above, II, 2, 4; 3, 8, occurs ṣaṭtriṇṣatām sahasr̥ṇi, while Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 1 has ṣaṭtriṇṣatām ekapadāḥ, which examples all appear to be transfers of accusative for nominative, though the possibility of their being new stems in a cannot be denied (especially as the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa actually has trayastrīṇṣatāyā, a transfer to the i declension). Cf. Introd., p. 56. The idiom has hardly been adequately noticed in Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 82.

the Hotrakas are taken from the Caturviṃśa rite.⁵ In the morning pressing the Brāhmaṇacchaṃsin should add the verses, beginning, 'The busy moving ones' (RV., X, 153, 1), and at the midday pressing the verses, 'Of this strong youthful one drink' (RV., X, 160, 1).⁶ The tristich which forms the strophe begins, 'The buffalo in the bowls, the barley-mixed' (RV., II, 22, 1), the tristich forming the antistrophe consists of the three verses, 'Indra, come hither to us from far away' (RV., I, 130, 1), 'For to Indra heaven, the wise one, bowed' (RV., X, 127, 1), and, 'To him a song excelling' (RV., X, 133, 1).⁷ The Marutvatīya Śāstra is taken over from the Caturviṃśa and extended by the hymns, 'Fair has been my effort, singer' (RV., X, 27, 1), 'Drink the Soma for which in anger thou breakest' (RV., VI, 17, 1), 'With what splendour' (RV., I, 165, 1), and, 'Indra, with the Maruts' (RV., III, 45, 1).⁸ The Marutvatīya Śāstra ends with the hymn, 'Thou art born, terrible, for strength, for energy' (RV., X, 53, 1). At the end of the Marutvatīya Śāstra, the Hotṛ, leaving his place by the incomplete route,⁹ offers three oblations in the Agnidh's fire with a ladle of udumbara wood (accompanying them with the verses):—

'Indra, Bṛhaspati, Soma, and the goddess, Vāc, have aided me.¹⁰ May Mitra and Varuṇa, Heaven and Earth, aid me when first I call || 1 ||

'May the Ādityas, the all-gods, and the seven anointed Kings,¹¹ Vāyu, Pūṣan, Varuṇa, Soma, Agni, Sūrya, with the constellations, may they help me || 2 ||

'May the fathers protect me, and all this universe, and the children of Prṣṇi, the Maruts, with their splendour, ye who have Agni as your tongue and are worthy of sacrifice, may ye gods, hearing our cry, protect us || 3 ||'

He offers ten oblations on the mārjālīya altar¹² to the south, the last of which he first divides into four and deposits to the north of the fire. In the middle of the day, after the carrying forth of the fire, the mārjālīya fire is made east, he mutters the parimādāḥ japāḥ, vōg āyur viśvāyur viśvam āyur ehy evā hīndropehi viśvatha vidā maghavan vidā iti (cf. above, p. 263), after which he adores the several members of the fire altar conceived in human form (XVII, 12, 6-13, 6). For the Parimāds themselves, cf. my Sāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 4; Eggeling, S. B. E., XLI, 288, n. 2, and for the meaning of mad, Lanman in Whitney's Translation of Atharvaveda, p. 158. The Hotṛ goes north to the Agnidh's fire. (For Agnidh, cf. Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 189, and Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 18, n. 6.)

to kindle.¹³ (The offering is made in it) when it is covered up, and either to the east, the north, or the north-east side. (The verses used are as follows):—

‘May I become unassailable like fire; may I become firmly rooted like the earth || 1 ||

‘May I become unapproachable¹⁴ like the sky; may I become unassailable like the heaven || 2 ||

‘May I become without a superior like the sun; may I become renewed like the moon || 3 ||

‘May I become renewed like mind; may I be multiplied like the wind¹⁵ || 4 ||

‘May I become one’s own like the day¹⁶; and dear like night || 5 ||

‘May I become born again like kine; may I become glorious¹⁷ like a pair || 6 ||

‘Mine be the flavour of water and the form of plants || 7 ||

‘May I become widespreading¹⁸ like food, and lordly like the sacrifice || 8 ||

‘May I become like the Brahmin in the world, and like the Kṣatriya for prosperity || 9 ||

‘When, O Agni, this assembly is gathered (RV., X, 11, 8)¹⁹ || 10 ||’

¹⁸ The reading vibhu is certain, but both Rājendralāla and the Ānandāśrama edition read in the commentary vibhūḥ, and Sāyaṇa may have so read, but this is not necessary. For a converse case, cf. V, 2, 1, when Rājendralāla reads vasu for vasuḥ. The next Mantra offers considerable difficulty. Sāyaṇa renders as the Brahmin in the world and kṣatram rāyaṇa gajātvādīriyām adhipatiḥ, apparently taking īriyām as a genitive (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 349, 351). But the parallelism of the sentence calls urgently for a locative which gives fair sense, ‘in point of wealth.’ The speaker desires (a) renown, (b) wealth. Only the exact force of the locative varies in the two cases.

¹⁹ The last oblation is accompanied by a RV. verse.

Standing there he worships the sun,²¹ turning so as to keep his right side towards it as it turns, with these verses, omitting the cries of svāhā,²² and with the verse, 'Come hither, this is sweet, this is sweet. Drink this bitter draught. This is sweet, this is sweet.' He then instructs the maidservants,²³ who carry full pitchers, six in front, three behind, (saying), 'Walk three times from left to right round this altar and this pitcher of water, smiting your right thighs with your right hands, and saying, "Come hither, this is sweet, this is sweet."'

²² The offerings are accompanied as usual by the cry svāhā. These are omitted. For the rule, cf. Āpastamba, Yajñaparibhāṣā, 87 (S. B. E., XXX, 339).

²³ Cf. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 14, where apparently deliberately the direction is from right to left (apradakṣiṇam), though the words said are alike, hai mahā 3 idaṁ madhu idaṁ madhu. The dance is clearly a rain and vegetation spell, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 103. These and the other ceremonies are all mentioned in the other parallel passages, Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 10-12; IV, 1-3; Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa, V, 5, 6; Kāṭhaka, XXXIV, 5; Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XIII, 3; Taittirīya Saṁhitā, VII, 5, 9 and 10; Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 7. These versions differ in many details; the most important rite which is mentioned in neither of the Ṛgvedic works is the struggle of an Ārya and a Śūdra for a round skin, which represents the sun (cf. Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, pp. 444, 506; Usener, Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 297 sq.). It is noteworthy that in Lāṭyāyana, IV, 3, 18, where the words repeated are like those in Śāṅkhāyana the form vadatyaḥ also occurs. So Drāhyāyana; Taittirīya Saṁhitā, VII, 5, 10, has giyantyah. The direction there is also pradakṣiṇam. After the eight ājya libations in the agnidhrīya fire, according to the Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 4, come the parimāda. They are twenty-five in number and are followed by seven stotriyas named āṅgīrasa sāmān, bhūtechadāmi sāmān, krośa, anukrośa, payas, arka, and arkapūṣpa. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 2, 8; 9, contains a somewhat parallel version, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 288, n. 2, and thus again (cf. Introd., p. 36) agrees with the Śāṅkhāyana against the Aitareya. These sāmān are called devachandāmsi, Śāṅkhāyana, I, 5, and are followed by japas. Then comes an adoration of the members of the fire (see here V, 1, 2), and of the sun, and the Hotṛ declares that the 'great one has united with the great

2. 'When the singing of the stotra has been requested, then do ye cast down the water in three places, on the northern altar, on the mārjālīya altar, and the rest within the enclosure.'¹ Having gone away so as to keep the mārjālīya fire on his right,² he stands before the sacrificial post in front of the fire, with face to the west, and worships the head of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Gāyatra which is thy head:' then, returning by the way he came,³ with face to the north, he worships the right side of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Rathantara which is thy right side.' Then passing to the west of the tail of the fire,⁴ with face to the east, he worships the left side of the fire with the words, 'Honour to the Bṛhat which is thy left side.' Then on the west⁵

one', i. e. Agni with Prthivī, 'the god with the goddess,' i. e. Vāyu with Antarikṣa, 'Brahman (neut.) with Brāhmaṇī' (see Introd., p. 68, n. 1), i. e. Āditya with Dyaus. On this follows (I, 6) a Viśvāmitra legend (cf. Aitareya, II, 2, 3) to explain these identifications. For the use of upa + √sthā, cf. the famous passage in the Mahābhāṣya, I, 3, 25 (Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 480, 481), where an ape upatiṣṭhati to warm himself, but a man upatiṣṭhate in reverence.

² This describes the worship of the fire altar in its simplest bird shape, head, two wings, tail, and body. In Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 13, the sāmans and the order differ, being (1) pūrvārtha with Gāyatra, (2) right side with Rathantara, (3) left side with Bṛhat, (4) madhya with Vāmadevya, (5) tail with Yajñāyājñīya. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 1, 2, 35 and 39; X, 1, 2, 8, and Eggeling's summary (based on this passage and Śāṅkhāyana), S. B. E., XLIII, 283, n.; Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 11, 3, where as here the body is placed last, but which agrees as to the sāmans with Śāṅkhāyana and also with Drāhyāyana, and in which the sprinkling of water in three parts also occurs. The Sāmans referred to will be found as follows, giyātram in trivṛt stoma, Sāmaveda, II, 146-148; 263-265; 800-802 (or II, 8, 4, see S. B. E., XLIII, 178); rathantaram in pañcadala stoma, ibid., II, 30, 31; bṛhat in saptadala stoma, ibid., II, 159, 160; rājanam in pañcaviṃśa stoma, ibid., II, 833-835; bhadra in ekaviṃśa stoma, ibid., II, 460-462. For the Sāmans cf. II, 3, 4. For a drawing of the agnikṣetra see Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 235.

⁵ paścāt may simply mean 'next', or, as Sāyaṇa takes it, refer to the place where the Hotṛ stands. Apparently the difference between this and his former position is that he stands directly behind the tail, instead of going past it. This account of his movements corresponds on the whole with that of the ceremony of the Śatarudriya, which has analogies to the Mahāvratā (Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 1, 1, 44). In it, according to the Śatapatha, IX, 1, 2, 35 sq., the Sāmans, (1) gāyātram, (2) rathantaram, (3) bṛhat, (4) Vāmadevya, (5) yajñāyājñīyam, and (6) Prājāpatiḥṛdaya, correspond to (1) head, (2) right wing, (3) left wing, (4) body, (5) tail, (6) heart; according to Lāṭyāyana, I, 5, 11, which very closely follows the order of

of the fire, with face to the east, he worships the tail with the words, 'Honour to the Bhadra which is thy tail and thy support.' Then on the south of the tail he worships the body with the words, 'Honour to the Rājana which is thy body.'

3. He returns to the seat as he went.¹ The swing has already been made ready.² Having cleansed the two posts, the ropes, and the cross-beam, and having taken them by the road called śirtha,³ having gone round to the left the Agnidh's altar,⁴ (having brought them within) the seat by the east door (he places the implements⁵) to the left of all the altars. The planks of the swing are made of udumbara or of palāśa, or of both. There should be three planks worked on both sides, or two, and a like number of sharp-pointed sticks. The movements in this Aitareya passage, the (1) gāyatram, (2) rathantaram, (3) brhat, (4) yajñā-yajñīyam, (5) Vāmadevya, and (6) Prajāpatihrdaya, correspond to (1) head, (2) right side, (3) left side, (4) tail, (5) right arm-pit, and (6) left arm-pit. Cf. also the elaborate ceremonial of the parimādaś at the Mahāvratā as described in Śatapatha, X, 1, 2, 9; Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 4 (with Friedländer's note, p. 37); and the similar use after the beginning of the prsthā stotra of the parimādaś (prāṇa, apāna, vratapakṣaṇ, Prajāpater hṛdaya, Vasiṣṭhaya nihava, sattvayardhi, loka and anuloka, yāma, āyus, navastobha, ṛiyasya sāman) in the worship of the parts of the altar in Tāṇḍya Brāhmaṇa, V, 4, 1-13; Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 9, 1 sq.; Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, I, 2, 6, 5. In the Mahāvratā Sāman the parts of the bird are head, right wing, left wing, tail, and trunk only (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxvii). The whole conception is clearly borrowed (cf. Intro., p. 50) from the altar in the Agnicayana which gave origin to the mystic doctrines of the Adhvaryus (see especially Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VI-X), and of which the Mahāvratā is an adaptation by the Hotrs. In Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XII, 4, the trivṛt is the head, the gāyatram the eyes, brhat and rathantaram the wings, the hymn the soul, the yajñāṃsi the name, the metres the limbs, the Vāmadevya the body, the yajñāyajñīyam the tail. For the relation of sāman and words, cf. Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., XXXVIII, 439 sqq., 464 sq.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Lit., I, 143 sq., and see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 180, n. 2; Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 276 sq. The Vāmadevya is based on Sāmaveda, II, 32, 33; the Yajñāyajñīya on Sāmaveda, II, 53, 54.

² By the Adhvaryus. Cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VII, 32.

swing should be a yard in size from east to west, its cross breadth should be a yard less a hand; the points of its (planks) should be to the north, and they should be fastened together by sticks with their points east. Having inserted the posts in the earth to the north and south, around the seat of the Hotṛ, he spreads the cross-beam over them so that it is on a level with the worker's face.⁶ Holes are (bored) in the corners of the planks of the swing. He fastens the planks above by means of the ropes, the right one on the south, the left on the north.⁷ The ropes should be of darbha grass, and with three strands,⁸ one rope to

⁸ The use of triṇṇa and dviguṇa with different senses of gūṇa is awkward, but appears clearly so meant. Sāyaṇa points out that the rope as doubled would be $2\frac{1}{2}$ fathoms in length, of which only a yard would be used by the rope passing under the plank (above iṣumātraḥ prāṇ prekṣhaḥ). There would thus be plenty of rope available for the tying, as the top was only a man's height or less. Sāyaṇa takes sayyadakṣiṇe as 'inclining to the left and right', i.e. the ropes should not go straight up. The only obscure point in this description of the tying on of the seat of the swing to the cross-beam is pradakṣiṇam, since it is not at first sight obvious how this applies to the act of fastening ropes. It apparently must mean that after the rope has been passed under the seat of the swing the one end is rolled round the cross-beam slanting to the right, the other (on the opposite side, of course*) also slanting to the right and the ends then are tied across. Provided there was sufficient friction to keep the ropes from slipping this would seem to give a substantial knot (cf. niṣṭarkya). If this is so, we cannot accept Sāyaṇa's theory of sayyadakṣiṇe and must fall back either on the view that the word means merely left (hand) rope and right (hand) rope, or take the epithet

* It is very unlikely that both ends of the rope should have been brought to the same side of the cross-beam. In that case pradakṣiṇam would be rather less than mere in point. Speijer (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 106, n.) points out that adjective dvandvas are not unknown even in Sanskrit (cf. his Sanskrit-Syntax, § 208), and (p. 32, n. 1) argues from Pāṇini, VI, 2, 38, when ekādaśa is given as a dvandva that the grammarians recognized such types. He (§ 107) gives classical examples of distributive dvandvas.

the left, one to the right, and five fathoms long, and should be folded double. Then folding (each end) thrice (to the right) round the cross-beam he makes a knot on the top, which can only be untied by twisting. They support the posts so as to be steady by means of branches and brushwood.⁹ The swing should be four fingers or a hand distant from the ground.¹⁰ On the right it may be somewhat higher or level. It should be a foot from the altar.

4. When¹ the swing has been put in position, the Hotṛ taking a lute of udumbara wood, with a hundred strings, in both hands, strikes it,² beginning from the lower side, as one does an ordinary lute.³ The different notes of the lute he should produce in turn by the seven metres,⁴ each with four (syllables) as applying to each rope and as meaning, 'with strands coiled from left to right.' Cf. perhaps the equally obscure passage, Āpastamba Yajñparibhāṣā, 60, 61 (S. B. E., XXX, 331, where Max Müller says, 'The exact process here intended is not quite clear. The ropes seem to have been made of vegetable fibres. See Kāty., I, 3, 15-17'). If soṇyadakṣiṇe = left and right, cf. for the use of the dvandva, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 160, who cites Atharvaveda, XII, 1, 28: padābhyām dakṣiṇasoṇyābhyām; Taittiriya Brāhmaṇa, I, 5, 10, 1: suvarṇarajatatābhyām kuśābhyām. The different order of words, soṇyadakṣiṇa, is in accordance with the usual rule as to number of syllables determining the order of the numbers of their compounds, Wackernagel, II, i, 166.

¹⁰ The distance according to Śāṅkhāyana should be a prādeśa, XVII, 10, 13. Ibid., XVII, 1, discusses the planks; 2, the ropes and āsandī; 3, the lute; 4, the drums; 5, 6, 7, the other accessories and the preliminary steps, in great order and detail. Cf. Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 12.

⁴ i.e. he plays notes corresponding to verses composed in these metres. The four more are, Sāyaṇa says, virāj, duṣṭadā, atichandas, and chando 'ntaram. If this last be omitted ten are got. But despite its use elsewhere, e.g., Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, X, 1, 2, 8, it must surely over, or with ten. (He should say), 'I produce thee with the gāyatrī metre. I produce thee with the anuṣṭubh metre. I produce thee with the uṣṇih metre. I produce thee with the byahatī metre. I produce thee with the pañkti metre. I produce thee with the triṣṭubh metre. I produce thee with the jagatī metre. I produce thee with the virāj metre. I produce thee with the dvīpadā metre. I produce thee with the atichandas metre.' Having gone through the metres according to the series of notes, he strikes the lute thrice, beginning from the foot with a branch of udumbara wood, fresh and still leafy, using the foot of it, (to the words), 'For up-breathing I strike thee, for down-breathing I strike thee, for cross-breathing I strike thee.' But he should not say, 'I strike thee,' for other desires.⁵ Then he hands over to the Sāman singers the lute with the branch.⁶ He places his two hands on the back plank (with the words), 'For creatures thee (I touch),' and pushes the swing to the east (with the words), 'Swing forward like the breath,' crosswise⁷ (with the words), 'Swing crosswise for cross-breathing,' and back to himself (with the words), 'Swing like back-breathing.' He repeats the words bhūh, bhuvah, and sva.⁸ He then pushes the swing to the east⁹ (with the words), 'For breath I push thee,' crosswise (with the words), 'For cross-breathing I push thee,' and back to himself (with the words), 'For down-breathing I push thee.' (With the words), 'May the Vasus mount thee with the gāyatrī metre, I mount after them,' he places his elbows on the back plank.¹⁰ Then he should touch the front plank with his mean, each metre has four more syllables than its predecessor, viz. 24, 28, 32, &c., and so Sāyana takes it on Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 6.

⁸ Sāyana says that the repetition of these three words denotes a desire that the three worlds be established by the threefold moving of the swing. They are used in Lāṭyāyana, IV, 1, 4, in connexion with the playing of the lute. Cf. also Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 339; Oldenberg, Religion des Veda, p. 432, n.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 162.

hands separately,¹¹ like a serpent about to creep. He should touch the middle plank with his chin, or if there are two¹² the point of joining of the two. (With the words), 'May the Rudras mount thee with the trishubh metre, I mount after them,' he lays his right thigh¹³ (over the seat). (With the words), 'May the Ādityas mount thee with the jagatī metre, I mount after them,' (he lays) his left thigh. (With the words), 'May the All-gods mount thee with the anusubh metre, I mount after them,' he mounts (the swing).¹⁴ To the west of his own altar he places his right foot pointing to the east, and then his left.¹⁵ If the former is tired, then the latter; if the latter, then the former. But the two together must never be off the ground. The Hotrakas sit down on bundles of grass, and so does the Brahman priest. The Udgātṛ sits on a stool of udumbara wood. If he has to leave for any absolutely necessary action, then having set one to guard, he descends towards the east, and having carried out the exact business he

Then he sits crosswise on the swing and touches the back of it with the Mantra, Prajāpatiḥ tvārohatu vāyuh preṅkhatu. This act is preceded and followed by three expirations and three inspirations. The Mantras of the Udgātṛ in mounting his seat in Lātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, III, 12, 8, are like those in Śāṅkhāyana, omitting arko 'ri, but Lātyāyana, III, 12, 9, permits them to be reduced to simply gāyatreṇa tvā chandasārohami, &c. In Lātyāyana the verses are said by the Udgātṛ. Ibid., 10-12. Gautama adds a fifth stoma with vairāṣeṇa, Dhānanyajaya has four, and Śāṅḍilya only three.

¹⁵ The exact sense of this is taken by Sāyaṇa to be that the feet are to be used alternately, and this seems correct, though it is not said exactly that the two cannot ever be both on the ground at once. They must not be both off the ground, cf. I, 2, 4. For the gen. with pācāt, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 10, 9: etya grhān pācāt grhāyāgner upaviṣṭāyānvārābhāya tvig antataḥ kaṣeṇa caturgṛhītās tīṣṭa ājyāhūtīr oindrīḥ prapadaṃ juhōti. This corrects Speijer's remark (Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 83), followed by Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., I, 743, that pācāt is not so found before the Śrauta Sūtras.

5. He instructs the Prastotr, 'In the pañcaviṃśa stoma proclaim the first pratihāra when either three verses remain to be said, or two and a half¹ or twelve and a half.' Jātukarṇya holds that this should be done when there remain twelve and a half verses. When the Prastotr has spoken, he repeats² (the verse), 'Thou art a bird with fair wings. I shall speak forth this word, which will declare much,³ fare far, produce much, gain much, effect more than much,

¹⁶ Sāyaṇa takes ajapayā vṛtā as the form. It may equally be ajapayā āvṛtā, āvṛt being more usual in this sense, as in Mānava Grhya Sūtra, II, 4, 2; 9, 8; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 11, 4; 5, &c.; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., V, 410. If avāśyakarmiṇe is read the sense must be, 'If he should go for (to serve) some one who has something he must do on hand.' At first sight this seems easier, but if karmiṇe had been original it would hardly have been changed to karmāṇe, a less obvious construction, while the reverse of this process would be not unnatural. If karmiṇe is read, see for the formation which is rare in early texts, Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 121, 122. For the dat., cf. Gaedicke, Der Accusativ im Veda, p. 135; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., I, 177, 301.

² The Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, give the Mantras in reverse order, and omit the ukthavīryāni. For suparṇo 'si gurutmān see Vājasaneyi Samhitā, XII, 4; Śāṅkhāyana identifies this with prāṇa, but see my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 77, n. 6.

³ Sāyaṇa interprets these epithets very inadequately, but it is most probable that they are all genuine including svaṛ vadīṣyantīm, which has least MS. authority. The Ānandāśrama edition considers Sāyaṇa's text defective, but most probably he regarded some of the epithets as obvious, though perhaps he had not svaṛ vadīṣyantīm. Lāṭyāyana has only after vadīṣyāmi: bahu karīṣyantīm bahu karīṣyan svaṛ gamayīṣyantīm svaṛ gamayīṣyan mām imān yajamānān, see IV, 2, 10. So also Drāhyāyana. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka recognizes bahu karīṣyantīm bahor bhūyāh karīṣyantīm svaṛ gamīṣyantīm svaṛ imān yajamānān vakīṣyantīm only, which resembles which goes to heaven, which will declare heaven, fare to heaven, produce heaven, gain heaven, carry this sacrifice to heaven, and carry the sacrificer, me, to heaven.' The word 'sacrificer' applies only to one who has been consecrated, not to one not consecrated.⁴ In the case of a friend of his,⁵ he should say 'carries N. N. to heaven', not 'will carry'. He then repeats the ukthavīryas,⁶ and, 'Breath (is united) with speech, may I be united with speech. Eye is united with mind, may I be united with mind. Hearing is united with the self, may I be united with the self. May I have greatness, glory, good fortune, enjoyment, the *stobha*⁷ and the stoma verse, sound, renown, prosperity, fame, and fruition.'⁸

Lāṭyāyana's version given above. The Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 17, 1, has: premadā vācam vaditvāmi bahu kariyantiṁ bahu kariyaḥ bahor bhūyaḥ svar gamiṣyantiṁ svar gamiṣyaṁ. Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 642^b) gives Lāṭyāyana and Śāṅkhāyana as having svargam, &c., instead of svargam, &c., but that this is quite wrong may be proved, not only by its inherent improbability but also by Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8 (the Āraṇyaka unluckily did not come to Bloomfield's notice), where occurs svaḥ ky eṣā vāg gamiṣyanti bhavati; see my note, J. R. A. S., 1908, p. 204.

⁵ This seems to be the same. If so, this passage recognizes the performance for a friend against Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 1; the case of an enemy is specially dealt with in that Āraṇyaka, I, 8; nāmum being said. The future is not to be used, for the present is to be used to signify the immediate attainment of heaven (Sāyaṇa).

After stoma, lōka may well be 'verse', or possibly 'hymn of praise'. Elsewhere it means, however, merely 'fame', e. g. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I, 4, 7 (Kāṇva), 18 (Madhyandina): evam kīrtiṁ lōkam vindate, which appears to be the only Upaniṣadic passage with that sense (Jacob, Concordance, p. 940).

⁸ Bhujabhuktyor bhedo bhogyabhedena draṣṭavyaḥ (Sāyaṇa).

Having called⁹ (to the Adhvaryu), he mutters the word 'speech'. There are three calls¹⁰ (for the Hotṛ), at the beginning of the Śastra, of the nivid, and of the concluding verse. The Adhvaryus¹¹ make sounds. On this day one¹² should give much food. They cause a warrior¹³ to pierce a skin. They smite the earth drum, and women play lutes¹⁴. There is intercourse of creatures,¹⁵ and a conversation between a student and a courtesan. The Udgātṛs sing various Sāmans for the Niṣkevalya Śastra,¹⁶ the Hotṛ begins with the strophe of the Rājana Sāman.¹⁷

¹¹ Kārayanti is little, if any, more than a simple verb. Cf. epic examples in Holtzmann, on Whitney's Sanskrit Grammar, §§ 1041, 1068; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 156; Sanskrit-Syntax, § 304. So in Pāli and Prākṛit, Müller, Pāli Grammar, p. 107. This is a preliminary to the beginning of the Śastra. Presumably the words, like those mentioned below, are intended to frighten away demons, &c. Cf. Cook, Journal of Hellenic Studies, 1902, p. 15; Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 31; Crooke, Northern India, p. 196; my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, p. 78.

For similar ceremonies to promote fertility, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 80, 103; Frazer, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, pp. 21 sq.; my Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, pp. 82 sq.

6. 'That was the oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120),¹ 'That fame of thine, O Maghavan, through thy greatness' (RV., X, 54), 'He groweth more for strength' (RV., VI, 30), and the three verses beginning, 'Thee, manliest of men, with songs, with hymns' (RV., III, 51, 4), (are the commencement of the Śāstra). Here some say² that one should take from the body-verses the two quarter-verses, 'Join with the sweet what is sweeter than sweet' (RV., X, 120, 3^o), and 'The sweet with the sweet hast thou conquered' (ibid., 3^d), and replace them with the wing quarter-verses, 'O Maghavan, O Indra, the strong steeds' (RV., VII, 33, 22^e), and 'O Indra, grant a cow, a chariot horse' (RV., VI, 46, 2^e), and put in place of the latter those other two. He thus wins the profit of a cow³ and ceremonies a fight between an Ārya (Vaiśya) and a Śūdra for a skin which is compared with the sun, and the appointment of persons to praise and criticize the acts of the priests, IV, 3, perhaps in order to avert the evil eye (Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 172); cf. the abuse of the Roman triumph. The first ceremony clearly shows the nature of the rite as a sun spell, which has many parallels in different parts of the world (Usener, Archiv f. Religionswissenschaft, 1904, pp. 297-313), as Agnisvāmin on IV, 3, 7, points out. It is discussed in Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, V, 2, 6, 7. For ritual αλχηολογία as stimulating vegetation or serving a placular purpose, cf. Farnell, Cults of the Greek States, III, 104; IV, 267; Frazer, Golden Bough, I², 97; Crooke, Northern India, p. 193; v. Schroeder, Mysterium und Mimus, pp. 309 sq.

² Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 14, 7; Āraṇyaka, II, 1; 11, omits the last two pādas and does not replace them, but puts them before the divipādās. The stanza RV., VII, 33, 22^e, occurs in the right, the stanza RV., VI, 46, 2^e, in the left wing. The Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, seems to agree with Śāṅkhāyana, though not precisely; Eggeling, S.B. E., XLIII, 113, n. Eggeling's explanation of the ardharcau in the Śatapatha as referring to RV., X, 120, 3^e d, and VIII, 20, 1^a b, seems to overlook the fact that in the Śāṅkhāyana the ardharca, X, 120, 3^e d, carries with it the ardharca, VIII, 69, 2^e d, making up in all ardharcau; they are called tau in Āraṇyaka, II, 1.

³ This is practically a defining genitive. Cf. IV: rōyaḥ suvīryam, and contrast Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 295; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 65. Delbrück (Altindische Syntax, pp. 153, 154) gives examples of the genitive of material and origin, and see Vergl. Synt., I, 340, 346 sq. The construction saṃ pakṣayoḥ patanāya is curious. The saṃ is joined with patanāya by Sāyana, and we might compare for this infra, upa-apīte, V, 3, 3; or saṃ might be taken with dhatte (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1081). The use of the genitive⁴ with patanāya (as with āptyai, Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 5; 6, &c.) disentitles it to be ranked as a real infinitive: cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 48; Whitney, l.c., §§ 287, 982. The easy conjecture saṃ, though rather tempting, is unnecessary. The conjunction of cow and horse is truly Vedic, cf. Indra's hymn, RV., X, 119, 1: īti vā īti me māno gām āvāṃ sanuṣāṃ īti; Atharvaveda, XII, 1, 5: gavām āvānām, &c.; Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 57; Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 346^b. For ātman dhatte, cf. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XIV, 28, 9; XV, 6, 7.

a horse, and the wings are made strong to fly. He intertwines these hymns with the verse nadaṃ va odaśinām (RV., VIII, 69, 2), joining quarter-verse with quarter-verse, making them into brhastī verses, so that the quarter-verses of the nada hymn are second. He also inserts in the first stanza the syllables of the word puruṣa, one in each quarter-verse, at the end, save in the case of the third quarter-verse. Thus does he intertwine them. We will also set (a verse forth) as an example, thus: ⁴—tad id āsa bhuvaṇeṣu jyeṣṭhaṃ pu nadaṃ va odaśinām । yato jajña ugras tveṣanymano ru nadaṃ yoyuvafino 3m ॥

sadyo jajñāno ni riṇāti śatrūn patim vo aghnyānām । anu yaṃ viśve madanty ūmāḥ so dhenūnām iṣudhyaso 3m ॥

The verse should be thrice repeated.⁵ Should (the Udgātr̥s) sing as the Rājana Sāman other verses which occur (in the hymns enumerated), then (the Hotṛ) recites them in their own⁶ place, but here (at the beginning of the Śāstra) he recites these verses (i. e. RV., X, 120, 1-3). If the other verses do not occur in these hymns, he should take as many out of the hymns mentioned and recite the (other verses) in their place, but still recite these verses (RV., X, 120, 1-3) here. (The verses removed) in this case are to be those before the sūdadohas verse. The Śāstra always begins with the verses commencing, 'That was the ⁴ The pluti and the om after the fourth pāda are probably meant. Cf. Śāṅkhāyana, II. cc., and I, 5, 1. Rājendralāla and the Ānandāśrama edition are both inconsistent. For the pluti, see Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 297-300. Both iṣudhyaso 3m and yuvafino 3m present curious forms, which may be compared with the rule recognized in Pāṇini, VI, 1, 95, that om with a preceding a vowel gives om, and this Sandhi in its turn has early parallels (Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 64). So in Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 4, 4, vāṇom stands, in my opinion, for vāṇī + om (cf. II, 7, n. 1). See also Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, pp. 112, 166, 178, 232, 237, 238, &c., for examples of this Sandhi.

⁶ Literally, 'in their place.' The Udgātr̥s may either adopt tad id āsa as the beginning or stotriya, or use other verses of the enumerated hymns, or use quite new verses, but in all cases the Hotṛ must stick to tad id āsa as a commencement, and must not follow the strophe of the Rājana Sāman. The new verses are to be inserted before the sūdadohas verse, omitting a corresponding number of those in the ordinary version. If the verses occur in the hymns enumerated, then they are simply recited in their own original place, since the whole of the first three hymns is included in the Śāstra, and the three verses, I, 51, 4-6, count presumably as a hymn for this purpose. Cf. n. 3 on V, 2, 1. For the construction, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, V, 7, 1: mahānāmniṣv atra stuvate śākvareṇa sāmā.

oldest in the worlds' (RV., X, 120, 1). The reply of the Adhvaryu is not altered.⁷ (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse, beginning, 'Of that milk yielder' (RV., VIII, 69, 3).⁸

⁷ The form used in the prākṛti is not altered as it is in the Śoḍaśin rite (Sāyana). On the pratigara, see Weber, Ind. Stud., X, 36, n. 3; Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 326; Sabbathier, Agnihōma, pp. 55, 56; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 104, n. 45.

⁸ The verses laid down in Śāṅkhāyana are, after a tūṣṇīṣaṃsa of three verses, RV., X, 120, 1-3; 4-9; X, 29, 1-8; X, 55, 6-8; X, 54, 6; X, 55, 2; X, 56, 1; making 23, the first being twice repeated, and the whole interspersed with the pādas of the nada hymn. In X, 120, 3, however, the third and fourth pādas together with the corresponding pādas of the nada hymn are omitted, and placed before the dvīpādās (II, 11).

After the body-verses the order in Śāṅkhāyana and the Aitareya differs as shown below:—

* It should be noted, however, that this division, which is that adopted by Dr. Friedländer, is doubtful as regards the two sides, which (Introd., p. 10) he divides into shoulder, arm, and hand. For the word skandha (really 'cervical column', Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1906, p. 918) occurs in the section dealing with the grāiva verses, and the word akṣā (rc) or akṣa, both of which are used in Āranyaka, II, 3, as regards the part rendered as 'shoulder', seems rather to denote 'collar-bone'. At least, so I infer from the fact that akṣaka has this sense in Caraka and Suśruta (Hoernle, J. R. A. S., 1907, p. 13), and akṣa this sense in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa. Possibly the reading should be akṣam in Āranyaka, i.e.: cf. akṣa sthaviṣṭha (sic) just after, and cf. I, 2, 2, n. 11, but akṣā rc is good sense. The exact divisions are probably (a) collar-bone, (b) arm, (c) hand.

(Then come) the neck-verses. 'Of Indra,¹ the smiter, the powerful, the earnest, who has the world, are might and strength, great and delightful. The mighty² overcomes

² The translation again is purely conjectural. Whitney, by reading ādhr̥ṣṭe (infia.), dh̥r̥ṣṇāṇa dh̥r̥ṣṭam, and vyāthkḥ, makes it, '(He is) not to be dared against; (his) might, dared, dares daring against (others); as, of old, his fame (was) unwavering, Indra's might (is) not to be dared against.' Taking the Aitareya text as it stands, I think we must resolve nādhar̥ṣṭa as nā dhar̥ṣṭa (h) and take the word as an adjective meaning 'impetuous'. I think nādhr̥ṣṭa, however, almost certainly right (cf. RV., V, 8, 5), 'He is not to be dared against.' The editions and Whitney with Sāyana read the two words following as ā dadhar̥ṣṭa dadhr̥ṣṇāṇam. This is quite possible, though the change in quantity is remarkable, but it seems to have escaped notice that ā dadhar̥ṣṭad ādhr̥ṣṇāṇam is quite possible, and could have the same sense while keeping the prefix ā in both cases and restoring the metre (ā dadhar̥ṣṭad ā | dh̥r̥ṣṇāṇam) and explaining the Śāṅkhāyana text. If nādhr̥ṣṭa is read, I would not take the participle as a neuter nom., but translate, 'He dares against the daring; his might is dread.' This avoids the inconvenience of the idea of might daring, and the rare use of the present participle as a finite verb. The second half of the line is very obscure. Ati vyāthkḥ occurs also in RV., X, 86, 2, and here as there Sāyana explains it as a verbal form, which is quite impossible, 'When Indra caused his foe to fall.' It might however mean, 'When trembling (cf. Naigh., II, 13) passed from Indra,' referring to the terrors which so often fell on Indra before he showed his might. For a different theory as to vyāthkḥ (= track), see RV., IV, 4, 3 (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 331); AV., IV, 21, 3, with Whitney's note; and see Geldner, Vedische Studien, II, 29. Geldner holds that vyāthkḥ originally means 'Falschheit' and thence 'Malice, Zorn, Ungnade, Ärger, Hass, Feindschaft', and so has the gen. of the subject or object. So he renders RV., IV, 4, 3, as, 'no one approaches thee when angry,' and in AV., VI, 33, 2, takes purā yāthā vyāthkḥ (this is the AV. accentuation as in AV., IV, 21, 3) śrāva Indrasya nādhr̥ṣṭe śavaḥ, as 'Like a citadel (cf. ūrjā and ūrj, Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 185) unapproachable, is the anger, the fame, the not him who is exceeding strong. His vigour is dreadful. When aforetime trembling passed from him, Indra's might was dreadful. May he give us that wealth, wealth of tawny hue. Indra is the lord, the most mighty among men.' (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The head-verses are in gāyatrī metre, beginning, 'The singers call aloud to Indra' (RV., I, 7, 1). If (the Udgātr̥s) sing the Sāman with other verses which occur (in the service), then the two sets are to be interchanged in place.³ If the other verses are ones not occurring, or some occur and some not, (then they should be inserted in the place of verses occurring which should be taken out.) The last verse of the hymn (should be recited, the insertion being made before it), and then the sūdadohas verse. Then come strength of Indra.' Unhappily he does not cite or discuss this passage, where of course purā cannot be made by any effort of the imagination to be a noun. But accepting the sense 'wrath', then AV., VI, 33, 2, would give the sense 'As aforetime, the anger', &c., and this passage might be rendered, 'As of old (purā yāt) his anger is excessive' (atf), and on the whole this is perhaps the least unlikely version of a very difficult and probably corrupt text. Cf. v. Schroeder, Mysterium und Mimus, p. 316, n. 2, whose version of RV., X, 86, 2, suggests 'because of anger'.

For the form of the verse, cf. e.g. Vājasaneyi Samhitā, I, 8: dhūr asi dhūrva dhūrvantam | dhūrva tam yo 'mān dhūrvati tam dhūrva yaṁ dhūrvāmaḥ, and Winternitz, Gesch. der indisch. Litt., I, 159. In the next verse the AV. reads tām (Ppp. no) urām and twiṣṭamas (APr., III, 96; IV, 59), while the Ppp., the comm., and one MS. have dadhātu, and the commentary on the AV. and two MSS. (out of three) in Śāṅkhāyana have śadṛjam. One MS. of Śāṅkhāyana has puram, the others puram. Tawistama occurs in RV., I, 190, 5; II, 33, 3. For the dat. inf. in e, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 970.

³ This is Sāyaṇa's version. The Ānandāśrama reads ubhayāsaṁsthā na viparyayo with the opposite meaning, but this is less probable. The apodosis to the last clause is borrowed from the indication in V, 1, 6. As the next clause shows, the insertion of the new verses is to be made before the last verse preceding the sūdadohas verse and not directly before that verse. The word samāmnōtāsu refers here to verses occurring in the hymn itself. The form ubhayāsaṁsthānaviparyayaḥ, however, presents great difficulty, for the use of ubhayā in compounds is confined to cases like śakra, pāṇi, hastā, &c., and it is hardly likely that the second member of the compound is śaṁsthāna, or that the fem. is kept because re is fem. (Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 49-52). But, further, there is no special meaning in saṁsthāna, and the conjecture ubhayāsaṁsthānaviparyayaḥ is possible. Ubhayāsaṁ (reām) is precisely correct for two sets of three verses (cf. RV., I, 26, 9; 189, 7, and regularly later, cf. Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 272), and Sāyaṇa's version in no way confirms either the reading of Rājendralāla or the Ānandāśrama. The form would be very rare, the ordinary feminine being ubhayī (common in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa), and possibly ubhayā is the Vedic adverb. It may be noted that R's version of the comm., tāsām arthe (R⁴ against R¹ and R²), alone makes sense. S's tānām madhye being nonsense. Cf. Introd., p. 9.

The Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 2, gives the head-verses thus, RV., I, 7, 1-3; I, 6, 7-9; I, 84, 13-15; VIII, 76, 10-12; VIII, 93, 1-3, any of those used by the Sāman singers. Some use I, 50, 1-9, to correspond with the Sāman singers. If the latter use only I, 50, 1-3, then the reciter can take any two of the other trayaḥ to make up the nine verses. As in the Aitareya, the recitation is by half-verses, and the sūdadohas verse occurs at the end.

the vertebrae-verses. 'The Soma is pressed for thee, come to the sacrifice, rejoice in the carouse, rich in gifts, for wealth. O Indra, thou art generous and young for us to sing.⁴ He can overcome his foes in slaying Vṛtras; he is skilful and a plunger. We magnify our leader, Indra.⁵ Impetuous, bright, the leader, the dweller on the mountains, hastening towards you, Indra, shouting aloud, with his eternal steeds.'⁶ (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The three sets of verses, neck, head, and vertebrae, are all to be repeated with a pause at the half-verse.⁷

2. The (verses of the) right wing are connected with the Rathantara Sāman.¹ The Rathantara has for its strophe, 'We praise thee, O hero' (RV., VII, 32, 22), and for its antistrophe, 'Thee for the first drink' (RV., VIII, 3, 7), both being

* If so, it might be taken as two words and translate it 'the giver is to be praised'. Cf. vi durō gṛṇīte in RV., VI, 35, 5, and cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, XII, 10.

pragātha verses. These four brhatis he turns into six.² (Then come the hymns), 'I shall proclaim the deeds of Indra' (RV., I, 32); 'In thee since our father, Indra' (RV., VII, 18), fifteen verses only; 'Who is sharp-horned, terrible like a bull' (RV., VII, 19); 'Dread is he born for strength, the mighty' (RV., VII, 20); 'Ye have uttered glorious prayers' (RV., VII, 23); 'For greatness, O dread Indra, with thine aid' (RV., VII, 25), five hymns; 'From far or near may Indra be with us' (RV., IV, 20) is the sampāta hymn. 'Thus in the Soma, in the carouse' (RV., I, 80, 1), is a pañkti verse. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. (The verses of the) left wing are connected with the Bṛhat Sāman. The Bṛhat has for its strophe, 'For thee we hail' (RV., VI, 46, 1), and for its antistrophe, 'Come hither to the worship' (RV., VIII, 61, 7), both being pragātha verses. These four brhatis he turns into six. (Then come the hymns), 'Praise him who surpasses in strength' (RV., VI, 18); 'Thou art attached to the pressed Soma, Indra' (RV., VI, 23), three hymns; 'Thou art the only lord of riches, O lord of riches' (RV., VI, 31), eight hymns; 'What! whose sacrifice has he increased?' (RV., IV, 23), is the sampāta hymn. 'Indra is born for the carouse' (RV., I, 81, 1) is a pañkti verse. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. The right wing is connected with the Rathantara Sāman, and so is the pañcadaśa stoma.³ There are one hundred and one (verses) in it, and it is called the Vasiṣṭhaprāsāha. The left wing is connected with the Bṛhat Sāman, and so is the saptadaśa stoma. There are one hundred and two verses, and it is called the Bharadvājaprāsāha. The (verses of the) tail, as being dvīpadās, are connected with the Bhadra Sāman. There are nine verses from the Samhitā, 'These worlds let us conquer' (RV., X, 157), and 'Come hither with thy splendour' (RV., X, 172), and there are also other verses not from the Samhitā.⁴ (These are), 'Ye priests, sing forth a song to Indra, who beyond all others slays the foe, that he may rejoice.'⁵

² The two pragāthas give only four brhatis. The six are made up by repeating twice the fourth pāda of RV., VII, 32, 22, and reading with it the first half of RV., VII, 32, 23. Then the fourth pāda of this second brhati is twice repeated, and with the second half of RV., VII, 32, 23, makes the third brhati. By V, 1, 6, for the pāda, RV., VII, 32, 23⁶, is to be substituted RV., X, 120, 3⁶.

⁵ Śāṅkhāyana has jujogati. See Sāmaveda, I, 446; II, 463, where are viprāya and yam jujogate. For the form, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 810. B's MS. of Sāmaveda has jujogati.

'Among the gods the singers sing the song; the youthful Indra, famous, takes up the strain.'⁸ 'Resting beneath the plakṣa,⁹ rich in honey, rejoicing in wealth, may we meditate on thee, Indra.' 'O thou to whom, most strong, we have recourse, giver on all sides,¹⁰ from all sides bring us (gifts).' 'Thou art the manliest, the lord, most generous to win us booty, when the (rite) is duly paid.'¹¹ 'For thou alone¹² dost rule from of old, unsurpassed in might.' 'Do thou sing

⁸ Śāṅkhāyana has marutaḥ svarṣāḥ, a much better reading, which obviates the difficulties of devātāṃ drkḥ with the unusual accent and use of drkḥ. Here I would read devātāḥ svarṣāḥ, the omission of h before sv being quite common in all Sanskrit MSS. The Sāmaveda, I, 445; II, 464, has Marútaḥ, and the phrase Marútaḥ svarṣāḥ occurs also in V, 1, 1. The translation of the last words given by Benfey is: 'gepriesen wird der hehre Jüngling, Indra,' but though frutāḥ, κλυτός, inclitus, perhaps means 'famous' here, ā stobhati must mean something like 'sings in return'. Cf. n. 11, below. A noun, prastobha, is unlikely. Passive particles like prastubhānāḥ, RV., IV, 3, 12, 'incited by shouting,' afford no support for a passive use here.

forth, that dost know indeed all that has been aforetime or that is now.'¹¹ 'O Mitra and Varuṇa, grant us strength and food. O Indra, make us strength abounding.'¹² '(Grant) prosperity, strength, wealth, to him who seeks gain.'¹³ Soma impels not him who keeps not vows, gain will not come near him.' Then come three dvipadās,¹⁴ beginning, 'This Brahman.' Then comes one dvipadā,

¹⁴ These verses (the accents are from the Sāmaveda) are given in Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 2, 6: etā brahmā yā r̥tviṣya īndro nāma brūtō gr̥ṇe || vī srutāyo yāthā pathā īndra tadd yantu r̥tviṣyaḥ || teām le chavasas pate yānti gl̥ro na samyātāḥ || They occur also (with vī srutāyo for vī srutāyo, and naḥ for na in v. 3) in Śāṅkhyāna Śrauta Sūtra, IX, 6, 6, and (with pathā for pathā) in Sāmaveda, II, 1116 (=I, 438), 1118 (=I, 453), 1117. The first verse also occurs in Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, II, 4, 3, 10 (pratīka only); III, 7, 9, 5; and the pratīka in Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, IV, 3. See Benfey and Griffiths' translations, and for gr̥ṇe, Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 719. Perhaps it may be taken as a passive, cf. RV., I, 79, 12: kōtā gr̥ṇīta ukthyaḥ, rendered as 'is praised' by Oldenberg (S. B. E., XLVI, 106), and see Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 264.* On the other hand, cf. nn. 6 and 11 above, where

* So also jarate means 'he sings' and 'he is praised' according to Oldenberg, l.c., p. 136, and Neisser, Beiz. Beitr., XIII, 298. I am not sure that in any case the passive sense is quite essential. The uncertainty is of course a sign of early date; cf. the Middle and Passive in Latin, Lindsay, Latin Language, pp. 519-521; Delbrück, Vergl. Synt., IV, 433.

'To the yokes for him' (RV., VII, 34, 4);¹³ the sūdadohas verse; the dhāyā verse, 'What he won' (RV., X, 74, 6); and the sūdadohas verse.

ś stobhati and prś stobha must be active, and so here and in RV., I, 79, 12, the activity may be that of the god, not of the poet. In the RV. passage it has just been said: āgni rāksāmsi sedhati, and I see no reason to give a passive sense to grñite. The verses may then be rendered, 'The holy season's lord, Indra by name, famous, utters praise. Let gifts approach thee, Indra, as paths the way. Like songs, to thee, lord of might, do men fare eagerly.' It should be noted that in I, 438, the Sāmaveda has grñe, but in II, 1116, grñe. The accent on grñe is quite unintelligible,^a and can only be explained by the fact that the Taittiriya Brāhmaṇa,^b II. cc., has gañe. In the Aitareya only ṛṣa brahmā (not as Aufrecht's text ṛṣā) is cited, a striking instance of the danger of arguments from the use of pratikas only as a sign of later redaction (cf. Bloomfield's proof of the posteriority of the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa to the Vaitāna Sūtra, Introd., p. 26), since the argument would show that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa was later than the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra; cf. also Oldenberg's remarks in Gött. gel. Anz., 1907, p. 234, n. 2.

¹³ Śāṅkhāyana adds the verses, RV., VIII, 29, 4, and VI, 17, 15, but as there are only six instead of nine new verses, the total number of dvipadā verses made up is still only twenty-one. The Aitareya adds a twenty-second verse, see I, 4, 2.

The passages corresponding to the pakṣas are given in Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 4; 5, thus: the sides are divided into the akṣas, bāhus (arms), and prahastakas (hand). The akṣas are VI, 47, 8, and a verse not from the RV., sa sūrye janayan, &c. Then for the right bāhu, the strophe of the rathantara sāman, repeated as a kakubh, then the sūdadohas verse. Then similarly the antistrophe, and a dhāyā verse. Then the rathantara pragātha. Then the hymn, RV., VI, 22, exchanging for VI, 22, 2, the verse X, 28, 2. For the left bāhu precisely the same treatment of the bṛhat sāman, but no dhāyā, and the hymn X, 28, with VI, 22, 2, as its second verse. The prahastakas are respectively VIII, 97, 13-15, and VIII, 97, 10-12.

Then comes XVIII, 6, the caturuttarāṇi, viz. RV., VIII, 92, 19-21; VIII, 12, 22-24; I, 10, 1-3; VIII, 88, 3, 4 (a pragātha, or 3-5), by half verses; I, 80, 1-3 (pañkṭikāṃsam); VI, 34, 1-3; and I, 83, 4-6, pacchas, then the sūdadohas.

It is worthy of note that, just as the Aitareya refers only to the ṛṣa brahmā verses by the pratika of the first verse, so the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 15, 4, also uses only the pratika. It is almost impossible to avoid the conclusion that this book XVIII (and presumably, also XVII) must be not earlier nor later than the main body of the Sūtra, and this will modify to some extent Hillebrandt's view, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 25. Similarly the Āraṇyaka may be written after the Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra. Cf. my note in J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 410-412.

In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 18, 1, it is said that Viśvāmitra was the seer of RV., IV, 19, 22 and 23, and that Vāmadeva asṛjate them, tān kṣīpraṃ samapatat, while in IV, 30, 2, RV., IV, 20 and 21, are also declared to be sampāta hymns: Vāmadevo vā imāhl lokān apalyat tān sampātāḥ samapatat (Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, p. 103).

3. (Then come) the eighty gāyatrī tristichs.¹ He takes out the last three verses of the hymn, 'Great is Indra who by his might' (RV., VIII, 6). (Then come) three verses of the hymn, 'A cake for us' (RV., VIII, 78). Of the verses following, 'Indra indeed is the drinker of Soma beyond others' (RV., VIII, 2, 4), he omits the last three. Of the others he omits, 'Sweet are the draughts of Soma, come hither' (ibid., 28), and puts in its place the verse, 'No other mighty one' (RV., VIII, 80, 1). (Then comes) one verse, 'Born with a hundred strengths' (RV., VIII, 77, 1). (Then comes) the remainder (of the hymn, RV., VIII, 92), 'Much invoked, much praised' (ibid., 2). He omits the last verse of the hymn, 'To him that hath renowned treasures' (RV., VIII, 93, 1). (Then come the hymns), 'The deeds of the impetuous one' (RV., VIII, 32), 'Those that kindle Agni' (RV., VIII, 45), and 'For us, O Indra, rich in food' (RV., VIII, 81), and the following hymn. (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse.

4. (Then come) the eighty brhasī tristichs.¹ There are twenty-nine verses

In Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 7, the verses are: RV., VIII, 6, 1-45; 2, 4-27; 31-39; 45, 1-42; 32, 1-30; 92, 4-18; 22-33; 93, 4-18; 22-33; III, 51, 10-12; VIII, 76, 10-12; 69, 4-6; VI, 45, 1-30, which gives 81 trcas and not 80. The number is reduced to 80 by the omission of one of the three trcas, III, 51, 10-12; VIII, 76, 10-12; 69, 4-6.

of the hymn, 'Sing of nought else' (RV., VIII, 1). He omits the seventh and eighth stanzas of the twenty stanzas beginning, 'Drink the fragrant Soma' (RV., VIII, 3, 1). (Then come) fourteen stanzas beginning, 'When, Indra, forward, backward, upward' (RV., VIII, 4, 1). Then fifteen stanzas beginning, 'We with the Soma thee' (RV., VIII, 33, 1). In the hymn, 'May not thee the sacrificers' (RV., VII, 32), he omits the dvipadā (ibid., 3), and the pragātha connected with the Rathantara Sāman (ibid., 22). Further he omits the pragātha, 'No one Sudās' chariot' (ibid., 10), and inserts in its place the pragātha, 'Thee men but yesterday' (RV., VIII, 99, 1). (Then) six Vālakhilya hymns beginning, 'Him of good gifts' (RV., VIII, 49, 1). (Then) the rest (of the hymn, RV., VI, 46), beginning, 'Who active ever slays the foe' (ibid., 3). (Then) two hymns beginning, 'May this delightful one for thee' (RV., III, 44, 1). He omits the seventh and eighth stanzas of the hymn, 'Both let him hear' (RV., VIII, 61). He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'With strength him that finds treasure' (RV., VIII, 66). (Then come) eleven stanzas beginning, 'Who is king of men' (RV., VIII, 70, 1). (Then the hymns), 'Him who works wonders, enduring the onslaught' (RV., VIII, 88), 'To be invoked by us in all' (RV., VIII, 90), and nine verses of the hymn, 'The blessings thou dost bear, Indra' (RV., VIII, 97). (Then comes) the sūdadaha verse.

Of these, however, no less than 80 are satobṛhatī verses. In Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 8-11, the ālīti is given as follows: VIII, 97, 1-9; VIII, 62, 7-9; I, 36, 7, 8; VIII, 70, 7-12; = 20 pratyakṣabṛhatīs; then VI, 46, 3-10; VII, 32, 1, 2, 4-9; VII, 32, 12-21; VII, 32, 24-27; VIII, 1, 1-4; mā u tvā purūvāso; VIII, 3, 9-12; VIII, 3, 17-20; VIII, 4, 1-14; VIII, 61, 3-6; VIII, 61, 9-18; VIII, 66, 3-14. Hillebrandt in his index gives the references differently, but this is apparently due to a confusion between pragāthas and stanzas. There are really 43 pragāthas. The one mā u, &c., is not apparently from the Samhitā; Hillebrandt's indices all ignore it, and it does not appear in Bloomfield's Vedic Concordance. Of the last six, three only are selected to make up the 40. Then come 20 more pratyakṣabṛhatīs, VIII, 1, 5-24. Then 20 more: VIII, 1, 25-29; VIII, 33, 1-15. Then 40 pragāthas, the three over the first 40, VIII, 70, 1-6; VIII, 88, 1, 2; VIII, 90, 1-6; VIII, 99, 1-8; VIII, 49-55 (the Vālakhilyas), omitting VIII, 53, 5, 6; 54, 3, 4. Then I, 175, 1; VI, 42, 4; III, 53, 18; VI, 47, 19; VIII, 78, 10; VIII, 89, 7; VIII, 101, 13; X, 102, 1; 3; 12; making 10 bṛhatīs, and III, 44; 45, making up 20 in all. The whole bārhatī ālīti consists therefore of 80 bṛhatīs and 80 (not 160 as Friedländer) pragāthas, giving (80 + 80 =) 160 bṛhatīs and 80 satobṛhatīs, just as in the Aitareya. Cf. Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 8 and 9, for the gāyatrī and bārhatī ālīti.

5. (Then come) the eighty uṣṇih tristichs.¹ There are the two hymns beginning, 'Indra who is the greatest drinker of the Soma' (RV., VIII, 12, 1). He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'Sing forth to him' (RV., VIII, 15). (Then comes) the hymn, 'To Indra sing the sāman' (RV., VIII, 98). He omits the last three stanzas of the hymn, 'Let us utter, O comrades' (RV., VIII,

According to Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra the verses are: RV., VIII, 13, 1-33; VIII, 12, 1-21, 25-33; VIII, 15, 1-12; VIII, 24, 1-27; I, 84, 7-9; V, 40, 1-3, = 36 trcas or 108 uṣṇih stanzas, XVIII, 12. Then, XVIII, 13, come RV., IV, 30, 1-6; IV, 30, 9-22; IV, 32, 1-21; I, 30, 1-15; VIII, 14, 1-15; VIII, 16, 1-12; VIII, 64, 1-12; VIII, 82, 1-9 (Hillebrandt's I, 30, 1-5, and VIII, 82, 1-7 are slips), making 104 gāyatrī stanzas. Then VIII, 21, 1-16, kakubh pragūthas; then VIII, 98, 1-12 in *uṣṇih*s. We thus get 240 stanzas, consisting of 120 (108 + 12) *uṣṇih*s, 104 *gāyatrī*s, 8 *kakubh*s, and 8 *satobṛhatī*s (i.e. VIII, 21, 1-16). The Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 10, points out that to get 240 *uṣṇih*s it is necessary to take away four syllables from each of the 80 *satobṛhatī*s, which with 160 *bṛhatī*s make up (V, 2, 4) the bārhatī tṛcāṣṭī. Then the 8 *kakubh*s give 8 *uṣṇih*s, while the 8 *satobṛhatī*s yield each three, or 24 in all, sets of four syllables. Adding the 80 and the 24 we have 104 sets of four syllables, which added to the *gāyatrī*s give 104 *uṣṇih*s, to which again must be added 120 *uṣṇih*s, 8 *kakubh*s, and 8 *uṣṇih*s, left after the deduction of 24 syllables from each satobṛhatī, making a grand total of 240 *uṣṇih*s.

This complicated version, as Dr. Friedländer points out, probably arises from an attempt to remedy the apparent inaccuracy of the Aitareya in permitting 80 *satobṛhatī*s in the bārhatī aṣṭī. Its success is not obvious, and that the attempt should be made may fairly be reckoned a sign of lateness.

24, 1). Then three tristichs, 'Who alone bestowed' (RV., I, 84, 7), 'Come hither to what is pressed with stones' (RV., V, 40, 1), and, 'Under whose sway Śambara' (RV., VI, 43, 1). Gāyatrī verses become uṣṇih verses by equalization. Every seven gāyatrīs make six *uṣṇih*s. (Then come) the hymn beginning, 'If, Indra, I, like thee' (RV., VIII, 14, 1), and the two hymns beginning, 'The lord of men' (RV., VIII, 16, 1). He omits the last two stanzas of the second hymn. He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'For the strength that slays Vṛtra' (RV., III, 37). (Then come) three hymns beginning, 'The doer of fair deeds to our aid' (RV., I, 4, 1). Then two hymns beginning, 'Indra, lasting wealth' (RV., I, 8, 1). He omits the last stanza of the hymn, 'Who has brought from afar' (RV., VI, 45). Then come three stanzas of the hymn beginning, 'Let splendid feasts be ours' (RV., I, 30, 13). (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse. In the case of all these three sets of eighty tristichs, there is made a pause after the half-stanza. The eighty tristichs are the food, and the vasa verses are the stomach (of the bird). The vasa hymn begins,² 'Worthy of thee, O wealthy one' (RV., VIII, 46, 1), and ends, 'Gainer, gainer of good' (ibid., 20). The verse, 'Giving wealth' (ibid., 15) is a dvīpadā, and, 'Now then' (ibid.) an ekapadā. It ends with the verse, 'Of that milk yielder' (RV., VIII, 69, 3). (Then comes) the sūdadohas verse.

² Cf. I, 5, 1. The explanation of the number 21 stanzas given by Sāyaṇa there and here is that the passage ends with verse 20 and the sūdadohas verse makes up the 21. This view may be supported by the fact that the sūdadohas verse is here set out with its prastika. It is most probable that we should understand that the 21 stanzas are made up by the inclusion of the sūdadohas verse, and then that there follows again that verse in its usual capacity of separating the different parts of the whole. Sāyaṇa does not clearly appear thus to have taken it, but it seems most probably so, and the translation is based on this view.

Śāṅkhāyana in Āraṇyaka, II, 11, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 14, takes the whole hymn, VIII, 46, as being used. The priority of the Aitareya is evident as vv. 21-24 contain a dānasūti of Pṛthuvīśravas. The same remark applies to the Śaṭapatha Brāhmaṇa, see Eggeling, S. B. E., XLII, 112.

It is worthy of note that an annotator in S⁹ considers that Sāyaṇa's explanation of the number 21 is inconsistent (this is not the case) and inaccurate. He argues that the 21 stanzas are made up by splitting ver. 15 into an ekapadā and a dvīpadā. This view is at first sight plausible, but the mention here of these divisions is more probably due to an explanation of yathopapādām in I, 5, 1, and so Sāyaṇa there takes it. The other view is, however, accepted by Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, 112, n. 2, who points out that the version of the Mahaduktha contained in MS. Ind. Off. 1729 D gives ver. 15 as an ekapadā and a dvīpadā, which certainly tells against Sāyaṇa.

For gāyatrīs and uṣṇih, cf. R̥gveda Prātiśākhya, XVI, 10 sq.; for sāmpadā, Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XV, 10, 5.

ADHYĀYA 3.

(Then come) the thigh (verses).¹ In the hymn, 'O Indra and Agni, ye two' (RV., VIII, 40), (he recites) the half-stanzas as gāyatrīs,² but the second half of the second as an anuṣṭubh, up to the last stanza. The hymn, 'To thee, the mighty, the intoxicated one' (RV., X, 50), has nivids inserted. Between the two hymns, 'Who in the forest as it were has been set down' (RV., X, 29), and 'Who first is born, the wise one' (RV., II, 12), are³ inserted the hymn, 'Come hither standing on thy chariot-seat' (RV., III, 43), and the stanza, 'Wandering alone in the midst of many' (RV., X, 55, 5). As many decades⁴ of verses in triṣṭubh and jagatī addressed to Indra as they insert, after transforming them into brhatīs, so many years may a man be fain to live beyond the normal life, at the rate of ten verses for a year⁵; or he need not do so. (Then come) the

¹ Cf. I, 5, 1. The verses are RV., VIII, 40, 1-10; X, 50, 1-7; X, 29, 1-18; III, 43, 1-8; X, 55, 5; II, 12, 1-15; X, 178, 1-3; an ekapadā; I, 11, 1-8; VII, 23, 1-6; VII, 24, 1-4, 6, 5.

In Śāṅkhāyana the vala hymn is followed, XVIII, 15, by the dvīpadās, I, 2, 2, above; then comes the Aindrāgna sūkta, VIII, 40. Then the āvopana, RV., X, 167, 1; II, 21, 1-6; I, 84, 10-12; VII, 31, 10-12; VI, 46, 1-3. Then the anuṣṭubha samāmnūya, RV., I, 10, 4-12; I, 11, 1-8; I, 84, 1-6; I, 72, 2-5; I, 176, 1-5; V, 35, 1-7; V, 38, 1, 2; V, 39, 1-4; VI, 44, 1-6; VIII, 34, 1-15; VIII, 63, 4-6; VIII, 89, 5, 6; VIII, 95; X, 152. Then the triṣṭupchata, RV., I, 32; VI, 25; II, 12; II, 14; III, 45; III, 46; III, 51, 4-6; IV, 16; VII, 24; VII, 23; VIII, 69, 13-15. See Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 16-20; Āranyaka, II, 12-16. These confused masses of verses show distinctly the later character of the Śāṅkhāyana ritual. See also Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 6, 2, 3, where RV., X, 50, is called the spine; IX, 1, 1, 44; 3, 3, 19; in the last passage the vala is given as 35 in Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 223), which must be an error as there are only 33 verses, cf. Introd., p. 36.

² The second verse is a dvīpadā in śakvarī. The first three feet make up a gāyatrī, that is, they are recited with a pause after the second foot and om after the third. The second four feet are recited as an anuṣṭubh, with a pause after the second and om after the fourth. The last is a triṣṭubh, and it is recited by pādas, that is, a pause after the first foot and om after the second. The remaining ten verses are in mahāpāṇkti, and therefore are each divided into two gāyatrīs for recitation. It is characteristic of the deliberate differences between Aitareya and Śāṅkhāyana that the latter, XVIII, 16, divides ver. 2 into an anuṣṭubh and a gāyatrī, not vice versa.

⁵ This must be the meaning, and so Sāyana takes it. He, however, takes na vā as meaning that each brhatī produces a year of life, contradicting the ten-brhatī rule. This is not impossible, in which event he points out the insertion of the nine triṣṭubh verses gives eleven brhatīs or eleven years' longer life. But it is not natural, and it ignores triṣṭubhjagatīnām, there being no jagatīs in the nine verses, and therefore in accordance with the ordinary use hymn, 'That steed impelled by the gods' (RV., X, 178), and the ekapadā,⁸ 'Indra rules all.' (Then comes) the anuṣṭubh hymn, 'All songs have caused Indra to grow' (RV., I, 11). Having recited the first half-stanza of the first stanza of this hymn, he combines⁷ the first half-stanza of the second stanza with the second half-stanza (of the first stanza), (joining) quarter-stanza with quarter-stanza so as to make anuṣṭubhs. Up to the last stanza he combines every succeeding half-stanza with the preceding. The rest are done in the usual way. (There are) six verses beginning, 'Drink, Indra, the Soma, let it gladden thee' (RV., VII, 23, 1). Having recited four verses of the hymn, 'Thy place, O Indra, is made on thy seat' (RV., VII, 24), and then joining⁸ the last stanza, he ends with the second last stanza. The Śastra finished,⁹ he mutters the ukthasampad. In the place of the ukthavīrya the ukthadoha is used.

2. 'Thou art the head of the world,' the essence of speech, the fire of breath, of na vā in Āśvalāyana (e. g. Śrauta Sūtra, VI, 5, 22), Śaunaka's pupil,¹⁰ I take it to mean that, unless one is āyushkāma, one need not insert the verses. Cf. Sāyaṇa's note: yady āyushkāmāḥ syāt tadānīm . . . prakṣīpet, whence it appears that he did not regard the āvapana as essential. He may be combining two differing previous comments. The idea is curiously inverted.

⁸ Not in the Ṛgveda. See Sāmaveda, I, 456; Vājasaneyi Saṃhitā, XXXVI, 8; Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VIII, 2, 21; Sāmavidhāna Brāhmaṇa, II, 6, 7, which all have vāsvasya rājati.

⁸ For a formal definition of sampata, see Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 2, 10.

⁹ In the Agniṣṭoma, the prakṛti, the Niṣkevalya Śastra, Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 339, n., ends with a Mantra, ukthaṇi vācīndrīyopahṛṇvate tvā, Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, V, 15, 23, of which ukthaṇi vācīndrīya forms the ukthasampad, and the rest the ukthavīrya. The Hotṛ here recites the sampad, but in the place of the ukthavīrya come the ukthadoha, i. e. the verses set out in V, 3, 2. For the ukthavīrya, cf. V, 1, 5, n. 6; Haug, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 177; Eggeling, l. c., 327, n.; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 233. Sāyaṇa ascribes the verses and formulae to a śākhāntara as usual.

¹⁰ The rendering of these verses is very doubtful, and I have mainly followed Sāyaṇa. The difficulty is increased by the fact that E has here no accents, and Rājendralāla has apparently followed a most corrupt MS. or has scattered accents at random. They do not occur in Śāṅkhāyana. Both Rājendralāla and the Ānandāśrama edition print the verses with stops only at śdram, vydma, piuvati, and dūhānam (and in the former case also at ai), as if they were prose. They seem clearly, however, to be intended as verses, and I have divided them into jagatis with mixed triṣṭubhs. Indraḥ may belong to the first verse, and other divisions are no doubt possible, but the original metrical form of e. g. rtām satyām vijigyānam vīdvanam is certain. For similar cases of verse treated as prose, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VIII, 25, 3, and 27, 2 and 3, where lokas appear in prose form. In VIII, 27, 3, bhāvati is two syllables only the abode of mind, the entrance of the eye, the source of the ear, the resting-place of the heart, thou art all. (Thou art) Indra, the undying sacrifice, the ambrosia, the sky, right, truth, conquest, decision, the end of speech, the pervading, that which is beyond all, the light, the udder, the unanswerable, that which was before. Thou art all,² speech, the water with the lightning that goes thither and returns,³ as elsewhere. A striking example of verse disguised as prose is the inscription on the Piprahva stūpa, see Fleet, J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 111 sq., following, with minor differences, Thomas, J. R. A. S., 1906, pp. 462 sq. In the Aitareya, ll. cc., we have:—

* The Bṛhaddevatā, IV, 139, in the 'B' recension mentions Āśvalāyana, and though this may point to the verse being late, it may also be quite correct, since a pupil of Śaunaka appears to have been the author of the Bṛhaddevatā, cf. Macdonell, I, xxiv, and Āśvalāyana was evidently one of his oldest pupils.

Kṣatreṇa kṣatram jayati balena balam ānute |
yasyaivaṃ vidvān brāhmaṇo rāṣṭragopaḥ purohitaḥ ||
tasmai vilāḥ samjānate sanmukhā ekamanasaḥ |
yasyaivaṃ vidvān brāhmaṇo rāṣṭragopaḥ purohitaḥ || 25 || 2 ||
tasya rājā mitram bhavati (2 syll.) dviśantam apabādhati |
yasyaivaṃ vidvān brāhmaṇo rāṣṭragopaḥ purohitaḥ |
tasmai vilāḥ, &c., as above, and in other places fragments of verse appear, as is only natural, since gnomic sayings like them tend in all languages to become verse. The old character of these Ślokas appears from their metrical form, and they may be compared with the verse cited from Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 4, 3, by Oldenberg (S. B. E., XXX, xix). Similar verses composed at later dates are found in the characteristic late metre in the Gṛhya Sūtras, quite freely (Oldenberg, l. c., xxxv-xxxvii), one being attributed (Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 7, 16) to Śaunaka, and Ślokas are recognized in the lists of compositions, e. g. Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 4, 10; IV, 1, 2; see Sieg, Die Sagenstoffe des Rgveda, pp. 7 sq.

³ Sāpru is so explained by Sāyaṇa, and pūrāḥ and arvāḥ probably go with salilam. In the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, I, 9; 10, this passage from Indraḥ . . . amṛtam dukhānam appears, but in a different connexion and in an inferior, perhaps secondary, form, which looks as if it were borrowed from the Āraṇyaka. The parallelism has escaped not only Oertel, but also Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance). Quite irrelevantly appear the words (the gīyatrī as brahman is the subject of discourse): tasyaitāni nāmānīndraḥ karmāksitir amṛtam vyomānto vācaḥ | bahur bhūyas sarvaṃ sarvasmād uttarāṃ jyotiḥ | ṛtaṃ satyaṃ vijñānaṃ vivācanaṃ aprativedyaṃ | pūrvaṃ sarvaṃ sarvā vāk | sarvaṃ idam apī dhenuḥ pīnate parāḥ arvāk || 9 || sā prthaksalilam kāmāduḥkṛtī prāṇasaṅghitaṃ cakṣuṣrotraṃ vākprabhūtaṃ manasā vyāptam hrdayāgraṃ brāhmaṇabhaktaṃ annasubham varṣapavitram gobhagaṃ prthivyuparam tapastanu Varuṇapariyatanaṃ Indroṣṣṭham sahasrākṣaram cyutadhāram amṛtam dukhān sarvān imāṃś lokān abhivṛkṣarati | Oertel renders, 'These are its names: Indra, action, imperishableness, the immortal, end of the firmament of speech; the manifold, the numerous, the all, the light higher than the all; righteousness, truth, distinction, decision which is not to be contradicted; the ancient all, all speech. This all also, [like] a cow, fattens hitherward, thitherward. She that milks immortality possessing individual oceans (?), possessing wish granting imperishableness, connected with breath, possessing sight and hearing, superior by speech, permeated by the mind, having the heart as its point, apportioned to the Brāhmins, pleasant through food, having the rain as means of purification (?), cow-protecting, higher than the earth, having penance as a body, having Varuṇa as an enclosure, having Indra as leader, possessing a thousand syllables, possessing ten thousand streams, flows in all directions unto all these worlds.' It should be noted that the MSS. read vijijhānani, a clear error for vijigyānam, properly a perf. part. middle of √ji (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 809), a word elsewhere unknown but of interesting function (for g, cf. Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, 146), which is rendered very probable by the metre, aprativācyaḥ (C), sā, cakṣuśrotam, hṛdayogam, brāhmaṇābhra-kṣtram (a), °bhātrām (B), °bhṛtram (C), Varuṇapariyatanam, dūhānāḥ. These readings confirm the brāhmaṇābhra-kṣtram of the Āraṇyaka text. Hṛdayāgram is no doubt a possible and an easy conjecture, but Sāyaṇa already had hṛdayogam, and its appearance here certainly shows that the tradition hardened to hṛdayogam at a very early date. Annaśubham is tempting, but uncertain as Sāyaṇa read annaśubhe. Cf. Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, IX, 5, 1, 12, satyānṛte vācam for Mantrāyaṇīya Saṃhitā, III, 7, 3, satyānṛtām. So in Atharvaveda, XIV, 1, 11, śrotre replaces RV., X, 85, 11, śrotam quite wrongly (cf. Whitney, Translation, p. 742). I consider therefore that (especially in view of the accent) it is very likely that annaśubham should be replaced. For hṛdayogam if it really is = hṛdayāgram might be compared Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad, VI, 35, dvidharmondham for °āndham (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, li). But error of text is easy. Vyomānto vācaḥ must, I think, be divided into vyōma and ānto vācāḥ. The sense ascribed to Indraśreṣṭham is possible, and Indrajyeṣṭham may mean (as in RV., AV., and TS.) 'having Indra as its best'. Varuṇapariyatanam may perhaps be right, but it is far from certain, and Sāyaṇa had varuṇāvācītanam, a more recondite form (see n. 12 on II, 4, 3) than that of the Brāhmaṇa. The words bahur bhūyas should be bahor bhūyaḥ. This example answers the query of Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit Syntax, § 122, n. 2, as to whether the idiom 'süßer als süß' is Vedic as well as classic (his Sanskrit Syntax, § 251, 3). The same phrase is found in V, 1, 5, in a Mantra passage, and in the parallel passage, Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 8. Cf. also such phrases as bahu ca me bhūyaḥ ca me, Taittiriya Saṃhitā, IV, 7, 4, 2; J.R.A.S., 1909.

The accents of the R edition are very incorrect. Vivācanām is quite impossible. In the case of the compounds R has hṛdayogam, brāhmaṇābhra-kṣam, vārjapacūtram, vākpradhūtam, pṛthivyuparam, tāpastām, Indrajyeṣṭham, ayūtākṣaram, brāhmaṇārcasam, Varjāpavitram is supported by varjānirñij (RV.), and varjāmedas (AV., °medhas, AV. Paipp.); sahāsradhūram by the RV.; ayūtākṣaram by analogy with sahāsradhūram, &c.; tāpastonu and brāhmaṇābhra-kṣam depend on analogy; Indrajyeṣṭham has abundant authority; gṛbhagam may be compared with gūmagha (RV.), but cf. gubhāj (RV.). Vākpradhūtam and satyasaṃmitam are supported by usage (Macdonell, Vedic Grammar, p. 96; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, II, i, 227 sq.), and hṛdayogam is probable (Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1287 a, gives several examples of different accents, Wackernagel, pp. 238 sq., decides for accent on the first member as usual in determinatives with adjectives at the end (for examples, cf. p. 233)). On this analogy, pṛthivyuparam may be right, or possibly we should read pṛthivy uparam as two words, but the gender of uparam would be strange if it is a noun (meaning either 'lower Soma stone' (RV., AV.; but cf. Ved. Stud., I, 108 sq.), or 'lower part of sacrificial post' (VS.)), since there it is always masc. (cf. n. 5). The accent on *Vārjān*⁵ must remain doubtful, but if it is a case of a past part., the accent should be on the first. None of these words have found their way into Wackernagel's lists.

For similar cases of double accent in MSS., cf. Scheftelowitz, Die Apokryphen des Rgveda, pp. 39, 49 (from B); Wackernagel, p. 40, points out that in cases of compounds the Atharvaveda, XIX and XX, Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, Taittiriya Āraṇyaka and Maitrāyaṇī Upaniṣad (he ignores this work) are very badly accented. His theory of accent (pp. 40 sq.) lays stress on the fact that determinatives (save those with verbal second parts—other than forms in -ta, -ti) originally had the accent on the first part and only later on the second. The accents here must depend to some extent on (a) the validity of the theory, (b) the view as to the age of the Āraṇyaka.

measured by truth, which is produced by speech, and proceeds from the mind, what is truth in the heart, and borne by Brahmins. (Thou art) food and prosperity, purified by the rains, rich in cows, that beyond the earth,⁵ to which Varuṇa and Vāyu most resort, that which has for its body penance,⁶ has Indra as its mightiest, which milks ambrosia, with a thousand streams and countless letters.⁷ These, O hymn, are thy powers; there are the powers of speech.⁸ With these for me now milk the great wealth of ambrosia. Prajāpati created this prayer, the essence of the Vedas. With it may I obtain all; let it win all desires greatly. Thou art bhūh, bhuvaḥ, and sva, the three, thou art the Veda.⁹ Milk, O prayer,¹⁰ children for me. Life and breath milk for me. Cattle and folk milk for me. Prosperity and glory milk for me. The world (to come), splendour of renown, courage, prosperity in sacrifice, milk for me.¹¹ All this he makes the Adhvaryu repeat, if he does not know (the Mantras). Then being urged on to sacrifice (by the Adhvaryu, who says), 'Om,¹¹ offer the Soma singer of the hymn,' pinvdt (cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 716), the nom. of the participle, or pinvati, reading dhenih. The Jaiminiya Upaniṣad pinvate may arise from a misreading of i or ī.

⁵ Gōbhagam may mean 'prospering cows', and varṣāpavitram, 'purifying by rains.' Pythi-vyupadam is yūpatya mūlam (Sāyaṇa). If this is correct (cf. n. 3), the next adjective may belong to it or to tāpastanu, but it is much more likely to be merely = 'beyond the earth', as in the Jaiminiya Upaniṣad, which has Varuṇapariyatanam and annasubham, 'pleasant through food.'

⁹ The conjecture vedāsi for veda asi is easy, but unnecessary; cf. n. 11 on III, 2, 4; RV., II, 6, 7; I, 45, 6; II, 3, 6; III, 14, 3, &c. See also Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, I, 15, 3, for veda 'si. To take trayo, &c., as a separate Mantra is wrong.

¹⁰ Sāyaṇa takes brahma as accusative. I prefer to regard it as vocative, despite the apparent parallelism of the next sentences. For another neuter voc., cf. II, 7, n. 1. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 4, 13, has prajām me dhukṣva, and also āyur me dhukṣva, paśūn me dhukṣva. On the other hand Atharvaveda, X, 8, 25 has adhok — brahma ca tapal ca.

¹¹ Cf. V, 3, 3. The Adhvaryu utters the praiṣa twice, see Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, I, 5, 3: ekaiḥam preṣito yajati. See Sabbathier, Agniṣṭoma, p. 58, for the phrase, and for the gen., Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 297 b; Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 160.

uttering the cry, 'We who sacrifice,' he offers sacrifice with the usual¹² (stanza), and holding back as it were his breath, repeats a secondary vaśaś.¹³ The accompaniment of the vaśaś is described elsewhere.¹⁴ The Adhvaryu brings up the vessel containing the libation and the (three) atigrāhya bowls.¹⁵ As soon as he perceives the food, the Hotṛ descends from the swing towards the east.¹⁶

¹⁵ Cf. Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 3, 22; Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 21, 10, vaiśvakarmaṇo 'tigrāhyāḥ. They are drawn 'over and above' (ati), Weber, Ind. Stud., IX, 235; Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 402, n. 4; XLI, 6, n. 2.

¹⁶ Cf. I, 2, 4; Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, II, 17; Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 21, 6; 7. For yathā na with fut., cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, pp. 596 sq.; Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, §§ 197, 277. This case illustrates admirably the origin of the use in its relation of iti and the 2nd person; see also Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā, II, 2, 7; IV, 1, 9; Taittirīya Samhitā, II, 3, 5, 1; J. R. A. S., 1909.

Then they tie up the swing to the west that it may not slay the reciter when about to eat. For the Hotṛ eats seated on the place of the swing. Then the Hotṛ consumes the (libation in the) vessel with the words uttered in response,¹⁷ 'May speech, the deity, rejoice in the Soma,' 'May Soma, the king, shower life on me for my breath,' 'May my breath milk mightily all life.' The third pressing (in this rite) is taken over¹⁸ from the last day of the Abhiplava rite, except as regards the hymn containing nivids addressed to the All-gods (RV., I, 89). In its place are inserted forty-one verses of the 'water' hymn of Dīrghatamas, 'Of that noble grey sacrificer' (RV., I, 164), and the hymn anobhadriya (RV., I, 89). The strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiśvadeva Śāstra are taken over from the one day form¹⁹ (the Viśvajit). If the Yajñāyajñīya Sāman is omitted,²⁰

¹⁷ Upasṛṣṭena is explained by Sāyaṇa as itarānujñāpūrvaḥ; the word occurs often in Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, but not in a parallel passage. Cf., however, XVIII, 1, 12. The verse vāg devī (jushānā) somasya tṛpyatu is found in Vājasaneyi Samhitā, VIII, 37, and elsewhere, Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. 853^b. Sa me, &c., is a quasi verse. It is tempting to render āyuh as if it were a dative, 'may Soma rain on me for life, for breath,' and it might possibly be so taken as the sentence is a Mantra, and therefore not to be judged by the ordinary rules of prose (cf. Bloomfield, Vedic Concordance, p. viii). In that case āyuhprāṇāya would not be a tatpuruṣa compound, since 'the breath of life' is not in Sanskrit āyuhprāṇa, nor yet a dvandva, but rather a case in which the mere base is accepted as sufficient to denote the case relation when followed by a case form in a parallel word, cf. e.g. RV., I, 26, 9, where Max Müller would so render (see Oldenberg, S. B. E., XLVI, 15) āmṛta mṛtyānām, and see Pischel, Vedische Studien, I, 60 sq., 225 sq.; Jacobi, Gött. gel. Anz., 1880, p. 855; Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, I, xvii, and II, i, 157, who accepts this view of RV., I, 26, 9. Cf., however, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, i.e. on n. 14, where sarvāyuh sarvāyutvāya occurs. The gen. is one of partitive force, cf. Delbrück, Altindische Syntax, p. 160; Mouro, *Homeric Grammar*², p. 146. For loc. with ār, cf. Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, VI, 3, 10; for acc. exx. in Ind. Stud., IX, 295.

¹⁸ For the Abhiplava, see Āśvalāyana Śrauta Sūtra, VII, 6; Eggeling, S. B. E., XXVI, 403. It has six days. The hymn referred to is RV., I, 89; cf. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 22, 8. The hymn, RV., I, 164, 1, is called salila also in Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, II, 18, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 22, 7. It is of course derived from v. 41, gaurīr mimāya salilāni takṣati; cf. also Bṛhaddevatā, IV, 43.

²⁰ The Āgnimāruta for the Śāṅkhāyana is given in detail in Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 23; cf. Āranyaka, II, 18. It consists of RV., III, 3; V, 55; the Yajñāyajñīya or a substitute, VI, 48, not noted by Bloomfield (Vedic Concordance, p. 735^a) who omits also any reference to this passage; I, 141. If the Yajñāyajñīya Sāman is employed, the Āgnimāruta Śāstra constitutes itself in the Aitareya thus: RV., III, 2; I, 43, 6; V, 55; VI, 48, 1 and 2; VII, 17, 11 and 12; I, 99, 1; X, 9, 1, &c., the rest being as in the prakṛti (Sāyaṇa). If the Iṇḍa Sāman is then the strophe and antistrophe (in the Āgnimāruta Śāstra) consist of the six stanzas, beginning, 'O Agni, thy fame, thy strength' (RV., X, 140, 1), when the Ilānda Sāman is employed (three stanzas being used). If more (than three) are used in this Sāman, then so many are employed (in the Śāstra) as the antistrophe, beginning, 'Agni, for ourselves as it were' (RV., X, 21, 1). Thus is completed the Mahāvratā and this day and the Agniṣṭoma.²¹ At the proper time they should carry the swing to the bath, and burn together the seats.

3. No one¹ who has not been initiated should recite the Mahāvratā, nor used, then for the two pragīthas, VI, 48, 1 and 2, and VII, 17, 11 and 12, are substituted X, 140, 1-3, and 4-6 respectively, being the two parts of the Ilānda Sāman. If, however, all the six stanzas (X, 140, 1-6) are used for the stotriya, then X, 21, 1-6, must form the anurūpa. So Śāṅkhāyana, who gives further variations. For the Ilānda, cf. Oldenberg, Gött. gel. Anz., 1908, p. 714.

²¹ The Mahāvratā is a form of the Agniṣṭoma, and so in a sense the Agniṣṭoma is finished. The utensils and the swing are both cleansed, while the vedi and the br̥ṣi are both consumed by fire. Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVIII, 24, develops the final close of the ceremony in some detail. The Āraṇyaka, II, 18, has: tad Agniṣṭomah saṁtiṣṭhate. The burning points clearly to an original sun spell. The question, however, has recently been raised whether the use of fire is not merely placular, cf. Frazer, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, p. 151, n. 4; Westermarck, Origin and Development of Moral Ideas, I, 56, n. 3. The usual view is that both the burning and the waving of torches in such rites are intended to evoke heat by magic. Cf. Warde Fowler, Roman Festivals, p. 84.

¹ Sāyaṇa, as usual, ignores the difficulties of this passage. (1) The words ity eke most probably refer to the whole passage (cf. III, 2, 4, n. 2), because the very first prohibition contradicts the passage above, V, 1, 5, n. 5, when the case of an adhikṣita Hotṛ is deliberately discussed. The sense then must be, as Eggeling (S. B. E., XLIII, 367, n. 1) takes it, that (1) no one but a dīkṣita can recite, and even he only (2) if there is a cityāgni, and (3) a year-long sattra, and (4) not even he for another unless he be father or teacher. It may be noted that Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, I, 1, prohibits recitation to another, save in the case of sattrins and of a father and a teacher, which corresponds with the rule here, since sattrins of course are entitled to recite for one another. But ibid., I, 5, and Śrauta Sūtra, XVII, 13, 6, regard a cityāgni as optional, perhaps a later idea (cf. Weber, Ind. Stud., XIII, 217, n.). The rule of those here cited thus excludes the Mahāvratā as anything but a sattra. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, XVI, 1, 2, insists on an altar at the Mahāvratā (Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv, n. 2). But it should be noted that this is inconsistent with the exception of the father and the teacher, for they could only be concerned—being ex hypothesi not sattrins, in an ekāha or ahīna rite. Possibly, however, the view that one can recite for a father or teacher does not contemplate the case of an ahīna or ekāha, but means that in a sattra the sacrificer may carry out the sacrifice for the benefit of his father or teacher though they are not initiated and cannot take part themselves; this view I incline to think the most probable, despite Dr. Friedländer's view (p. 29, n. 2). It cannot mean that, the teacher or father being dīkṣita, the Hotṛ recited for them only, for in the Mahāvratā all the sattrins equally obtain the benefits of the rite (cf. Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv sq.), and therefore are forbidden to perform for others outside the circle of the initiated,* cf. Śatapatha

* It may be noted that the prohibition of performing sacrifices by other than Brahmins is ascribed in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, II, 3, 1, 39 (cf. Kātyāyana Śrauta Sūtra, IV, 14, 11; Max should he recite it when there is no altar, nor should one recite it for another, nor if it does not last a year, so say some. Only one may recite it for a father or a teacher, for that is recited for oneself.² (The only³ utterance (of the Brāhmaṇa, IX, 5, 2, 12 and 13; X, 5, 2, 5. (2) Presumably for this reason Sāyaṇa renders the passage as equivalent to 'no one who is not dikṣita should recite the Mahāvratā at another's sacrifice (i. e. an ahīna or ekāha) unless there is a cityāgni; or unless that other is a father or a teacher'. His explanation is that the Mahāvratā is of three forms, ekāha, ahīna, and sattra. As in the sattra, the yajamāna and Hotṛ are identical, then the dikṣā is automatic. In the other two rites the Hotṛ is not the yajamāna, and may be either dikṣita or adikṣita. In the Agniṣtoma, &c., if svārthe he is dikṣita, as these are Soma sacrifices (cf. Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 125). If the sacrifice is not a Soma one, then he is not. Only the dikṣita can perform at a parakīya mahāvratākarman, and he only if there is a cityāgni. But all this is very difficult and inconsistent. The nāṣṭamvatsara ity eke he takes as a separate prohibition confined to one school. But this seems less likely. (3) Max Müller, S. B. E., I, 266, 267, takes the passage thus: 'No one who is adikṣita, uninitiated, should recite it for another person; nor should he do so, when the Mahāvratā is performed without (or with) an altar, or if it does not last one year.' But this hardly makes sense, since an adikṣita can never recite if there is a sattra, and the construction of the sentence shows that the series of prohibitions is not directed to an adikṣita but to a priest in general. He is not to recite if adikṣita, nor if there is no fire, &c. Dr. Friedländer, on Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 1, follows Max Müller, without commenting on the difficulties. (4) The only other possibility is to render, 'No one who is not initiated must recite, nor must one recite if there is no fire, nor for another (i. e. allowing ahīnas and ekāhas if by chance the yajamāna is the Hotṛ in fact).' Some say, 'nor if it be not a sattra. One may recite for a father, &c.' In this case the passage confirms in part the view that there was probably a cityāgni at the ekāha and ahīna rites, Eggeling, S. B. E., XLIII, xxv.

² Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, I, 1, has ātmane haivārya tac chastaṃ bhavati. The one gives the body, the other learning. Ātmano here is no doubt correct as less easy than ātmane. It is a predicative possessive gen., as in I, 2, 2, n. 8. Cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 298; Speiser, Vedische und Sanskrit Syntax, § 64. For arya, cf. Caland, Ueber das rit. Sūtra des Bandh., pp. 44, 45.

Müller, S. B. E., XXX, 321, to the fact that Brahmins only can eat the remains of a sacrifice. The reason is no doubt a reflex of the doctrine of the presence of the divinity in the sacrifice (which in certain cases forbids any eating whatever, e.g. Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 8, 31), for which see my article in the J. R. A. S., 1907, pp. 939 sq.; Robertson Smith, Rel. of Sem., I, 276 sq.

Adhvaryu) on the Hotr's Śāstras, whether accompanied or not by libations for Narāśamsa, is 'Offer the Soma with the hymn', and it also occurs in the Hotraka's Śāstras): This day one should not teach to one who is not a regular pupil, and has not been so for a year, assuredly not to one who has not been so for a year, nor to one who is not a brahmacārin and does not belong to the same school,⁴ assuredly not to one who does not belong to the same school, nor to one who has not come to that place.⁵ There should not be more than one saying or twice, twice only.⁶ 'One man should tell it to one,' says Jātūkarnya. 'Not to a child or a man in the third stage of life.'⁷ Nor standing to one standing, nor walking to one walking, nor lying to one lying, nor seated on a couch to one so seated, but seated on the ground to one so seated (should the teacher teach). Nor (should the pupil) lean backwards,⁸ nor forwards, nor be over clothed, nor adopt postures, but he should raise his knees, without wearing special apparel, and so learn. He should not learn when he has eaten flesh, or seen blood, or a dead body, or done what is unlawful, or anointed (his eyes) or oiled or rubbed his body, or had himself shaved, or bathed, or has put on colour, or put on a wreath, or had intercourse, or written,⁹ or obliterated unintelligible if he had had them before him. The reason for their insertion is obvious. For the libations, cf. L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 220. The gen. is presumably partitive, cf. Speljer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 67; V, 3, 2, n. 17.

writing. 'He should not finish learning this in one day,' says Jātūkarnya. 'He should do so,' says Gālava. 'He should finish all before the sets of eighty tristichs, and resting¹⁰ in another place learn the rest,' says Āgniveśyāyana. Where he learns this, he should learn nothing else; but where he learns something else he may at will learn this there also. He who does not study this does¹¹ not become a snātaka; even though he study much else, yet if he study not this, he does not become a snātaka. Nor should he forget this; even though he forgets something else, he should not forget this. Assuredly¹² never should he forget this. If he forget not this, let him know that it is enough for himself.¹³ Let him know that truly it is enough.¹⁴ He who knows this should not communicate¹⁵ nor dine nor amuse himself with one who knows this not.

¹⁰ Samayamānaḥ is taken as samāpāya by Sāyaṇa, which is possible. I follow Max Müller. On the passage as a whole, cf. Oldenberg, Prolegomena, p. 293. On the form Āgniveśyāyana, cf. Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1219. It occurs as a name of a grammarian in the Taittiriya Prātisākhya, XIV, 32. Āgniveśya occurs in the Vamśas in Bṛhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad, II, 6, 2, and IV, 6, 2, in both Kāṇva and Mādhyandina Śākhās (Max Müller, S. B. E., XV, 118, n.; 186, n.). Jātūkarnya (the word is found in the gaṇa, gargādī) occurs in the same passages with Gālava. The spelling seems clearly Jātu°, though in Max Müller's translation the two forms Jātu° and Jātu° occur. Jātūkarnya occurs in Śāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka, VIII, 10, and frequently in the Śāṅkhāyana Śrauta and Gṛhya Sūtras (III, 10, 1), Kātyāyana's Śrauta Sūtra, the Vājasaneyi Prātisākhya, and in Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, XXVI, 5. Gālava is known to Nirukta, IV, 3; Bṛhadāraṇyaka, II, 6, 3; IV, 6, 3; Bṛhaddevatā, and Pāṇini as a grammarian; see Max Müller, Ṛgveda Prātisākhya, p. 6.

¹¹ 'Should not become' is Sāyaṇa's version. Literally it must be 'is not a (true) snātaka'. Cf. Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 2, 8, 27. The exact force of the optative is rather doubtful: it may be that it is the indefinite use, of which examples undoubtedly occur in Sanskrit (cf. Speijer, Vedische und Sanskrit-Syntax, § 283; also in III, 2, 1, n. 1, and Intro., p. 61), or it may be an opt. in protasis with the apod. in the indic. to denote the certainty of the result, though the rule of similarity of mood is usually strictly observed in the older language, see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 581 f, who enforces his rule partly by alterations in the text of the Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā (see his review of v. Schroeder's ed., P. A. O. S., Oct., 1887); J. R. A. S., 1909, p. 153.

¹⁶ Then come general rules for all Vedic study, not for the Mahāvratā alone. These are found both the roots of the trees has been dried up,¹⁷ he should not study, nor in the forenoon,¹⁸ when the shadows meet, nor in the afternoon, nor when a thick cloud has risen; and when rain¹⁹ falls out of season he should stop his study of the Veda²⁰ for three nights, nor in this time²¹ should he tell tales, nor even in Gṛhya and Dharma Sūtras (Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, xxxiv, xxxv); Khādīra Gṛhya Sūtra, II, 11; cf. Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 8; VI, 1; Hillebrandt, Ritual-Litteratur, p. 56 and ref.; Gobhila Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 3; Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 3, 9-11; Gautama Dharma Sūtra, XVI, with Bühler's notes.

¹⁷ The time after the full moon of Pauṣa, i.e. January-February is meant, cf. Weber, Die vedischen Nachrichten von den Nakṣatra, II, 322 sq.; Oldenberg, S. B. E., XXX, 77, n.; Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra, I, 3, 9, 2, with Bühler's note; Manu, IV, 95; Yājñavalkya, I, 142; 143. The four months after the full moon of Āśāḍha are forbidden in Śāṅkhāyana, VI, 2, 1. The term is five months, beginning in the middle of Śrāvaṇa, Gautama Dharma Sūtra, XVI, 1 sq.; of Prauṣṭhapada, Gobhila Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 3, 1; Khādīra Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 2, 16. Śrāvaṇa is also given by Āśvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, III, 5, 2; 3; Śāṅkhāyana Gṛhya Sūtra, IV, 5, 2; Pāra-skara Gṛhya Sūtra, II, 10, 2; Hiranyakeśi Gṛhya Sūtra, II, 18, 1. The tmesis upa-nāpīte is very unusual, but upapurāṇe would be almost equally strange, though not impossible. Kakṛōdake is a curious expression, as explained by Sāyaṇa. The separation of prefix and verb is (see Caland, Ueber das rit. Sūtra des Bandh., pp. 48, 49) rare in the late Sūtra style and is difficult to assume here, though this may be quoted from an older (? metrical) text. Upapurāṇa seems elsewhere unknown in the sense 'somewhat (?) old'. Nothing is indeed more characteristic of the Vedic Sanskrit than the separation of particle and verb. Holtzmann (Grammatisches aus dem Mahābhārata, p. 48) says that the only example * in the Epic occurs in a pseudo-Vedic hymn to the A'vins, I, 3, 62: devā adhi viṣṭve viṣaktāḥ. Even the Bṛhaddevatā has no certain case of such separation. On Jacobi's theories of the beginning of the year (Festgruss an Roth, pp. 68-74), see Whitney, J. A. O. S., XVI, lxxxii sq.; Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 238-249 (dates of the commencement of Vedic study at p. 249); Thibaut, ibid., XXIV, 85-100; Oldenberg, Z. D. M. G., I, 451 sq.

¹⁸ When study is permissible (hardly 'at any time' as in Max Müller), he must not so study in the forenoon or afternoon, when shadows are meeting; i.e. he should begin at sunrise when the shadows first appear, and cease before sunset when they again disappear (Sāyaṇa).

¹⁹ For the case of a cloud, cf. Āpastamba, I, 3, 11, 31. Rain out of season (ibid., 27; Manu, III, 104, combines the two into a cloud out of the ordinary in the rains) is explained by Sāyaṇa as rain falling in months other than Śrāvaṇa and Bhādrapada, August and September, or according to the Smṛtikāras, under Nakṣatras other than the 13 from Ādrā to Jyēṣṭha.

* But cf. the warning as to Holtzmann's accuracy in Bühler, Ind. Ant., XXIII, 146, and Winternitz's review there cited. In this case the fact seems substantially correct.

at night at this time be fain to set them forth.²² 'This'²³ is the name of this great being. He who knows thus 'this' as the name of it, becomes brahman.

The end of the section renders it probable that it may be accepted as coming from Śaunaka. Otherwise the passage would be suspect, since it contains passages whose genuineness was doubted even before Sāyaṇa, and the possibility of it all being an interpolation cannot be entirely excluded. The use of brahman is striking, especially in the pred., and confirms the view that brahmā is not to be found save on good grounds in any early texts. For Atharvaveda, IV, 35, 2, see Weber, Ind. Stud., XVIII, 140; for Maitrāyaṇī Saṃhitā, II, 9, 1, see v. Schroeder, Ind. Lit., p. 91, n. 1. Muir, Texts, V, 323, finds him in Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa, XI, 5, 6, 9, &c., but needlessly. Hopkins, Religion of India, p. 195, and Oldenberg, *Buddha*², p. 30, n. 1, are vague. The St. Petersburg Dict., V, 138, cites Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, II, 7, 17, 1, as the oldest passage, but Sāyaṇa's view may be wrong, and none of the passages in Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 168, are necessarily so taken. He occurs, of course, in the Taittirīya Āraṇyaka, X, but that is not early, though its lateness has been needlessly exaggerated on insufficient grounds. Eggeling (cf. S.B.E., XLIV, 525) finds him nowhere in the comparatively late Śatapatha, though he appears in the Brhadāraṇyaka Upaniṣad (cf. Deussen, Phil. of the Upaniṣads, pp. 172 sq.), and in the later Upaniṣads and in the earliest Buddhist texts, which, however, can only be doubtfully dated.

ŚĀṆKHĀYANA ĀRANYAKA VII-XV.

THIS Appendix contains the text of Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, VII-XV, edited from the Berlin MS. Orient., fol. 630 (A)¹ and Bodleian MS. Sansk. e. 2² (B). The Bodleian MS., which is at least 200 years old, save for ff. 65 and 87 which were replaced in A.D. 1781, is extremely accurate on the whole, and the text which it presents is in most cases also supported by parallel readings in other Upaniṣads and Āranyakas. In many cases the old method of denoting the e, ai, o, au is retained, but not consistently, showing that the MS. belongs to the period of transition to the new style. Frequent errors are (1) the reduction of double consonant to single, e.g. tare dviṣantam, XII, 20; (2) the insertion of a needless h, e.g. sapatnaḥkṣayaṇam, XII, 19: this may be a mere graphical sign as apparently in the Mānava Gṛhya Sūtra³; (3) haplography, e.g. pramiye tare(d), XII, 20; hence probably bhaviṣyati for bhaviṣyafiti in IX, 7; (4) the writing of i for ī, e.g. maricir, VIII, 7. Many, though not all, of these errors have been corrected in a later hand, or sometimes by the first hand in the margin. The most serious source of error is probably omission, see e.g. VIII, 2, n. 7; 4, n. 3. As usual ch is written for cch in all cases,⁴ and l replaces ḷ; I have restored cch and ḷ. Further, as the text is attached to the Ṛgveda, I have treated two verbal prefixes as each separate and accented, as usual in the text of the Ṛgveda.⁵ Both MSS. agree in several errors, e.g. the omission of trayaṣya and the reading sicyet (for sicyeta) in VIII, 2.

The following list gives the correspondence between the two texts of the Aitareya and the Śāṅkhāyana Āranyakas:—

The verses in Adhyāya XII sometimes make nonsense, and could be corrected from the parallel texts. But all that can usefully be done is to edit what apparently was the text of the Āraṇyaka, recognizing that it already contained much that in the course of oral tradition had become corrupted. This is the principle on which Winternitz has edited the Mantrapāṭha,¹ and is the only sound method of procedure.

In the latter part bruvantam and para and upavādaḥ for bruvan, param, and apavādaḥ seem essential, giving the reasonable sense: 'If one is rebuking one who says the nirbhujā, the one (the latter) should say, "Thou hast fallen from the two lower (avara) places." So in the case of the pratrñṇa the two upper places are referred to, but in the case of the ubhayamantareṇa rebuke is impossible, and no reply is suggested. It would really be more natural to put the words of the apodosis in the mouth of the rebuker, but besides the difficulty of avara and uttara, it is hardly possible that the section should give directions for cursing persons who recite.

⁴ This is clearly an inaccurate reminiscence of Chāndogya Upaniṣad, III, 11, 6. ⁵ tām B.
⁶ vede B. ⁷ Simply || 9 || B, but (a) this contradicts the colophon to XII, 8; (b) there is no connexion with XII; (c) A, Weber's MS., Catal., II, 6, has XIII. Cf. J. R. A. S., 1908, pp. 380, 381.

B.* But this is all on f. 87, which is a recent restoration and is of no authority. The number
XV is given in the Berlin MS. to the Vamśa, which ends: *iti Śāṅkhāyanāranyake pañcadaśo the 'author' of the Āranyaka, i.e. Guṇākhyā; why Oldenberg (S.B.E., XXIX, 4, 5) should think the author of the Sūtras is meant I cannot understand. See also my Śāṅkhāyana Āranyaka, p. 72.

But tīrascīnarājī = snake occurs several times in the Atharvaveda (e.g. III, 27, 2), and the temptation to read °rājīḥ or rājī (as a parallel form) is very great).
